knew stones were being slung over him, and had been for months. Therefore he could not be taken to say he was not volens so far. But he did not know that the employers were swinging them over him with machinery that was not reasonably fit for the purpose (the first finding of the jury) and which was admittedly negligence on their part. Thus the defence of volentia must always be narrowly scrutinized to see exactly how far a man is volens or is not. As a rule, in the case of all the ordinary and known risks of his employment, he is volens, but when risks are superadded by negligence, it must be further shown that he also knew of such superadded risks, and also took them.

In contract a man's position may be more favourable than under the Act. In contract a man may say to his master, "My implied contract is to take all the risks of my employment, equally yours is to take all reasonable care. I know you are not doing so, but nevertheless, I will continue working for you; but note, if anything happens to me through your want of care, I shall look to you for damages." This was said and assented to in Yarmouth v. France, and on such lines would have abundantly satisfied that decision, and in general, very little evidence would be required to establish this modified term instead of the agreement to take all risks as the true contract between the parties, so the obiter in Smith v. Baker almost go to the length of saying that this really now is the term to be implied. But under the Employers' Liability Act, a workman's rights are rigid and are to be those of a stranger only and are purely in tort, and as such, no modification can be implied. Therefore so far as you can bring home to him knowledge that a duty owed to him is not being discharged, then so far he must be taken to waive its discharge. I am in the streets of London. I take all the perils of crossing—very serious nowadays—but I do not take the superadded perils of negligent driving. But a motor cab is being wildly, madly driven, and I choose to try to run past it, then I know of the added risk, and in taking it, clearly am volens. In tort the distinction between sciens followed by action and volens reduces to nothing. In contract sciens may be quite consistent with a master still remaining responsible for his own negligence. That he does, we may take it is very nearly the law, and it will take little to make the courts say that it actually is so in fact.

Sect. 1 in Detail.]—Note the overriding conditions in sect. 2, sub-s. 3.

Sub-s. 1.—By reason of a defect in the condition of the ways.]—This means a defect of a permanent or quasi-permanent nature, not merely an obstacle carelessly left in a roadway (McGiffin v. Palmer's Ship Building Co., (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 5; 52 L. J. Q. B. 25), but the way itself may be of a temporary character, e.g., a plank for mill hands to use (Bromley v. Cavendish, (1886) 2 T. L. R. 381). "In a shop where workmen are employed, any part of the shop which a workman is required, or it is his duty to traverse in the course of his employment, is a way" (Willets v. Watt, (1892) 2 Q. B. 92; 61 L. J. Q. B. 540).

If a man is permitted to use a dangerous way, but an alternative safe way is provided, he may be debarred from recovering (Prichard v. Lang, (1889) 5 T. L. R. 639).

A hatchway on a ship left open by a fellow servant did not constitute a defect within this section (McCarthy v. Bristol Shipowners' Co., (1883) 10 L. R. Ir. 384). See, however, James Nimmo & Co., Ltd. v. Connell, (1924) A. C. 595; 93 L. J. K. B. 147 (H. L.), where an accumulation of inflammable gas in a working place of a coal mine, otherwise of proper construction, was held by the House of Lords to be a "defect" within the meaning of this sub-section. Work being naturally dangerous, as when a ship is being built, may involve ways being dangerous without being defective (Forsyth v. Ramage, (1891) 18 R. 21). A ladder close to an open tank to be used when dark and without a light might be a defective way (Jamieson v. Russell, (1892) 19 R. 898).

Defect in the condition of the works, machinery, or plant.]—By works, completed works, not those in course of construction, are to be understood

Section 2 Notes.

(Howe v. Finch, (1887) 17 Q. B. D. 187). But a servant injured by a wall falling down, which was in the course of being pulled down was held entitled (Brannigan v. Robinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 344; 61 L. J. Q. B. 202), as similarly where a rotten floor in a building also being pulled down, gave way. A machine, not out of order, but constructively unfit for the purpose, may be defective (Heske v. Samuelson, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 30; 53 L. J. Q. B. 45; Paley v. Garnett, (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 52), or being used for a purpose foreign to its intention, e.g., a ladder used to support a scaffold, or a ladder supported against a piece of pipe instead of a wall (Cripps v. Judge, (1884) 13 Q. B. D. 583; 53 L. J. Q. B. 517, and Weblin v. Ballard, (1886) 17 Q. B. D. 122; 55 L. J. Q. B. 395).

A master is not bound to have the most up-to-date machine on the market if the one he has is reasonably fit for the purpose (Walsh v. Whiteley, (1888) 21 Q. B. D. 371; 57 L. J. Q. B. 586; Buller v. Birnbaum, 7 T. L. R. 287); but he must not expose his servants to unnecessary risks as by not fencing (Morgan v. Hutchings, (1890) 59 L. J. Q. B. 197); on the other hand, neither must a servant wilfully run into danger and then seek to make his employer liable (Martin v. Connah's Quay Alkali Co., (1884) 33 W. R. 216). A man has a right to assume his employer's tackle is sound, and is not bound to provide against possible defects, e.g., as by taking shelter if he might think a chain defective (Rooney v. Allen, (1883) 10 R. 1224). Machinery in itself not defective, but liable to be used by unskilled men, becomes constructively defective if they are likely to use it in such a way as to make it prove dangerous (Staunton v. Scrutton, (1893) 62 L. J. Q. B. 405). Of course, if a machine properly fit in itself becomes dangerous through the negligent user of a fellow servant, it will not be defective within the Act (Robbins v. Cubbitt, (1882) 46 L. T. 535, where a man was injured through a pail falling on him, due to the absence of the man who ought to have steadied it).

In this class of case the defence of volentia to which we have referred became one of increasing importance, but this we have discussed in defences to an action.

Along with the defect must also be proved the negligence as specified in the qualifying sect. 2, sub-s. 1, and when a wall was swaying dangerously, and the foreman at once stopped work, called in a proper contractor to make it secure, and when, after he had left it safe as he thought, the men returned and it fell on the plaintiff, it was held the master had been guilty of no negligence, either in person or by his foreman (Moore v. Gimson, (1889) 58 L. J. Q. B. 169). As a rule, the employment of a competent contractor to do work for an employer negatives negligence on his part, even if it proves defective (Kiddle v. Lovett, (1885) 16 Q. B. D. 605), and even if a master borrow plant, say a ladder, there is no presumption of negligence if it proves defective (Perry v. Brass, (1889) 5 T. L. R. 253). Note, this is the general rule as regards servants. As regards the general public it is subject to qualifications; e.g., an owner pulling down a dangerous building cannot escape all responsibility by simply employing someone else to do it for him (Hughes v. Percival, (1883) 8 Ap. Cas. 443; 52 L. J. Q. B. 719).

Sect. 1, sub-s. 2.—By reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has superintendence entrusted to him whilst in the exercise of such superintendence.]—This sub-section must be read with sect. 8 as follows: The expression "person who has superintendence entrusted to him" means a person whose sole or principal duty is that of superintendence and who is not ordinarily engaged in manual labour. This qualification does not apply to where a superintendent voluntarily and temporarily engages in manual labour (Ray v. Wallis, (1887) 3 T. L. R. 777); nor need the superintendent of a necessity have actual superintendence over the workman injured. Thus in Osborne v. Jackson, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 619, a bricklayer was at work near a scaffold which was being taken down by other men. The foreman helping them, handed a plank to a labourer, but owing to his being too far off he could not hold it, and through its falling the plaintiff was injured.

Section 2
Notes.

As a rule, one of a gang who himself works will not be a person within this section, even if he be the one to give directions (Shaffers v. General Steam Navigation Co., (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 356; 52 L. J. Q. B. 260, and Kellard v. Rooke, (1888) 21 Q. B. D. 367; 57 L. J. Q. B. 599); otherwise if he be a foreman (M'Monaghee v. Baird, (1881) 9 R. 364). In Race v. Harrison, (1893) 10 T. L. R. 92, a boy lost his fingers when cleaning a machine which the foreman told him to do, at the same time providing him with no proper scraper, and was held entitled.

1.—(3) By reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer to whose orders or directions the workman at the time of the injury was bound to conform, and did conform, where such injury resulted from his having so conformed.

The negligence is not confined to the order itself, nor is it necessary that conformity to the order should be the causa causans, but there must be an intimate connection between the negligence, the injury, and the conformity to the order (Wild v. Waygood, (1892) 1 Q. B. 783; 61 L. J. Q. B. 391). An order not given in a particular case may be presumed from a course of action where in similar cases orders have been given previously; as where a vanman has usually told a boy to help him to untie packages, and on one occasion he has been hurt through doing so, though without then receiving particular instructions (Millward v. M. R. Co., (1885) 14 Q. B. D. 68; 54 L. J. Q. B. 202). Where men of the same standing and when working at a job, one tells the other to do something, such order does not come within the section (Howard v. Bennett, (1889) 58 L. J. Q. B. 129). Orders to do a forbidden thing obviously do not come within the section. A man knows his duty is rather to disobey than to conform to them (Bunker v. M. R. Co., (1883) 47 L. T. 476). A man may be used merely as a medium to convey orders from the master. This does not constitute him one to whose own orders a man is bound to conform (Snowden v. Baynes, (1890) 25 Q. B. D. 193; 59 L. J. Q. B. 325).

1.—(4) By reason of the act or omission of any person in the service of the employer done or made in obedience to the rules or bye-laws of the employer, or in obedience to particular instructions given by any person delegated with the authority of the employer in that behalf.

Note this is to be read as qualified by sect. 2, sub-s. 2. This is a section that has not been largely used. Whalley v. Holloway, (1890) 62 L. T. 639, seems to be the only reported case where it has been relied upon, and then hopelessly.

1.—(5) By reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has the charge or control of any signal, points, locomotive engine, or train upon a railway.

The term railway applies to a temporary railway laid down by a contractor for the purposes of construction of works (Doughty v. Firbank, (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 358; 52 L. J. Q. B. 480); but a steam crane fixed in a trolley and propelled by steam on a set of rails is not a locomotive (Murphy v. Wilson, (1883) 52 L. J. Q. B. 524).

In Gibbs v. G. W. R., (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 208; 53 L. J. Q. B. 543, where it was the duty of "F" to clean and adjust the points, etc., of the defendants' line, and he did it negligently, it was held there was no evidence of control.

In Cox v. G. W. R., (1883) 9 Q. B. D. 106, a man in charge of a capstan worked by hydraulic power, set it in motion and, without giving the usual warning, sent some trucks along a line in a goods station and injured the plaintiff. Held, he had charge or control of a train (see also Robinson v. Watson, (1893) 20 R. 144, where a brake on a wagon was defective, but no duty to test was proved against the defendant, and the pursuer failed). In M'Cord v. Cammell, (1896) A. C. 57; 65 L. J. Q. B. 202, the question of fact as to control of a train was also involved.

Section 5.

Limit of sum recoverable as compensation.

3. The amount of compensation recoverable under this Act shall not exceed such sum as may be found to be equivalent to the estimated earnings during the three years preceding the injury, of a person in the same grade employed during those years in the like employment and in the district in which the workman is employed at the time of the injury.

This section prescribes a limit, not a measure of damages recoverable, and these have to be assessed once and for all (Mitchell v. Darley Main Colliery Co., (1886) 11 A. C. 127; 55 L. J. Q. B. 529). Up to this limit a workman is entitled to receive compensation for all loss sustained as if he were a stranger. Thus in Bortick v. Head, (1886) 53 L. T. 909, the plaintiff belonged to a class of workman whose average earnings in three years would have amounted to 169*l.* Anything up to 169*l.* the court held he would have been entitled to, and therefore when the jury gave 69*l.* as damages—60*l.* for loss sustained in the service of his employer, and 9*l.* for loss of overtime worked for someone else—he was held entitled to both.

Nor may the limit thus ascertained be exceeded. In Noel v. Redruth Foundry Co., (1896) 1 Q. B. 453; 65 L. J. Q. B. 330, the county court judge held that the 5*s.* a week which an apprentice received was nominal and gave 80*l.* compensation. The Divisional Court held this wrong, and decided that adventitious advantages such as tuition could not be included.

The principles on which the loss sustained is to be estimated are fully discussed in Phillips v. L. & S. W. R., (1879) 4 Q. B. D. 406, affirmed (1880) 5 Q. B. D. 78; 49 L. J. Q. B. 233. They include: Damages for loss of time and the expense of his cure; for pain and suffering; and for the loss of future profit or earnings; of these the measure is the difference between what the plaintiff might have earned and was likely to have earned if he had not been injured, and what he might earn and was likely to earn in his injured state. The injured man's own damages are not to be lessened on account of any insurance he holds (Bradburn v. G. W. R., (1875) L. R. 10 Ex. 1; 44 L. J. Ex. 9), though a different rule governs in case of death.

In case of death, the rights are provided for by the latter part of sect. 1, and are to be those of a stranger (see ante, under Lord Campbell's Act).

Limit of time for recovery of compensation.

4. An action for the recovery under this Act of compensation for an injury shall not be maintainable unless notice that injury has been sustained is given within six weeks and the action is commenced within six months from the occurrence of the accident causing the injury, or in case of death, within twelve months from the time of death: provided always that in case of death the want of such notice shall be no bar to the maintenance of such action if the judge shall be of opinion that there was reasonable excuse for such want of notice.

See under sect. 7.

Money payable under penalty to be deducted from com-
under Act.

5. There shall be deducted from any compensation awarded to any workman, or representatives of a workman, or persons claiming by, under, or through a workman in respect of any cause of action arising under this Act, any penalty or part of a penalty which may have been paid in pursuance of any other Act of Parliament to such workman, representatives, or persons in respect of the same cause of action; and where an action has been brought under this Act by any workman, or the representatives of any workman, or any persons claiming by, under, or through such workman, for compensation in respect of any cause of action arising under this Act, and payment has not previously been made of any penalty or part of a penalty under any other Act of Parliament in respect of the same cause of action, such workman, representatives, or persons shall not be entitled thereafter to receive any penalty or part of a penalty under any other Act of Parliament in respect of the same cause of action.

If a man has recovered penalties they are simply to be deducted under this section, but where a man has a remedy against two or more wrongdoers, and recovers against one, he cannot recover anything more from any one else, whether he sues such other for the same cause of action or a different cause, but arising out of the same wrongful act. In Wright v. London Omnibus Co., (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 271; 46 L. J. Q. B. 429, a cabman was injured through two 'bus drivers racing. They were summoned and fined, and had to pay him 10*l.* compensation. Afterwards, when he obtained a verdict against the 'bus company for nearly 200*l.*, judgment was entered for the defendants on the ground he had been already compensated. Following a dictum of Manisty, J., in Munday v. Thames Iron Works Co., (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 62; 52 L. J. Q. B. 119, a practice has grown up in county courts of not allowing any other cause of action to be joined with that under the Act. But the case of Yarmouth v. France, (1888) 19 Q. B. D. 647; 57 L. J. Q. B. 7, is only intelligible on the basis that rights both at common law as well as under the Act were taken into consideration.

6.—(1) Every action for recovery of compensation under this Act shall be brought in a county court, but may upon the application of either plaintiff or defendant, be removed into a superior court in like manner and upon the same conditions as an action commenced in a county court may by law be removed. Trial of actions.

(2) Upon the trial of any such action in a county court before the judge without a jury one or more assessors may be appointed for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of compensation.

(3) For the purpose of regulating the conditions and mode of appointment and remuneration of such assessors, and all matters of procedure relating to their duties, and also for the purpose of consolidating any actions under this Act in a county court, and otherwise preventing multiplicity of such actions, rules and regulations may be made, varied and repealed from time to time in the same manner as rules and regulations for regulating the practice and procedure in other actions in county courts.

"County court" shall with respect to Scotland mean the "Sheriff's Court" and shall with respect to Ireland mean "Civil Bill Court."

In Scotland any action under this Act may be removed to the Court of Session at the instance of either party in the manner provided by, and subject to, the conditions prescribed by section 9 of the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1877.

Section 6.

In Scotland the sheriff may conjoin actions arising out of the same occurrence or cause of action, though at the instance of different parties and in respect of different injuries.

Sub-s. 1.—In Munday v. Thames Iron Works Co., (1883) 10 Q. B. D. 59; 52 L. J. Q. B. 119, it was held no reason for removal that the plaintiff had given a defective notice and wished to consolidate his action under the Act with one he had commenced in the High Court on his master's common law liability. Nor is it a reason for removal that more than 50*l.* is likely to be recovered (McEvoy v. Waterford S. S. Co., (1885) 16 L. R. Ir. 291). Sect. 62 of the County Courts Act, 1888, entitles the defendant in any action of tort, when the claim exceeds a certain amount, and on certain conditions as to giving security for costs, etc., to remove the case to the High Court. Held by the Court of Appeal this section did not apply to actions under the Act (Claxton v. Lucas, 14 Q. B. D. 905). Application for certiorari is to a master in chambers on affidavit (Order LIV. r. 12).

In Bates v. Warner, (1889) 5 T. L. R. 582 (C. A.), where the defendant alleged he would not get a fair trial in the county court, and undertook to pay all extra costs incurred whether he won or lost, and after Lord Coleridge had been communicated with and had expressed his willingness to hear the case at the Chelmsford Assizes, he was allowed to have it removed.

Practice special to the Act.—Order XLIV. deals with the practice special to the Act subject to which the procedure is that of the county court.

Practitioners should remember that no appeal can be brought on any point unless it has been taken at the trial in the county court, and a note to that effect made by the judge (Smith v. Baker, (1891) A. C. 325; 60 L. J. Q. B. 683), as this somewhat differentiates from the more familiar procedure under the Workmen's Compensation Acts.

In case of death the above form can be readily altered, but this further clause must be added:—

Particulars under Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 4, should be attached, and should give the facts as to the names, ages, and relationship to the deceased of those claiming, as well as the pecuniary advantage they received, or were likely to receive, from him had he not been killed.

It will be observed that the above form only covers a master's statutory liability. If the draughtsman likes to allege personal negligence throughout, in addition, no harm will be done.

Section 7.

Mode of serving notice of injury.

7. Notice in respect of an injury under this Act shall give the name and address of the person injured, and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the date at which it was sustained, and shall be served on the employer, or if there is more than one employer, upon one of such employers.

The notice may be served by delivering the same to or at the residence or place of business of the person on whom it is to be served.

The notice may also be served by post by a registered letter addressed to the person on whom it is to be served at his last known place of residence or place of business; and if served by post, shall be deemed to have been served at the time when a letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of post; and in proving the service of such notice, it shall be sufficient to prove that the notice was properly addressed and registered.

Where the employer is a body of persons corporate or unincorporate, the notice shall be served by delivering the same at or by sending it by post in a registered letter addressed to the office, or if there be more than one office, any one of the offices of such body.

A notice under this section shall not be deemed invalid by reason of any defect or inaccuracy therein, unless the judge who tries the action arising from the injury mentioned in the notice shall be of opinion that the defendant in the action is prejudiced in his defence by such defect or inaccuracy and that the defect or inaccuracy was for the purpose of misleading.

Also read with this section, sect. 4.

Notice under the Act, except in case of death, is a condition precedent to recovering (Clarkson v. Musgrave, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 386; 51 L. J. Q. B. 525), and it must be in writing, and the courts cannot waive its being given, even where, as in Moyle v. Jenkins, (1881) 8 Q. B. D. 116; 51 L. J. Q. B. 112, the defendant visited the injured man when in hospital, and the matron wrote as to his condition. More, a notice should conform to the requirements of sect. 7, and where a notice by the plaintiff's solicitor referred to particulars, given verbally, it was held insufficient (Keen v. Millwall Dock Co., (1882) 8 Q. B. D. 482; 51 L. J. Q. B. 277).

But the notice is enough if it substantially gives the name and address of the person injured, and the cause and date of the injury. In Stone v. Hyde, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 76; 51 L. J. Q. B. 452, the notice only gave the date of the injury, and stated that the plaintiff was and had been for some time under treatment at a hospital for injury to his leg. Held, having regard to the saving clause it might pass. So in Clarkson v. Musgrave, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 396; 51 L. J. Q. B. 525, the notice stated as the cause the defendants' negligence in leaving a certain hoist in their warehouse unprotected, whilst the jury found it was their negligence in allowing the plaintiff, a young girl, to go into the hoist alone. Held notice sufficiently stated the cause of the injury.

In Carter v. Drysdale, (1883) 12 Q. B. D. 91; 53 L. J. Q. B. 557, the date was omitted, but the judge at the trial found it was not for the purpose of misleading, and it was held a defect that could be cured. So in Beckett v. Manchester Corporation, (1888) 52 J. P. 346, the omission of address and date was not held fatal; and in Previti v. Gatti, (1888) 58 L. T. 762, where the letter was not registered but was acknowledged, and where the date of the accident was stated as August 8th instead of August 9th, and the address and cause of injury omitted, it was also held good as a notice for the same reason. More, the court held its having been posted on August 19th was evidence of its having been received on the 20th. As regards delivery, this is in accordance with the Scotch case (McGowan v. Tancred, (1886) 13 R. 1033), where it was held if a notice be de facto received its mode of delivery is not material. But if sent by post on such a day that it could not possibly be received in time it will be bad (McDonagh v. McLellan, (1886) 13 R. 1800). In another case (Rathbone v. Ross, 35 S. J. 208), a workman who had been injured gave a notice addressed to Mr. Wm. Ross, but who in fact had been dead six months, his business being carried on by his trustee. Held it was sufficient. In case of death of the plaintiff, reasonable excuse for not sending notice is a question for the judge (Trail v. Kelman, (1887) 15 R. 4).

Section 7
Notes.

On the other hand, if the defendant wishes to avail himself of the want of notice, it being a special defence, he must file the usual five days' notice required by Order X. r. 10, County Court Rules, 1889 (Conroy v. Peacock, (1897) 2 Q. B. 6; 66 L. J. Q. B. 425).

Again, the action must be commenced within six months from the occurrence of the accident. This condition cannot be waived. In Clark v. Adams, (1885) 12 R. 1092, notice had been given by a former agent who had died. A new agent was ignorant of the notice, and brought action at common law and failed. Then he learnt notice had been given, and asked leave to amend the claim so as to bring it under the statute. Six months having elapsed it was held not competent to allow the amendment.

8. For the purposes of this Act unless the context otherwise Definitions.
requires—

The expression "person who has superintendence entrusted to him" means a person whose sole or principal duty is that of superintendence, and who is not ordinarily engaged in manual labour;

The expression "employer" includes a body of persons corporate or unincorporate.

A company acts by its directors acting in their capacity of directors, but their manager is only their servant and fellow-servant with the other employees of the company. It does not change the position that such manager has been appointed in pursuance of an Act of Parliament to that effect (Howells v. Landore Steel Co., (1874) L. R. 10 Q. B. 62; 44 L. J. Q. B. 25). It does not include a mine owner where a workman is employed by an independent contractor, merely because he has a statutory control over his mine (Marrow v. Flimby Coal Co., (1898) 2 Q. B. 588; 67 L. J. Q. B. 976; and Fitzpatrick v. Evans, (1902) 1 K. B. 505; 71 L. J. K. B. 302).

The expression "workman" means a railway servant and any person to whom the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, 38 & 39 Vict. applies. c. 90.

In the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 90), s. 10, a workman is thus defined:—

"The expression 'workman' does not include a domestic or menial servant but save as aforesaid means any person who being a labourer servant in husbandry journeyman artificer handicraftsman miner or other—wise engaged in manual labour whether under the age of twenty-one years or above that age has entered into or works under a contract with an employer whether the contract be made before or after the passing of this Act be expressed or implied oral or in writing and be a contract of service or a contract personally to execute any work or labour."

Section 8 Notes.

And sect. 13 of the same Act enacts:—

"This Act shall not apply to seamen or to Apprentices to the sea service."

Nor does it apply to apprentices paying a premium of more than 25*l.*, nor to servants of the Crown, as the Crown is never included unless specifically named (Attorney-General v. Hill, 2 M. & W. 160; 6 L. J. Ex. 105; 46 R. R. 542).

It is a question of fact for the jury whether a man is a workman or not within the definition (Pearce v. Lansdowne, (1893) 62 L. J. Q. B. 441), though perhaps the court in some cases may find a difficulty in explaining to them the meaning to be applied to the word "menial." In Dr. Johnson's Dictionary we find "menial" defined as "Belonging to the retinue or train of servants"; and it is derived from the Saxon "meiny," "many," or "mani," or the old French "mesnie."

Other definitions have been attempted, but this seems to harmonize most with the decisions in some early cases where its meaning was involved. Thus a gardener has been held to be a menial servant (Johnson v. Blenkinsop, (1841) 5 Jur. 870; 62 R. R. 865); so also a head gardener, receiving a salary of 100*l.* a year, with the right to take apprentices (Nowlan v. Ablett, (1826) 2 Cr. M. & R. 5; 4 L. J. Ex. 155); and a huntsman (Nicoll v. Greaves, (1864) 33 L. J. C. P. 259); and in another case a potman in a public-house has also been so held (Pearce v. Lansdowne, supra).

Again, the following, not being workmen as specified, and not being engaged in manual labour were held not within the Act:—A grocer's assistant (Bound v. Lawrence, (1892) L. R. 1 Q. B. 226; 61 L. J. M. C. 21); the driver of a tramcar (Cook v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co., (1887) 18 Q. B. D. 683; 56 L. J. Q. B. 309); and the conductor of an omnibus (Morgan v. London General Omnibus Co. (C. A.), (1883) 13 Q. B. D. 832; 53 L. J. Q. B. 352); but the driver of a cart and horse used by wharfingers is a workman within the Act (Yarmouth v. France, (1888) 19 Q. B. D. 647; 57 L. J. Q. B. 7).

The following have been held to be workmen within the Act: A potter's printer, paid by the piece, and employing and paying assistants (Grainger v. Aynsley, (1881) 6 Q. B. D. 182; 50 L. J. M. C. 48); a slater, paid by the piece, using his own tools and the materials of his master (Stuart v. Evans, (1882) 49 L. T. 138); and a fireman on a steam canal barge is not a seaman within the excepting clause 13, and is within the meaning of the section (Oates v. Monkland Steam Iron Co., (1884) 11 R. 579).

Commence- ment of Act.

9. This Act shall not come into operation until the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, which date is in this Act referred to as the commencement of this Act.

Short title.

10. This Act may be cited as the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, and shall continue in force till the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, and to the end of the then next session of Parliament, and no longer, unless Parliament shall otherwise determine, and all actions commenced under this Act before that period shall be continued as if the said Act had not expired.

Note.—Now made permanent. See Expiring Laws Act, 1922.

CHAPTER IV.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

The Workmen's Compensation Acts were passed to enable workmen to recover compensation for injuries, irrespective of whether or not they were caused by negligence, so long as they were accidents which arose out of and in the course of their employment. The first of these Acts was passed in 1897. This was a tentative Act and of very limited application. Then followed the Act of 1906, long known as the principal Act, which applied the principle to all classes of employment and to certain industrial diseases (since added to by various Orders of the Secretary of State).

Statutes increasing the compensation during war-time (known as the War Additions Acts) were passed in 1917 and 1919, but are now repealed.

Then followed the Act of 1923, increasing compensation and extending the principal Act in various respects.

In 1925 the whole of these Acts (with the exception of a few sections of the Act of 1923) were repealed and consolidated by the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, which is now the statute in force and follows below.

N.B.—This consolidating Act applies to all accidents at the present time, but where the accident happened before 1st January, 1924, the Acts of 1906 and 1923 are still applicable. These may be found fully set out in the Annual County Court Practice for 1926.

PART I.

COMPENSATION FOR INJURIES.

Right to Compensation.

Liability of employers to workmen for injuries.

1.—(1) If in any employment personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment is caused to a workman, his employer shall, subject as hereinafter mentioned, be liable to pay compensation in accordance with the provisions hereinafter contained:

“Any Employment.”—Jurisdiction.—This Act is limited to the ambit of the United Kingdom, e.g., it does not apply to a contractor employing a workman in Malta (Tomalin v. Pearson, (1909) 2 K. B. 61), nor to a workman lost on a ship when on his way to do work for his English employers abroad (Schwartz v. Indiarubber, etc., Telegraph Works, (1912) 2 K. B. 299), though in

Notes.

Krzus v. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 38, an alien widow living in Austria, of a workman (also an alien) killed in Canada, was held entitled under an Act with similar provisions (see also Baird v. Savage, 43 S. L. R. 370). See now sect. 36 as to aircraft, and sect. 35, sub-s.4, as to persons, not seamen, employed on ships.

"Personal Injury by Accident."—This is not limited to physical results, and nervous shock, etc., is probably included; e.g., where a man became incapacitated through seeing a fellow workman killed (Yates v. South Kirby, etc., Collieries, 3 B. 418. See Dulieu v. White & Sons (1901), 70 L. J. K. B. 837, (1901) 2 K. B. 669, in which case the decision of the Privy Council in Victorian Railways Commissioners v. Coultas, (1888) 57 L. J. P. C. 69 was not followed. See also Hambrook v. Stokes Bros., (1925) 1 K. B. 141; (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 435. Whether the shock must be fear of personal injury to oneself or may be a shock caused by apprehension of injury to others appears to be doubtful.

"Accident."—Onus of proof on applicant (Maxwell v. Ruabon Coal and Coke Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 36). When accident is admitted the arbitrator has no jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether there has been an accident or not (Rudge v. G. Young and Son, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 374). It has long been settled that an accident may be either external to the subject, e.g., a man injured by an explosion; or be purely subjective, as where a man unintentionally injures himself, e.g., by a strain. But whichever it is it must be traceable to a definite act at a definite time; but it need not be one accident incapacitating at once. A series of small accidents, such as scratches, eventually incapacitating for work if such accidents arise out of the employment, is sufficient (Selva v. Charles Burrell & Co., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 1340). See, however, Williams v. Guest, Keen & Nettlefolds, Ltd., (1926) 1 K. B. 497; 95 L. J. K. B. 676. In Alloa Co. v. Drylie, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 213, a pump in a coal mine broke down, water accumulated, the men quit work, it rose to their knees, one of them got pneumonia and died, and it was held through accident (compare Barbeary v. Chugg, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 174). In Brown v. John Watson, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 228, reversing Watson v. Brown, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 225, it was held that where an accident in a neighbouring shaft resulted in a delay in getting out of the mine, with the result a man had to stand waiting for the cage in a draught, and also got pneumonia and died, there was evidence of an accident directly affecting the man. See also Glasgow Coal Co., Ltd. v. Welsh, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 79. Contrast Lyons v. Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 235. It does not follow that the accident must be held to arise out of the employment (Lyons v. Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 235). Injury from disease not traceable to a definite act at a definite time is not injury from accident (Eke v. Hart-Dyke, (1910) 2 K. B. 677; Coe v. Fife Coal Co., (1909) S. C. 393; Martin v. Manchester Corporation, (1912) W. C. Rep. 289; Finlay v. Tullamore Union (Guardians), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 222). Contrast Grant v. Kynoch, (1919) A. C. 765. See also Raeburn v. Lochgelly Iron & Coal Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 637. The circumstances in which disease may be deemed an injury by accident was discussed in Scott v. Pearson, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 128 (the cattle ringworm case). Anthrax, according to facts, may or may not be traceable to such definite act (Sherwood v. Johnson, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 57); as also an injury from frost bite (Warner v. Couchman, (1912) A. C. 35); or injury from heat stroke; or disease caused by inhaling poisonous gases (Broderick v. L. C. C., (1908) 2 K. B. 807; Finlay v. Tullamore Union (Guardians), supra). In Morgan v. Zenaida, 2 B. 19, the "definite act" was due to exposed position; in Ismay v. Williamson, (1908) A. C. 437, to the suddenness of attack. See also M'Millan v. Singer Sewing Machine Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 70 (workman heated, chill, pleurisy; application dismissed); Martin v. Manchester Corporation, (1912) W. C.

Rep. (there must be a definite time and place); Swinbank v. Bell Bros., (1911) 5 B. W. C. C. 48; Miller v. Jenson & Nicholson, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 51; (the disease must be shown to be caused by the accident); Ritchie v. Kerr, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 297; Coe v. Fife Coal Co., (1909) S. C. 393; Spence v. Dodd, (1912) 5 B. 305; White v. Sheepwash, (1910) 3 B. 382; Walker v. Murrays, (1911) Sc. 825; Hayward v. West Leigh Colliery Co., (1915) A. C. 540; (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 235 (disease caused by an accumulation of facts); Maskery v. Lancs. Shipping Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 290 (delicate stoker's death in the tropics due to heat stroke). Contrast Pyper v. Manchester Liners, Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 301 (stoker's death from heat-stroke no "accident"). See also Dennis v. Midland Rail. Northern Counties Committee, (1921) 90 L. J. H. L. 144; 37 T. L. R. 623; 14 B. W. C. C. 71, where the facts showed no accident within the Act.

It may be held that though disease caused, e.g., a fall, but the injury was caused by the nature of the place in which the fall took place, such injury was injury by accident (M'Kendry v. Wright and Greig, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 33).

Intentional or Felonious Assault may in Some Cases be "Accident."—A free worker injured by strikers is not injured by accident (Murray v. Denholm, 48 S. L. R. 896); though a cashier murdered when travelling is (Nisbet v. Rayne and Burn, (1910) 2 K. B. 689). It was also held in Blake v. Head, (1912) W. C. Rep. 198, that a boy injured by a madman (his employer) was not entitled, though this decision seems doubtful. In Anderson v. Balfour, (1910) 2 Ir. R. 497, a gamekeeper while acting as such was attacked by poachers. Held that he had been injured by accident. The matter has now been settled by Trim Joint District School, etc. v. Kelly, (House of Lords) (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 359, which decided that accident includes premeditated injury intended by others, but not by the workman, and see Reid v. British and Irish Steam Packet Co., Ltd., (1921) 2 K. B. 319; 14 B. W. C. C. 20; and Parker v. Federal Steam Navigation Co., (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 664; 134 L. T. 137. But the "accident" must, of course, be incidental to the employment, and in most cases of premeditated injury the consequent incapacity through "injury by accident" would not be "injury by accident arising out of, etc." See, e.g., Clayton v. Hardwicke Colliery Co., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 343 (reversed on appeal to the House of Lords on the ground that there was some evidence to support the arbitrator's finding, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 33); Weekes v. Wm. Stead, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 434. Lee v. Breckman, (1928) 138 L. T. 610.

Suicide may Result from and has been Treated as "Accident."—Suicide while insane where the insanity is induced by the accident may be held to be an injury by accident arising out of, etc. But it would be necessary to give evidence of insanity. See, e.g., Grime v. Fletcher, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 250. Suicide will not be presumed (Furnivall v. Johnson's Iron and Steel Co., 5 B. 45). Of course all the links in the chain connecting injury with death must be proved (see, e.g., Withers v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., (1916) W. C. & I. 317).

If due to Unreasonable Conduct or New Intervening Cause may not amount to "Accident."—The law is easier to state than to apply. Whatever a man's condition and to whatever that condition is due, a man must act reasonably, having regard to that condition. He must do all that he reasonably can to perfect his recovery, and this whether his condition is due to accident or other cause. If he does so act reasonably—irrespective of whether the result proves he acted for the best or not—it is clear that the final consequence is as much due to the accident as if it had at once manifested itself. On the other hand if he acts unreasonably, takes no care, the consequences are not due to the accident, but to his own folly. The court may find as a fact that notwithstanding his want of care the same result would have taken place even had he been reasonable and careful, and then the accident may still be held the cause of consequences apparently most remote (Dunnigan v. Cavan; Thorburn v. Bedlington Coal Co., 5 B. 128). Arbitrators may find serious injuries developed from neglected trifling hurts to be due, not to the accident, but the neglect (see remarks, Court of Appeal, in Brady v. Can. Pac. R., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 479). An arbitrator need not necessarily refuse compensation immediately. Thus refusing to undergo a reasonable operation or treatment may debar the workman from recovering, but a suspensory or nominal award may in certain circumstances be made. See Wright v. Sneyd Collieries, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 354. The arbitrator can award so much as he finds due to the accident (Harwood v. Wyken, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 317). In M'Nally v. Furness, Withy & Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 717, where an injured man was sent to gaol for highway robbery, the court held that, since had he been at liberty to work he would be partially incapacitated, the mere fact that a collateral cause (viz., imprisonment) also prevented his working did not prevent his recovering compensation; and see Harwood v. Wyken Colliery, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 317.

But of course there must be incapacity due to the accident. If there is an intervening cause between accident and injury, e.g., workman's own carelessness, refusal to undergo operation, etc., the incapacity is not due to the accident.

It may happen that a supervening cause may be the cause of the incapacity, as where a man broke his arm and it was set so badly by an unqualified man he could not use it. It was held that such bad setting was in no way a necessary result of the accident, and he failed to recover (Humber Towing Co. v. Barclay, 5 B. 142), sed quære.

But when a lad hurt his knee, and went to a hospital, and there caught scarlet fever which attacked his knee, it was decided: "If the incapacity is the result of the accident, the chain of causation remains unbroken, although a fresh cause arising casually or uninvited by any special conditions of the workman may have aggravated the original injury" (Brown v. Kent, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 639). Note, in the first case, the man acted unreasonably, or as may be said, invited the further injury by going to an unqualified man. In Brown's case the boy did the very best he could. Had he deliberately gone to a friend's room sick with the fever, he also might have been said to have invited his own misfortune. A man's own conduct usually differentiates the two classes of cases; e.g., a seaman hurt his wrist, it was getting well. He went on shore, returned the worse for liquor, had a fight, it was hurt again, and he could not recover (Nelson v. Allan Bros., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 532). Submitted that the test is, did the workman act reasonably? (see Molamphy v. Sheridan and Others, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 19; Walsh v. Locke & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 95).

If the result of an accident remain it is no answer that a concurrent cause by disease or a second accident would have caused the incapacity. For even if true, the result of the first accident would still be found in diminished earning capacity; e.g., a man might be earning 40s. a week and be entitled to 20s. a week compensation. Partially incapacitated, he might only be able to earn 20s. a week, when if again injured, he would only be entitled to 10s. a week compensation. Thus the result of his first accident is still found in his being reduced from a 40s. to a 20s. a week man (Harwood v. Wyken, and M'Nally's case, supra).

"Accident," when presumed.]—There are cases where, direct proof being wanting, an accident has to be inferred (Proctor v. "Serbino" (Owners), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 425; (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 30). The leading case is

Notes.

Mitchell v. Glamorgan Coal Co., 9 W. C. C. 16. Here a miner injured his finger, and died from blood poisoning. It was unexplained how he injured it. He may have told his wife or doctor, but their evidence would not be admissible. But it was proved he left home and reached the mine with it all right, and that when he again reached home it was crushed. From these facts was inferred that he had been (1) injured by accident, and (2) when at work, as the nature of his injuries was more consistent with what might have happened to him then rather than when on his way home. But note this case does not justify mere guessing nor mere deciding on probabilities. Facts must be proved from which the alleged accident may be inferred (Howe v. Fernhill Collieries, (1912) W. C. Rep. 408). "For inference, there is a fact which leads to the inference; in guessing, there is no fact to lead" (Buckley, L.J., in Fleet v. Johnson, (1913) W. C. Rep. 149).

Stapleton v. The Dinnington Main Colliery Co., (1912) W. C. Rep. 376, is a valuable illustration of the kind of evidence agreed to warrant such inference. Here a miner complained of having been hurt, a thing a witness could see was the case, who then went to the place where he had been working and saw that a piece of coal three or four pounds in weight had fallen there, and the doctor agreed from what the witness saw that such a piece of coal falling on a man's foot would cause the injury complained of. Again in Bateman v. Albion Combining Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 18, a workman was injured by the fall of a lid of a barrel from a window, no evidence was adduced to show why the lid fell. It did not merely fall perpendicularly, but must have had a considerable horizontal movement when it left the window. Held, that the workman had failed to show that it was an accident arising out of, etc.

"Accident" as Contributing Cause.]—A subsequent incapacity is not necessarily to be regarded as due to another accident; the question is not whether the other accident is a contributing cause of the incapacity but whether the incapacity was caused by the accident (Noden v. Galloways, Ltd., (1912) 1 K. B. 46). See also Hutchinson v. Kiveton Park Colliery Co., Ltd., (1926) 1 K. B. 279; 95 L. J. K. B. 531. As to the burden of proof, see Comery v. New Hucknall Coll. Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 63. An accident is no less an accident because it would not have happened or there would have been no ill results had there been no other accident or diseased condition (Borland v. Watson Gow, 49 Sc. L. R. 10; Laverick v. William Gray & Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 173). Of course the incapacity must be due to the accident and not solely to the diseased condition. Which is the cause is a question of fact, and if there is evidence to support the arbitrator's finding it cannot be reversed. See, e.g., Legge v. Nixon's Navigation Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 306; M'Ardle v. Swansea Harbour Trust, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 448; Beare v. Garrod, (1915) ibid. 438; Stanley v. William Ayrton & Co., (1919) W. C. & I. 266.

Where Contributing Cause is Disease.]—In the first place it is to be observed that whether accident or disease caused the injury is a question of fact, and the arbitrator's finding, if reasonable, will not be upset (Woods v. Wilson, Sons & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 285). The arbitrator has no right to examine the man privately (Earle's, etc. v. Walker, (1917) W. C. & I. 54).

An accident causing severe mental shock, followed by depression and suicide, may be within the Act, Marriott v. Maltby Main Colliery Co., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 349.

In many cases the disease is really the cause of the so-called accident, as but for it no accident of any sort would have happened. This has occurred again and again when heart disease, and not the employment, has been the cause of the misadventure. Hence this class of case divides into two: (a) where there has been an undoubted accident, and (b) where there has been what we can only term a "fictional" accident.

An accident is no less an accident because, owing to diseased tissues, the consequences are most serious and unexpected. (But even here if the injury was due to the disease and would have resulted apart from the accident compensation may not be given (Doolan v. H. Hope & Sons, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 121)). Thus in Hensey v. White, (1900) 1 Q. B. 481, a man, trying to start a wheel which stuck, strained himself. Owing to his diseased condition this caused a rupture of blood vessels which killed him. Other men who helped and exerted themselves were not even hurt, but this did not affect the fact he had been clearly injured by an accidental strain. But cases under (b) are full of doubt. Of these the leading cases are Fenton v. Thorley & Co., (1903) A. C. 443; 72 L. J. K. B. 787; and Clover and Clayton v. Hughes, (1910) A. C. 242, where anything like an accident never happened. The facts in the latter case were as follows: A man in the last stage of heart disease fell dead when screwing a nut on a bolt. He was doing an ordinary act in an ordinary way, and yet was found to have met his death by accident. The logic of this decision was preserved by the finding that the screwing on the nut caused an extra strain, which extra strain ruptured an artery, which rupture caused the death. This case having passed the House of Lords, mainly that they would not disturb an arbitrator's finding of fact, is unexceptional as regards its law. It really does not say more than in the case of a real accident, viz., a man brings his disability with him and his employer shall not be heard to say, "But for the diseased condition, no ill results would have happened from the accident relied on." For note, the fiction of an accident neither is, nor can be dispensed with, nor is it established by a man merely falling dead (Barnabas v. Bersham, 4 B. 119). See also McFarlane v. Hutton Bros. (Stevedores), Ltd., (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 357; 20 B. W. C. C. 222. And further, if an interval of time elapses between the "fictional" accident and the death, as in Hawkins v. Powell's Tillery S. C. Co., (1911) 1 K. B. 988, where an old man, who might have strained himself in the morning, died of angina pectoris in the evening, the court may hold the connection between the accident and the death not proved. See also Lancaster v. Blackwell Colliery Co., (1920) 89 L. J. K. B. 609, a re-affirmment by the House of Lords that facts found by the county court judge cannot be set aside if there is any evidence on which they could be found. And even when death takes place after what has been an undoubted accident, still it must be proved that it was due to such accident and not to the disease. E.g., a driver fell from his bus, and it could not be shown whether heart disease caused the fall or whether the fall aggravated the disease. Here was such failure of proof (Thackway v. Conelly, 3 B. 37). But an accident that starts into active malignity from which a man suffers falls within the ordinary rule. Where a man died from apoplexy brought on by the exertion of running to telephone for a doctor (it being his duty so to telephone), it was held in Aitken v. Finlayson, Bousfield & Co., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 398, that his dependants could recover.

Section 1
Notes.

The arbitrator should make a specific finding as to the nature of the injuries, at least where this is disputed (Montgomery v. The Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 86).

Arising out of and in the course of the employment.—In considering the meaning of these words "arising out of and in the course of" (by far the most important words in the Act and on which endless decisions have been given) it must now never be overlooked that for practical purposes the effect to be given to these words depends upon the consideration whether the accident in question did or did not result in death or serious and personal disablement. An accident which otherwise would not have arisen out of and in the course of the employment is by the provisions of the Act itself to be deemed to do so though it is attributable to the "serious and wilful misconduct" of the workman or though it may arise from the workman acting in contravention of any statutory or other regulation applicable to his employment or of any orders given by or on behalf of his employer or that he was acting without instructions from his employer if such act was done by the workman for the purposes of and in connection with his employer's trade or business. Most of the cases which deal with this extended statutory meaning of the words "arising out of and in the course of" are considered later in notes to sect. 1 (1) (b) and sect. 1 (2), but as cases often involve the general principle as well as the statutory exceptions engrafted upon it, both classes of cases should be considered by any one wishing to ascertain whether a particular case does or does not arise out of and in the course of the employment.

General cases on the words "arising out of and in the course of."—A double condition is in these words. The applicant must prove both that the accident arose out of, and in the course of the employment. The words are used conjunctively, not disjunctively, not as meaning out of, that is to say, in the course of. An applicant fails if no evidence be given or if it be as consistent with one view of the facts as another (Pomfret v. L. & Y. Rail. Co., (1903) 2 K. B. 718. Former findings of other tribunals, though judicial, are not available to prove this so the finding at a coroner's inquisition as to the cause of death is inadmissible.

If a man was doing what he was employed to do, even though in a wrong, negligent or forbidden way, the accident still arises out of the employment; on the other hand, if he was even meritoriously doing something he was not employed to do, the accident does not arise out of his employment. See now sect. 1 (2) of present Act.

The first principle involved cannot be better shown than in Harding v. Brynddu Colliery Co., (1911) 2 K. B. 747. Here a collier was set to drill a hole from above a seam in order to draw off dangerous gases which rendered the seam unsafe. He asked if he might go into the seam to see if his drill was running straight and was told, No! But he went all the same and was suffocated in consequence. Here, though disobedient, he was still about the work he was employed to do, viz., drilling the hole. The accident arose out of his trying to do such work, and as disobedience was no defence, his employers were held liable.

This principle that if the workman is really doing what he was employed to do, even though negligently or in a forbidden way, the accident still arises out of the employment, was finally decided by the House of Lords in Estler Bros. v. Phillips, (1922) 91 L. J. (H. L.) 470.

All the cases cited below as to breach of statutory rules or orders must now be read in the light of sect. 1 (2) of the present Act.

These cases are not overruled and the principles on which they were decided will still apply to all cases where the accident does not result in death or serious and permanent disablement.

This is shown in such cases as Kerr v. Baird, 48 S. L. R. 646, where a miner was injured through firing a shot which it was no part of his business to do. As the Lord President said, "He was arrogating to himself duties which he was neither engaged nor entitled to perform." See also Pugh v. Dudley (Earl), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 265; Anderson v. Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 71; Sundmore v. London and Thames Haven Oil Wharves, (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 116.

So in Plumb v. Cobden Flour Mills, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 48, a man employed to stack bags, for his own convenience, improvised a revolving shaft as a pulley to raise them with and was injured. Held, he was employed to work in a specified way; if he chose to work in another, he was not doing what he was employed to do; and it has now been definitely decided by the House of Lords in A. G. Moore & Co. v. Donnelly and other cases heard and decided with that case, reported (1921) 1 A. C. p. 932; 90 L. J. K. B. 49; 37 T. L. R. 198, that the contravention of the coal mining regulations places the miner outside the sphere of his employment, and he cannot recover if injured in consequence of such contravention. See also, to the same effect, Bourton v. Beauchamp, (1920) A. C. 1001; 89 L. J. K. B. 1205; followed by Court of Appeal in Whiddert v. Chislet Colliery, Ltd., (1920) 89

L. J. K. B. 1209; Howells v. Bedwas Navigation Colliery Co., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 10; Cook v. London and South Western Ry. Co., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 102. Compare Brinckman v. Harris, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 45; Chinnock v. Potter & Clark, Ltd., ibid., 55; Payne v. Curtis & Son, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 501; Leggett v. Gibbons, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 154; Gaunt v. Babcock & Wilcox, Ltd., (1918), W. C. & Ins. Rep. 10; Armitstead v. Humber, etc., Engineering Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 342; Jefferey v. John Mowlem & Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 328. Although the above principle is so well established, the Court construes the statutory rule with great strictness. Ruck & Moore v. Stockingford Colliery Co., (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 221; (1923) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 43, show the extreme rigidity with which the courts construe the Coal Mines Rules. Compare, however, Hawkrigde v. Howden Clough Collieries Co., (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 642, a very similar case, where it was held that the statutory provision as to clear space on a haulage road between the tubs and the side applied to the road as a whole and not only to that part of the road where the accident occurred. Again, in Coltress Iron Co. v. Baillie, (1922) 1 A. C. 170; 91 L. J. (H. L.) 75, where the rule declared that a person firing a shot in a mine which does not explode shall not approach the place until after a certain time, it was held this did not prevent a workman from recovering compensation who was engaged in the operation, and who approached the place before the expiration of the time; the reason being, that he was not the "person firing the shot." The workman lighting the fuse is the person alluded to in the rule as "firing the shot," and if he returns to the firing place before the expiration of the statutory time and is injured, he cannot recover. It is no defence for him to say that he did not think the fuse had lighted (Costello v. Addie & Sons Collieries, Ltd., (1922) 1 A. C. 164; 91 L. J. (H. L.) 72). Where the employer had added to the statutory regulation a further regulation to the effect that no person should on any pretext return to the place before the expiration of the prescribed interval of time, this further regulation was held to be binding, and a workman, not being the person "firing the shot" who with knowledge of this further regulation approached the place was held to be acting outside the scope of his employment (McIntosh v. Arden Coal Co., (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 264). This is an important decision, but will have little or no effect in the future owing to sect. 1 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925. But the mere fact that he is doing his work in a dangerous manner does not debar him from recovering (Bullworthy v. Glanfield, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 221; Partridge v. Whiteley, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 56; Crooke v. Greenwood and Bailey, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep., p. 198; Gibbins v. British Dyes, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 302; Clarke v. Anderson & Anderson, (1919) W. C. & I. 9). Contrast Russell v. A. & G. Murray, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 532. Consider also Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Highley, (1917) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 179. But if disobedience to an order extends the scope of the employment, i.e., adds a risk, and not merely a danger, and it is that risk which induces the accident, it may be as in Herbert v. Samuel Fox & Co. Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 154, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 1, that the resulting injury was not caused by an accident arising out of, etc. See also Fife Coal Co. v. Braid, (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 225, and Leivers v. Barber, Walker & Co., (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. 933. These cases of added risk should be very narrowly viewed. They generally resolve themselves into cases of a workman doing something quite apart and distinct from what he was employed to do. See, e.g., Hopley v. Pool, Lorrimer and Tabberer, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 280; Palmer v. Harrods, Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 213 (where a man used a parcels lift to go from floor to floor). Phillimore, L.J. in the latter case (at p. 215) suggested a useful distinction when he differentiated between incurred risks and added risks. Contrast Sexton v. Hosford, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 216; Marshall v. Joseph Rodgers & Sons, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 39. If he be merely doing his work in a wrong way he can recover (Corbett v. H. S. Pitt & Co., (1915)

Section 1
Notes.

W. C. & Ins. Rep. 295). Entering a train or a tramcar while in motion has been held to add a risk (Jibb v. Chadwick, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 342; Byrne v. Larrinaga S.S. Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 319). A workman in attempting to do so does not, however, necessarily go beyond the limits of his employment (Guest v. Gaston & Co., (1927) 1 K. B. 1; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 759). Compare Baker v. Bradford (Earl), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 576; affirmed, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 177; Wilson v. L. & N. W. Ry., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 172; Stevens v. L. & S. W. Ry. (ibid.) 126; Maydew v. Chatterley-Whitfield Collieries, Ltd., (1917) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 277.

A general direction "to find a job" might, of course, considerably extend the scope of the employment (Lane v. W. Lusty & Son, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 326). The scope would also probably be extended by a foreman saying that the workman would be dismissed if something happened, and the workman took the risk to prevent that thing happening or being discovered. See McNally v. Bootle Jute Factory Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 64.

Difficult questions arise when a man, doing what he is employed to do, is injured by an act not material to the employment. Still the true question seems to be, Was he injured through doing something he was substantially employed to do? An unsettling case and a somewhat doubtful one is M'Laughlin v. Anderson, 48 S. L. R. 349, where a driver of a traction engine dropped his pipe, and jumping down to recover it, fell, and was killed, and his widow recovered. Had he dropped a tool it would have been clear. Compare Evans v. Holloway, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 75, where a driver was injured while altering a seat to give a fellow-workman a lift. Held, that the accident arose out of and in the course of, etc. Watkins v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefold, (1912) W. C. Rep. 150, raises a similar difficult point. Here employers provided a train for their men. Fifty yards before it arrived at a platform one got on the footboard, fell, and was injured. The court held, substantially he was doing something within his contract of employment, viz., being carried by the train. Buckley, L.J., held he was not, viz., he was riding on the footboard. Contrast Price v. Tredegar Iron and Coal Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 295. A man may be within the "margin" of his employment while on his way to work along his employer's private road if such road be open to workmen. See Nicol v. Young's Paraffin Light, etc., Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 72. Where a man is employed to do work in place A. he is still entitled to compensation if injured in place B. if there is evidence to show that he went to place B. in connection with his work at place A. (Robert v. George Trollope, etc., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 269; Corlett v. L. & Y. Ry., (1919) W. C. & I. 2; Wm. Baird & Co., Ltd. v. McGraw, (1920) 89 L. J. K. B. 188, where workman was waiting for his pay in a place where it was reasonable for him to wait, and Matthews v. McClure & Sons, Ltd., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 510, where a girl, directed to wait in a room where there was running machinery, left the safe place in which she was sitting at the invitation of another girl to come and eat an apple with her, and was injured by the machinery. In each of these two last mentioned cases the workman recovered. They are somewhat difficult to reconcile with Plumb v. Cobden Flour Mills, ante, p. 1280. See also Jones v. Ynysarwed Colliery Co., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 113). But such an act must be reasonably incidental to the employment. Thus where a carter went along a railway line where he had no business to be in order to get a loading permit it was held in Morris v. Rowbottom, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep., p. 67, that the accident did not arise out of, etc. Where a man is employed to do work A. but it is the practice also to do occasionally work B. and there is no rule against it, and if it were not done the works generally would be inconvenienced, and the workman is injured while doing work B. he can recover (Robson v. Wm. Baird & Co., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 40).

Cases of men injured going to or from work turn frequently on the following principle laid down by the Master of the Rolls in Whittall v. Staveley Iron and Coal Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. Rep. at p. 205. "If the circumstances are such that, either expressly or by implication, you must hold that the workman was entitled, as against his employer, to use a particular way over his employer's land, or over somebody else's land, in respect of which the employer has for the purpose of the contract of service obtained a right, then it is an implied term of the contract that the man should be there, and being there is part of his employment, and an accident happening there arises out of and in the course of the employment." See further, as to such cases, infra (illustrative cases).

Where a commercial traveller went on a journey to a town on his route for his own convenience and was found dead on the rails and it appeared that shortly before he was drunk, it was held that the accident did not arise out of, etc. (Renfrew v. R. & J. M'Crae, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 195). So where a man was knocked down by a train when crossing the line by walking over the rails instead of crossing by the bridge (Pritchard v. Torkington, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 271). Compare L. & Y. Ry. v. Highley, (1917) W. C. & I. 179, a decision of the House of Lords which renders Fox v. Rees and Kirby, (1916) W. C. & I. 339, doubtful. The fact that a workman resorts to a dangerous route instead of to a safe one, and the choice is made while engaged in the employment of the master, and no definite prohibition has been made, the workman may recover (Rossiter v. Commissioners, etc., of Waterford, (1920) W. C. & I. 67). Where a scene shifter at a theatre was injured whilst doing the work of a baggage man for his own profit, it was held that the accident did not arise out of his employment as scene shifter (Huscroft v. Bennett, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 9). Where a boots, whose duty it was to await trains, fell on the rails it was held that the accident arose "out of" (Blake v. Ramsay, (1917) W. C. & I. 84). Interruption of employment does not occur every time the workman stops industrial work, and it has been held that an accident occurring while the workman was waiting for the man who could give him his pay ticket arose out of and in the course of the employment (M'Graw v. W. Baird & Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 359).

Although breach of a rule made by the employer himself may make the accident not one "arising out of," the rule must be clear and consistently enforced. If the rule says one thing and the practice is another, it is some evidence that it has been abandoned. Of course as regards statutory rules and requirements, all parties know that these cannot be varied, and ignorance of them is of no avail (Dobson v. United Collieries, 43 S. L. R. 260), subject now of course to the provisions of sect. 1 (2) of the present Act.

A workman who does a thing prohibited under penalties by a statutory rule is not acting within the sphere of his employment (Matthews v. Pomeroy, (1919) W. C. & I. 194; compare Maydew v. Chatterley-Whitfield Collieries, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 32; Bourton v. Beauchamp, (1919) W. C. & I. 137; Robertson v. Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., (1919) W. C. & I. 229). If a rule is disregarded, it is prima facie strong evidence a man was doing what he was not employed to do, e.g., a colliery boy riding in a tub when not allowed to (Barnes v. Nunnery Colliery Co., (1912) A. C. 44); but doing a thing in breach of a rule or carelessly or negligently or even disobediently does not necessarily debar the workman from recovering (Blair & Co., Ltd. v. Chilton, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 283; M'Guire v. Gabbott, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 363). If the disobedience adds a risk, distinct from those arising from the employment, which leads directly to the injury the man may not recover (Herbert v. Samuel Fox & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 154; (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 1). Where, however, a workman, while actually doing his work in the course of his employment, meets with an accident, it has been held by the Privy Council that the onus is on the employer to show that the workman himself added a peril or did something which took his action outside the scope of his employment, so that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of the employment within the meaning of sect. 1 (1) of the Act (A. G. Moore & Co. v. Barkey, (1924) 93 L. J. P. C. 63).

Section 1 Notes.

(1923) A. C. 790). A man may, however, still be doing what he was employed to do, though most outrageously careless or stupid (Bullworthy v. Glanfield, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 221). Where there is a breach of a rule the workman may still recover (Sanderson v. H. Wright, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 177). It largely (perhaps entirely) depends on whether the rule limits the ambit of employment or merely defines the modus operandi, ibid. See also M'William v. G. N. of Scotland Ry. (1914), W. C. & Ins. Rep. 135; Jackson v. Denton Colliery Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 91; Hopley v. Pool, Lorrimer and Tabberer, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 280; Corbett v. H. S. Pitt & Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 295; Wardle v. H. G. Enthoven & Sons, Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 18; Foulkes v. Roberts, (1919) W. C. & I. 354.

As regards statutory rules properly posted, a man cannot be heard to say he did not know of them (Dobson v. United Collieries, 43 S. L. R. 260); but see with reference to this and all the cases cited, sect. 1 (2) of present Act, infra.

"Arising out of" on an emergency.—In exceptional cases a man may do a thing not within the letter of his contract of service, but within the spirit of it as in cases of emergency, e.g. stopping a runaway horse in his master's interest (Rees v. Thomas (1899) 1 Q. B. 1015); but still he can only recover on the principle that he was doing what he was employed expressly or impliedly to do.

"Arising out of" when due to larking.—This obviously is foreign to the employment altogether and even an innocent workman so injured by another cannot recover (Armitage v. L. & Y. Rail. Co. (1902) 2 K. B. 178) (note however the case of Clayton v. Hardwick Coll. Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 33); but if a workman properly doing his work is injured by the larking of a stranger, and his employment lends itself to such larking, e.g., an engine driver going through a bridge from which little boys like to drop stones, he can recover (Challis v. L. & S. W. Rail. Co., (1905) 2 K. B. 154). Whether the injury was caused by larking or arose out of and in the course of the employment is a question of fact and the arbitrator's decision will not be upset if there be evidence to support it (Durrant v. Smith, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 282; Sambrook v. New Sharlton Colliery, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 284). Payment of compensation in ignorance that the injury was caused by larking does not estop the employer from raising this defence (Harrison v. Featherstone, (1917) W. C. & I. 74).

"Arising out of" where death unexplained.—Where a workman is found dead in the employment and cause not known, there is a presumption that the death was not self inflicted, this being the ordinary presumption against crime, but there is no presumption that the death arose "out of" the employment. The relatives before they can recover, have still to prove this. Difficult questions occur especially where seamen are missing or found drowned, and no direct evidence of the accident is available. To entitle dependants to recover, they must prove (1) facts from which it can be inferred that at the time of his death, the deceased was doing what he was employed to do; and (2) facts from which it can be inferred that such employment would take him into the danger from which his death resulted. Both propositions must be proved. A seaman's contract of employment covers periods of leisure as well as periods of active duty, but during the former there is usually nothing to take him into a danger area. In Swansea Vale v. Rice, (1912) A. C. 238, the inferred facts were that a mate on duty fell overboard through being giddy, and his dependants recovered; but in Bender v. Zent, (1909) 2 K. B. 41, it was only proved deceased went on deck for air, and they failed. In Lee v. Stag Line, (1912) W. C. Rep. 3, it was well held that in the tropics a fireman rightly went on deck for air, but the weak part of the case was its not being shown that this necessarily took him into danger; whilst in Burwash v. Leyland, (1912) W. C. Rep. 400, it was held a cook's employment at his galley could not have taken him into danger.

Section 1
Notes.

But against this was the fact that the ship was rolling and the weather bad, and it might well have been held in such a case a seaman's contract of employment, even during the leisure period, took him into danger. The point, however, was not argued, and remains open for decision. The cases on the question of disappearance of seamen at sea were reviewed in Lendrum v. Ayr S.S. Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. p. 438; Proctor v. "Serbino" (Owners), (1915), W. C. & Ins. Rep. 425; (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 30. Compare Rourke v. Holt & Co., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 7. As regards seamen on shore, see, further, "IN THE COURSE OF"; Carnaby v. S.S. "Bromsgrove", (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 83.

Where a man found dead within the ambit of his employment or close to his employment, the whole circumstances must be considered, and the circumstances themselves may raise an inference that the death arose whilst he was doing what he was employed to do, e.g., a man whose duty it was to start machinery and who was found dead under revolving shafting (McNicholas v. Dawson, (1899) 1 Q. B. 773), see also Stroud v. Bath Gas Light & Coke Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 496; a man who was being carried from his work and who fell out of a carriage when apparently putting a basket on a rack (Pomfret v. L. & Y. Rail. Co., (1903) 2 K. B. 718); a policeman whose duties took him all over the company's premises and who was killed on a siding (Grant v. Glasgow and S. W. Rail. Co., 45 S. L. R. 128); a carpenter employed at work on a barge who fell into the water on a dark night while crossing a dock quay not open to the public (J. Stewart & Son (1912), Ltd. v. Longhurst, (1917) W. C. & I. 305; compare Armstrong v. Gregson & Co., ibid., p. 226); and a mate who lived on board ship when in dock and was found drowned, and near his body on a jetty was some food he had obviously been obtaining (Richardson v. Avonmore, 5 B. 34). Contrast Renfrew v. R. & J. McCrae, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 195; Booth v. Leeds and Liverpool Canal Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 310. The evidence must lead to something more than a mere surmise or guess. It must go to prove definite connection between employment and accident (Kettle v. McKay and Ryland, (1916) W. C. & I. 297). If a seaman is drowned by falling from a quay when returning to his ship his dependants must show that he was running a risk not common to everybody (Craig v. Cormack, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 394). See also Pocock v. Edwards & Son, (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 95.

Cases of "arising out of" where the occurrence was only casually connected with the employment.—A man is doing what he was employed to do and is injured. Still he must prove the accident arose out of the employment (or out of a contractual obligation connected with his employment. See and consider Philbin v. Hayes, (1918) W. C. & I. p. 194). The murder of a colliery cashier travelling with wages (Nisbet v. Rayne, (1910) 2 K. B. 689), and a gamekeeper injured by poachers (Anderson v. Balfour, 3 B. 588), have been held to arise out of the employment (these cases rather turn, however, on the meaning of the term "injury by accident"); but otherwise a free worker or so-termed blackleg attacked by strikers (Murray v. Denholme, 48 S. L. R. 896; see, however, now Trim Joint District School v. Kelly, (1914), W. C. & Ins. Rep. 359), or a carter attacked by a drunken rowdy (Mitchinson v. Day Bros., (1913) W. C. Rep. 324), doubted in Simpson v. Sinclair, (1917) W. C. & I., at p. 169. See also Parker v. Federal Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 664; 134 L. T. 137. Absence of causal relation may prevent an innocent workman injured by his fellows from recovering. For example, a maid injured by a ball playfully thrown at her by the nurse in the same house failed to recover (Wilson v. Laing, 2 B. 118). Then there is the well known case of a cockchafer flying into the face of a sempstress sitting at an open window (Craske v. Wigan, (1909) 2 K. B. 635). Compare Griffiths v. Robins, (1917) W. C. & I. 44; and see Heathcote v. Grimsby Cordage Co., Ltd., (1920) W. C. & I. 27 (a girl combing her hair, a usual practice with spinners while so employed, accident not "out of"). More recently there occurred the case of a sailor who drank a solution of caustic soda which he thought was water put out to cool. It was held in the House of Lords that the resulting injury was not the result of an accident arising out of the employment (Hutchison v. M'Kinnon, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 17). Equally failed a sailor who injured himself through his drunken state (Frith v. "Louisianian," (1912) 2 K. B. 155). The principle that when the real effective cause of the accident was the drunken condition of the workman the accident does not arise out of the employment, was finally settled by the House of Lords in Thomson & Co. v. Anderson (or Scrimgeour), (1922) 91 L. J. (H. L.) 87, in which Frith's Case (supra), was approved. See Murphy and Sandwith v. Cooney, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 44; Nash v. "Rangatira" (Owners), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 490; 83 L. J. K. B. 1496. It is thought that Frazer v. Riddell, (1914) 7 B. W. C. C. 841, was wrongly decided. Frith's Case, Murphy's Case, Nash's Case, and the Scotch decision in Renfrew v. R. & J. McCrae, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 195, were distinguished, however, in Williams v. Llandudno Coaching and Carriage Co., (1915) 8 B. W. C. C. 143, which case must now be regarded as of doubtful authority. In Cook v. Manvers Main Colliery, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 278, where a man went for his own convenience to a dangerous part of the mine, it was held that a consequent accident did not arise out of his employment or rather that his dependants had failed to discharge the onus of proving that it did. Contrast Fearnley v. Bates and Northcliff, Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 207.

Cases of "arising out of" where resulting from a risk common to the public in general.]—See the leading case of Dennis v. White & Co., (1917) W. C. & I. 247.

Formerly the leading cases on either side of the line were Andrew v. Fails-worth, (1904) 2 K. B. 32, and Warner v. Couchman, (1912) A. C. 35. In the former case a workman while employed upon a building some thirty feet high was struck by lightning. It was held that there was evidence upon which the arbitrator could find that the accident arose out of the employment. In the latter case a journeyman baker was injured by frost bite while on his rounds. The arbitrator held that the accident did not arise out of the employment and the House of Lords held that he was justified in so finding. Both cases proceed on the principle enunciated by Cozens-Hardy, M.R., "it is not enough for the applicant to say the 'accident would not have happened if I had not been engaged in that employment, nor if I had not been in that particular place.' He must go further, and must say, 'The accident arose because of something I was doing in the course of my employment, or because I was exposed by the nature of my employment to some peculiar danger.'" Consider now, however, the House of Lords decision in Simpson v. Sinclair, (1917) W. C. & I., p. 164, at p. 169, where it was held that an accident due to a peril peculiar to the locality of the employment though unconnected with the nature of the employment may be injury arising "out of." Compare Wales v. Lamblon and Helton Collieries, (1917) W. C. & I. 289; Marsh v. Pope and Pearson (ibid.) 267. The same point was made in the Scotch case of Robson v. Blakey, (1912) W. C. Rep. 86, where a plumber in low health was laying pipes in a trench on a hot day and succumbed to the heat. Lord Kinnear summed up the position excellently as follows: "I only say in a word that I do not think that this man was exposed by his employment to any special risk to which other people were not liable, provided they happened to be working in the open air on July 26th, 1911." See also Karemaker v. Corsican, 4 B. 295.

On the other hand a result similar to that arrived at in Andrew v. Fails-worth was attained in Davies v. Gillespie, 5 B. 64. See also Pierce v. The Provident Clothing Co., (1911) S. C. 12, and McNiece v. Singer, (1911) 1 K. B. 997 (both of which cases were discussed in Hughes v. Bett, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 614), where collectors used bicycles to visit customers, and such use was contemplated by their employment, and where they had to continually ride through narrow and crowded streets and were injured by the traffic, it was there held that, though such danger was common to all users of the streets, yet it was a danger incident to their particular calling, and arose out of their doing what they were employed to do. See as to this the important House of Lords decision in Dennis v. A. J. White & Co., (1917) W. C. & I. 247, reversing (1916) W. C. & I. 106. Compare Hefferman's Case, (1919) W. C. & I. 16. It may be different where the cycling is only occasional (Slade v. Taylor, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 53; Read v. Baker, ibid., 133; Ince v. Reigate Education Committee, ibid., 278). And why not frostbite caused when delivering bread? Because, to quote Collins, M.R., in Andrew v. Failsworth, "If there is, under particular circumstances in a particular vocation, something appreciably and substantially beyond the ordinary normal risk which ordinary people run, and which is a necessary concomitant of the occupation the man is engaged in, then I am entitled to say that the extra danger to which the man is exposed is something arising out of his employment," a dictum quoted in Slade v. Taylor, supra. In Martin v. John Lovibond, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 76, where a drayman who had left his horse to get beer was injured while crossing the street on the return it was held that he could recover, as did the taxi-cab man who was wounded by a sentry while driving an officer to a fort (Thorn v. Humm & Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 224). In Symmonds v. King, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 282, a painter's assistant who crossed the road to fetch whitening and was knocked down was held not entitled to recover; he was running no risk qua painter's assistant. Compare Harder v. A. E. Ganis & Sons, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 99; Hadwin v. Shepherd, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 503 (where, however, had the arbitrator found differently, his finding would certainly not have been upset). Contrast Mullinger v. Bidewell, (1917) W. C. & I. 51, there a man was travelling on a cart on which he had been given a lift, the horse took fright, bolted. Result: Accident and injury. The man took the lift to get on his way with a heavy parcel. Held "out of" because the man had need of a lift to convey the parcel. The case raises some very nice points. Pierce v. The Provident Clothing Co., supra, was discussed in Sheldon v. Needham, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 274, where a charwoman sent to post a letter stepped on a banana skin and was injured and it was held that the accident did not arise out of the employment. This case is now overruled by the decision of the House of Lords in Dennis v. White, supra. Now it would be quite clear under this decision of the House of Lords (Dennis v. White & Co., (1917) W. C. & I. 247), and also Arkell v. Gudgeon, (1918) W. C. & I. 333, that such an accident did arise out of the employment. In Upton v. Great Central Ry., (1924), 93 L. J. K. B. 224 (H. L.); (1924) A. C. 302, it was held by the House of Lords that an accident arises "out of" a workman's employment, within the meaning of sect. 1 (1) of the Act, if it is due to the particular place at which the conditions of his employment require him to be at the time when it happens. In Cooper v. North Eastern Ry., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 572, where an engine driver was killed by a shell fired by German warships near the Hartlepoons, it was held that the "accident" did not arise "out of" the employment—it was a risk common to all in the locality. Compare the aircraft bomb cases (Allcock v. Rogers, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 274; Knyvett v. Wilkinson Bros., Ltd., ibid., p. 157). The Irish case (Aldridge v. Merry, (1913) W. C. Rep. 97) is a valuable decision. Here a servant slept in a room where plaster from the ceiling was continually falling. A piece struck her in the eye. The continual falling made it a special risk.

"In the Course of the Employment."—As so many of the decisions, probably the majority of them which have been pronounced upon this composite phrase "arising out of and in the course of the employment," involve a consideration of both questions, it is not safe to trust alone to those which are collected under the separate headings.

The course of the employment depends upon what is the contract of service. Where the contract is in express terms little difficulty arises, but in contracts between master and workman express terms are rarely defined.

Section 1 Notes.

It is the indirect or implied terms of such contracts which create the difficulty, and this often becomes a mixed question of fact and law upon which an appeal lies from the decision of the arbitrator.

Where there is no express contract, or no contract to be presumed from the conduct of the parties, decisions on similar cases are gradually becoming a code as to terms to be implied. Difficult questions usually arise where a man is injured before or after his actual work has commenced or ended, or when it has been suspended or been intermittent. Few contracts of service contemplate only steady unintermittent work, and certain cessations are customary and usual and provided for as well. For example, a man may want to relieve nature. This generally is recognized as in the course of the employment if he acts as mutually agreed (expressly or impliedly) but not otherwise. Periods for rest and eating may or may not be in the course of the employment also as agreed, though in the vast majority of cases where nothing to the contrary is provided such periods usually were regarded as in the course of the employment, though this cannot be said to be so, since some recent decisions in the House of Lords. See infra.

So employers may agree to employ men in one place and to take them to their actual work in another when such period of carriage with all its incidents would probably be in the course of the employment, or they may employ men to work in a certain place and provide facilities for getting there with or without such facilities when availed of being in the course of the employment, or they may agree that the employment shall begin and end with being on actual premises, even though they permit private paths and short cuts to be used. But the variety of possible agreements is infinite, as the Act nowhere says a man must employ a servant in only such a manner. So as regards decided cases it may be that the practice adopted has been for the very purpose of avoiding a particular decision.

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.—General Rule. "It is well established that a man is not within the protection of the Act when having left his master's premises—the factory or wherever it may be—he is proceeding to his home" (per Cozens-Hardy, M.R., in Poulton v. Kelsall, (1912) 2 K. B. 131). But compare the Master of the Rolls' dictum in Whittall's Case, quoted supra, p. 1282. A reasonable margin is many times an implied term (Fitzpatrick v. Hindley Field Col. Co., 4 W. C. C. 7, waiting at pit brow; Sharp v. Johnson, (1905) 2 K. B. 139, early train; Mackenzie v. Coltness Iron Co., 41 S. L. R. 6, slipping just before starting work). The use of employers' paths, etc., may extend period of employment (Gilmour v. Dorman, 4 B. 279; Walters v. Staveley Coal and Iron Co., 4 B. 303; and Williams v. Smith, (1913) W. C. Rep. 146). But see the case of Nicol v. Young's Paraffin Light, etc. Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 72; and Stewart & Son v. Longhurst, (1917) A. C. 249, where the authorities are considered. See also Howells v. G. W. R., (1928) 97 L. J. K. B. 183, where the workman was on the employers' premises proceeding to work over an accustomed and permitted though not a provided route the accident must be held to arise out of and in the course of the employment. The principle laid down in Gane v. Norton Hill Colliery Co., (1909) 2 K. B. 539; 78 L. J. K. B. 921, and Howells v. Powell Duffryn Steam Colliery Co. (infra) were followed in this case.

Note.—The case of Gane v. Norton Hill Colliery Co. (supra) was closely examined in the case of L. & Y. Railway v. Highley, (1917) A. C. 352; 86 L. J. K. B. 715, and was held to be rightly decided.

Carriage to or from work will depend on exact terms of contract (Morgan v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefold, (1923) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 28; 92 L. J. K. B. 192; and Watkins v. Guest, (1923) W. C. Rep. 150; Holmes v. G. N., (1900) 2 Q. B. 409; and Howells v. Powell Duffryn Steam Colliery Co., Ltd., (1926) 1 K. B. 472; 95 L. J. K. B. 654, held within course of employment; whilst St. Helen's Colliery Co., Ltd. v. Hewitson, (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. 177 (H. L.); (1924) A. C. 59, (which overruled Cremins v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefold, (1908) 1 K. B. 469); and Newton v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefold (H. L.), (1926), 19 B. W. C. C. 119, and Robertson v. Owners of S.S. "Appalachee," 20 B. W. C. C. 57, and Lye v. British and Argentine Meat Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 341, are contra). In Richards v. Morris, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 112, a labourer working on an island lived on the mainland. It was held that there was an implied term in the contract of service that he might cross over in his employer's boat. In Whitfield v. Lambert, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 48, no such implied term existed and the workman did not recover. As to interruptions in course of employment during meal times it was formerly held that the times allowed for meals, when the workman stayed on the premises, were considered periods during which the course of the employment continued. This was expressly so held in Blovet v. Sawyer, (1904) 1 K. B. 271; 6 B. W. C. C. 16. This principle is now overruled together with the case in which it was declared, by the decision of the House of Lords in Davidson v. McRobb, (1918) A. C. 304. This case decides that a complete cessation of work during a dinner hour, or other meal period during which time it is open to the workman to leave the premises on which he is employed, constitutes a break in the course of his employment, and that this is so even though the workman is allowed to remain on the premises during such periods, so long as he has no duties of employment at such times. Very slight evidence of duty owing to the employer at such times, may, however, bring the case within the Act. See Morris v. Lambeth Council, 8 W. C. C. 1; and Rowland v. Wright, 1 B. 192, the stable cat case; so also getting a drink (Keenan v. Flemington Coal Co., 40 S. L. R. 144); and relieving nature (Lawless v. Wigan Coal Co., 124 L. J. C. C.; Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. v. Redford, (1920) A. C. 757. Contrast Horner v. Wandsworth, etc., (1919) W. C. & I. 67). This will not extend to going to a distance (Bell v. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., (1919) W. C. & I. 219; Thomson v. Flemington Coal Co., 48 S. L. R. 740); or an unreasonable place (Rose v. Morrison, 4 B. 277; Cook v. Manvers Main Colliery, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 278). In these cases though the accident arose in the course of, it may not arise out of the employment (Keen v. St. Clement's Press, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 292). Then there are acts perfectly justifiable but yet not in course of employment, being for a man's own purposes only (Smith v. L. & Y. Rail., (1899) 1 Q. B. 141, a guard having a chat with a friend; Reed v. G. W. Rail., 99 L. T. 781, an engine driver crossing lines to get a book), etc., all of which cause a break in the employment; Pruce v. Davy, 20 B. W. C. C. 237, crossing road to get milk for his own purposes; Standen v. Smith, 20 B. W. C. C. 305, cutting turf for his own purposes, also Moule v. Marmite Food Extract Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 446; using motor cycle for his own purposes or at any rate no evidence that it was sanctioned by his employer (Helena Hetherington v. Dublin & Blessington Steam Tramway Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 852 (Irish case)).

Where a deceased workman is engaged in his employment up to a moment before the accident the onus is on the employers to prove that his last act causing the accident was inconsistent with his continuing within the employment (Rigling v. Minister of Munitions, (1921) W. C. & I. Rep. 163), but where a workman's body is found in a place where he had no business to be, and no explanation of this is produced, the judge may find that the accident is not proved to have arisen out of the employment (Prosser v. Graham Navigation Collieries, (1921) W. C. & I. Rep. 167).

Further, a contract may be to work on certain days, and to be paid on another. This latter will still be in the course of the employment, though the service be otherwise terminated (Molloy v. South Wales Anthracite Colliery Co., 4 B. 65).

"The course of the employment" of a seaman.]—It was formerly held that the contract of service, unless otherwise agreed, covered the periods when men go on shore for their own purposes with leave so that they still remained in the course of their employment (Kitchenham v. S.S. Johannesburg, (1911) A. C. 417; Moore v. Manchester Liners, (1910) A. C. 498;

Section 1
Notes.

3 B. W. C. C. 527), though at the same time as they will then be exposed to no more risk than any other member of the public, an accident then happening to them is not likely to arise out of the employment. All these cases where seamen go ashore for their own purposes are governed by the case of Davidson v. McRobb or Officer, 87 L. J. P. C. 58 (in which case Stewart & Sons, Ltd. v. Longhurst, (1917) A. C. 249; 86 L. J. K. B. 729, was distinguished (though Lord Finlay, L.C., failed to see the distinction between these cases), and dicta in Moore v. Manchester Liners, (1910) A. C. 498; 3 B. W. C. C. 527, were disapproved) where the House laid down one general principle. That principle is that an accident neither arises out of the employment, or in the course of the employment, until the seaman returns to the ambit of the ship itself; even though the accident is occasioned by some risk of the dock or harbour which it is necessary to traverse to reach the ambit of employment. If a seaman goes on shore without leave (express or implied), this is of course an a fortiori case. When the seaman may again be said to be engaged in his employment will be a question of fact. Probably the test of again coming within it will be when he is doing an act in his master's interest, and not as a result of or to further his own pleasure. Thus, if a seaman went ashore with leave, and returning fell even from the gangway, it is very doubtful if he can now a fortiori recover. Where a seaman goes ashore on the business of the ship he is undoubtedly in the course of his employment, and can recover even where the accident happens from the general risks to which he is no more exposed than any other member of the public, e.g., where he is sent to buy provisions for the ship he remains in the course of his employment. Even here, though he goes ashore to buy provisions for the ship, he is not acting within the ambit of his employment if he deviates in order to go home, although permitted so to do (Lee v. "St. George" (Owners), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 17). Where seamen go ashore to buy their own provisions it is a question whether there is an implied term in the contract requiring them to do so. If not, they will be deemed to be on their own business (Parker v. "Black Rock" (Owners), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 369). In Cook v. Montreal, (1913) W. C. Rep. 206, it has been held a sailor ceases to be in the course of his employment when ending his contract of service he has left the ship and got on the quay or works pertinent to the quay and not to the ship. On the question of "ambit of employment" reference may also be made to May v. Ison, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 40.

Voluntary Service.]—As all legal responsibility between employer and workman must arise out of a contract of service, it follows that where no such contract exists there can be no liability. An employer cannot be held responsible for services thrust upon him without his consent or even against his will. It makes no difference that the work done is meritorious and for his benefit. A volunteer who assists him or his workmen, even in an emergency, cannot recover under the Act.

A doctor in the service of a hospital, who suffered injury in the interest of a patient by allowing himself to be experimented upon with X-rays, was held to be a volunteer and unable to recover (Curtis v. Talbot, 5 B. W. C. C. 41).

Exception.—Rescue Work in Mines.]—There is one exception to the above rule, an exception created by statute. This appears in sect. 34 of the present Act. By this section, sub-s. 1, miners, being trained as members of a rescue brigade, are deemed to be within the Act, and by sub-s. 2 any workman engaged in rescue work or ambulance work at a mine, shall be deemed, for the purposes of the Act, while so engaged, to be employed by the owner of the mine.

(This exception first appeared in the Coal Mines Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 50, sect. 110, now repealed.)

Aircraft.]—As to workmen employed in Air Service, see sect. 36.

Provided that—

Section 1.

- (a) The employer shall not be liable under this Act in respect of any injury which does not disable the workman for a period of at least three days from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed :

With the above must be read proviso 1 (a) of sect. 9. The joint effect is that the workman gets no compensation if the injury does not disable him for more than three days. If the incapacity lasts more than three days and less than four weeks no compensation is payable for the first three days. If the incapacity lasts for four weeks or longer, compensation is payable from the first.

If a workman is in fact disabled from earning full wages for more than three days he is entitled under the Act, even though his employer continues to pay him his full wages. But in this case, as no present weekly sum is payable, he can only ask for an agreement admitting liability, and this he is entitled to. See Ashrody v. S.S. "City of Edinburgh" (Owners), (1919) W. C. & I. 257.

- (b) If it is proved that the injury to a workman is attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of that workman, any compensation claimed in respect of that injury shall, unless the injury results in death or serious and permanent disablement, be disallowed.

Serious and Wilful Misconduct is a question of fact, per Halsbury, L.C., in Bist v. L. & S. W. Rail. Co., (1907) A. C. 209, at p. 212; it must be proved by the employer; and to be a defence must be the cause of the accident. Effect must be given to the word "misconduct," though moral misconduct has not to be shown. It must be serious quite apart from whether the results are serious or slight, e.g., a servant injured while going out by the front door when told to use the back would not be guilty of serious misconduct; and it must be wilful or deliberate, intentional or the result of a reckless indifference to consequences as opposed to mere inattention, carelessness or negligence, however gross (Johnson v. Marshall, (1906) A. C. 409). Bist v. L. & S. W. Rail. Co., (1907) A. C. 209, is a valuable illustrative case. An engine driver, in breach of a rule, left the footplate of his engine whilst in motion to get coal from the tender, and on passing under a bridge was killed. He was held guilty of serious and wilful misconduct. It was misconduct, being disobedience of a rule. It was serious misconduct, as the rule was to protect life—the breach of a rule as to trivial matters might only be trifling misconduct—and it was wilful, being deliberate. As nothing was shown requiring disregard of the rule, the House of Lords approved the finding of the arbitrator, and being under the old Act the dependants failed to recover. It may be serious and wilful misconduct to cross a railway line contrary to rules (Sanderson v. Henry Wright, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 177, at p. 179). Getting drunk may amount to serious and wilful misconduct (Fraser v. John Riddell & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 125, at p. 127).

It must never be forgotten that, though serious and wilful misconduct may be proved, and proved to have caused the injury, it is no defence if such injury results in death or serious and permanent disablement. The onus of proving this is on the applicant, and it is a question which sometimes occasions the arbitrator some difficulty. It may be impossible to say a month or two after the injury whether the results will be serious, still more difficult to say whether they will be permanent.

In cases of doubt the editor thinks the arbitrator has power to adjourn the arbitration proceedings for an indefinite though reasonable time, that he may learn what only time can show. Whether the injury does or will cause serious and permanent incapacity is a question of fact. In Hopwood

v. Olive and Partington, Ltd., 3 B. W. C. C. 357, a boy had the top joint of his first and third fingers torn off, and was held by the arbitrator to be so disabled. The Court of Appeal refused to interfere with the finding.

Sect. 1, sub-s. 2, should be considered in connection with the clause above, see infra.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, an accident resulting in the death or serious and permanent disablement of a workman shall be deemed to arise out of and in the course of his employment, notwithstanding that the workman was at the time when the accident happened acting in contravention of any statutory or other regulation applicable to his employment, or of any orders given by or on behalf of his employer, or that he was acting without instructions from his employer, if such act was done by the workman for the purposes of and in connection with his employer's trade or business.

This sub-section must also be considered with the clause above, sect. 1 (1) (b).

The above sub-section, which was an amendment of the Act of 1906, and which first appeared in the Act of 1923, is a most important amendment in the interest of workmen.

All the previous cases (see p. 1280) where the workman failed in consequence of a breach of statutory regulations or regulations made by the employer having the effect of statutory regulations are now of far less importance than heretofore. Still it must be remembered that the workman is only protected whilst acting improperly if the act was done for the purposes of and in connection with his employer's trade or business. The onus of proving that an accident to a workman who was acting in contravention of a statutory or other regulation was caused by an act done by him "for the purposes of and in connection with his employer's trade or business" is upon the workman or his representatives. See Garallan Coal Co. v. Devlin, (1927) A. C. 59; 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 17; 19 B. W. C. C. 356. See Davies v. Gwauncægurwen Colliery Co., (1924) 2 K. B. 651, (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 229, for the construction and effect of this section. This case was decided on the ground that the act of the workman was not only forbidden by the employer, but was done entirely for his own purposes, and not in connection with his employer's trade or business. Compare Stokoe v. Mickley Coal Co., (1928) 138 L. T. 566.

Further, even if the work was done for the purposes of and in connection with the employer's trade or business this will not entitle the workman to recover where the act in question did not arise out of and in the course of his employment, so as to bring him in the first instance within sect. 1 (1) of the Act. See Borley v. Ockenden, (1925) 2 K. B. 325; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 35; and Jones v. Tarr, (1926) 1 K. B. 25; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 203. See also Guest v. Gaston & Co., (1927) 1 K. B. 1; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 759; and Clarke v. Southern Ry., (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 572; 20 B. W. C. C. 309; also James v. Penderyn Limestone Quarries (Hirwain), Ltd., 20 B. W. C. C. 27.

Further, this sub-section does not apply to the case of a workman who arrogates to himself duties which he was neither engaged nor entitled to perform, whether the act which causes the injury is the subject of a specific prohibition or not. See Kerr or M'Aulay and Another v. James Dunlop & Co., Ltd., reported with Wilsons and Clyde Coal Co., Ltd. v. M'Ferrin, (1926) A. C. (H. L.) 377; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 130; 19 B. W. C. C. 1; and Edwards v. Gwauncægurwen Colliery Co., (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 337; 20 B. W. C. C. 75, where though the act was against the instructions of the employer it fell within the section, and in the case of two men who were killed compensation was awarded, but in the third case where the man was slightly injured it was refused.

Section 1
Notes.

(3) This Act shall apply notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, whether made before or after the commencement of this Act, except that where under this Act the provisions of a scheme are substituted for the provisions of this Act, the employer shall be liable only in accordance with the scheme.

From the time of the passing of the first Workmen's Compensation Act (1897), contracting out of these acts has always been forbidden, except where the provisions of a scheme certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies has been substituted therefor. The provisions of such a scheme, and the time when it shall remain in operation, etc., are fully provided for in sect. 31 of this Act (see post, sect. 31).

2.—(1) The compensation shall be payable to or for the benefit of the workman, or, where death results from the injury, to or for the benefit of his dependants as provided by this Act.

Persons entitled to compensation.

The wording of this sub-section is new, though in effect it was contained in the previous Act.

(2) Where there are both total and partial dependants nothing in this Act shall be construed as preventing the compensation being allotted partly to the total and partly to the partial dependants.

At one time it was thought that compensation could not be divided between total and partial dependants. Where there was a total dependant, he or she had to take the whole. This is not so now, see supra.

(3) Where a dependant dies before a claim under this Act is made, or if a claim has been made, before an agreement or award has been arrived at or made, the legal personal representative of the dependant shall have no right to payment of compensation, and the amount of compensation shall be calculated and apportioned as if that dependant had died before the workman.

The provisions of this sub-section first appeared in the Act of 1923.

On the death of the workman his dependants' right to receive compensation became vested and enured for the benefit of their estate, even though they had made no claim (United Collieries v. Hendry, (1909) A. C. 383), but see now the above sub-section from which it follows that if a sole dependant dies before claim made, or before agreement as to compensation made or award obtained, the employer is freed from liability. It has no retrospective effect, and consequently only applies to accidents which happen on or before January 1st, 1924. See Costello v. Brown, (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 220, and Moakes v. Blackwell Colliery Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 64; (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 723, followed by the House of Lords in Clement v. D. Davis & Sons, Ltd., (1927) A. C. 126; 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 284; 19 B. W. C. C. 416.

3.—(1) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression "workman," subject to the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, means any person who has entered into or works under a contract of service or apprenticeship with an employer, whether by way of manual labour, clerical work or otherwise, and

"workman."

Section 3. whether the contract is expressed or implied, is oral or in writing ; and also includes a person engaged in plying for hire with any vehicle or vessel the use of which is obtained from the owner thereof under any contract of bailment (other than a hire purchase agreement) in consideration of the payment of a fixed sum or a share in the earnings or otherwise.

"Workman."—To establish the relationship of employer and workman there must be a contract of service as distinguished from an independent contract to do work (Simmons v. Heath Laundry, (1910) 1 K. B. 543 ; Lynch v. Limerick C.C., (I. R.) 19 B. W. C. C. 802). The relationship is practically very much the old relationship of master and servant, not that of anyone doing work for another. An appointment, say, as a doctor in a hospital, is not such a contract of service (Murphy v. Enniscorthy Guardians, 2 B. 291), nor that of a lecturer about an airship (Waites v. Franco-British Exhibition, 2 B. 199). Compare Hughes v. Quinn, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 115 (well-sinker working under agreement). See also the case of a diver who was employed by Harbour Commissioners to get rid of a sunken barge which was an obstruction and who on the special terms of the contract between them was held to be a servant (Binding v. Great Yarmouth Port and Haven Commissioners, (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 377). The relationship may exist although a man is doing work for his own benefit (Tombs v. Bomford, (1912) W. C. Rep. 229 (always assuming the accident does not occur while the workman is so working for his own benefit (Huscroft v. Bennett, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 9)), nor is a man estopped from saying he is not an employer because he has made weekly payments, thinking he was liable (Standing v. Eastwood, (1912) W. C. Rep. 200).

Under the National Insurance Act, 1911, curates ((1913) W. C. Rep. 34), and poor law officials (Ib. p. 245), and the resident staff of a hospital (Scottish Insurance Commissioners v. Royal Infirmary, 50 S. L. R. 495), have been held not to work under contract of service. But where a workman under the control of a board of guardians was injured, it was held in Finlay v. Tullamore Union (Guardians), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 222, that the relationship of employer and workman existed. The stamping of a card under the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, is not conclusive evidence that the insured person is a workman within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act (Barnes v. Evans & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 109).

The meaning of the term "contract of service" was discussed at length in Simmons v. Heath Laundry Co., (1910) 1 K. B. 543. Buckley, L.J., suggested the following tests: Was the workman employed upon terms that he should within the scope of his employment obey his master's orders, or was he employed to exercise his skill and achieve an indicated result in such a manner as in his judgment was most likely to ensure success? Was his contract a contract of service within the meaning which an ordinary person would give to the words? Was it a contract under which he could be appropriately described as the servant of the employer? With these hypothetical questions, compare the decisions in M'Nally v. Fitzgerald, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 7, where a plumber was held to be a servant of the person in whose house he was executing repairs (and on this observe the criticism in Graham v. Lewis Picture House, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 374), and in Bobbey v. Crosbie & Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 36, where the employer of a ganger was held to be the employer of a member of the gang. On the other hand, a rabbit trapper (M'Connell v. Galbraith, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 90); a person who had undertaken to do slating work (Barnes v. Evans & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 109); a man who had undertaken to supply a yawl and crew for pilotage purposes (Walsh v. Waterford Harbour Commissioners, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 16); carter drawing timber and using his own horse and tackle and paid per ton of timber carried (Bray v. Kirkpatrick & Sons, (1919) W. C. & I. 151), were held to be independent contractors. In Kemp v. Lewis, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 512; 83 L. J. K. B. 1535, a quarryman who assisted a farmer carrying hay after his work hours in return for payment in kind but not in money, was held not to be under any contract of service within the meaning of this sect. See also per Phillimore, L.J., in Newson v. Burstall, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 16. In Richards v. Pitt, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 417, the niece of a hop-picker who helped her aunt to pick hops was held to be under no contract of service with the hop grower. The same result was arrived at on the facts in Ryan v. Limerick R. D. C., (1920) W. C. & I. 71, in the case of a rent collector engaged by the R. D. C., but not controlled by them. A nurse who attends a patient in the patient's flat for a surgical operation is not under a contract of service with the patient (Bedford v. Marks, Law Journal, Aug. 18th, 1917, p. 311).

Section 3

Such contract would hardly appear to exist where work is found by a philanthropic institution as a form of wise charity (Burns v. Manchester, etc., Mission, 1 B. 305; MacGilvrays v. N. Counties Institute for the Blind, 48 S. L. R. 811, contra, seems a doubtful decision); but was held to exist where work was found under Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905 (Porton v. Central (Unemployed) Body for London, (1909) 1 K. B. 173). But in the case of Watson v. Government Instructional Centre (Birmingham), (1928) 97 L. J. K. B. 596, where the Minister of Labour provided a training department or course of instruction at an instructional workshop and the court thought there was no contract of service, and though the workman was injured in performing his instructional duties reversed the county court judge and decided that compensation could not be awarded. Many cases on questions of fact have been decided, e.g., whether a shipowner or charterer was employer or whether a man was a partner, co-adventurer, independent contractor, or bailee, but turning on the particular terms of each contract, are of little guidance where the terms may differ however slightly.

A case of wider interest is Pears v. Gibbon, (1913) W. C. Rep. 469, where a trustee in bankruptcy employed an old member of the firm to assist in the winding up. Such assistance does not involve a contract of service, though a trustee may in fact employ such member as a servant if so mutually bargained.

In Ryan v. Tipperary County Council (No. 2), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 22, where a workman worked under a ganger breaking stones for a county council the county court judge found that he was not under a contract of service with the county council. On appeal a new trial was ordered. And see as to correct test of "contract of service" Underwood v. Perry & Co., (1922) 15 B. W. C. C. 131.

As to position of a workman lent by his employer to another, see sect. 5 (1) of present Act.

A contract of service is not determined simply by the injured workman receiving compensation and remaining from work (Warburton v. Co-operative Soc., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 124).

It must be noticed that the definition of "workman" now includes a person plying for hire with a vehicle or vessel under a contract of bailment (other than a hire purchase agreement) who receives as payment a fixed sum or share of takings. This will include many drivers of cars or cabs.

It was first added by the Act of 1923.

(2) The following persons are excepted from the definition of Exceptions. workman, that is to say—

- (a) any person employed otherwise than by way of manual labour whose remuneration exceeds three hundred and fifty pounds a year; or

Section 3 Notes.

Formerly £250 a year.

It does not matter how much may be the wages of a workman engaged in manual labour—he is within the Act. If engaged in clerical work or otherwise (and his contract is a contract of service), he is outside the Act if his remuneration exceeds £350.

See sect. 10 of present Act "Earnings." For a case where it was considered what may amount to manual labour (within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911), see Re Dairymen's Foremen and Re Tailors' Cutters, (1912) 28 T. L. R. 587. In cases other than those of manual labour, "if the contract [of service] is one which may continue for more than a year, and the servant, as incident to that contract, earns, or, but for some circumstance determining his earning power, would be able to earn in a year a sum exceeding £350, he will be within the exception, although at the moment of the accident the remuneration he was actually earning might be at a lower rate than that of £350 per annum. So, on the other hand, if the actual or assumed earnings be less than £350 in the year, the man would be a "workman," although at the moment of the accident the remuneration he was actually earning was at a higher rate," per Warrington, L.J., in Griffith v. "Penrhyn Castle" (Owners), (1917) W. C. & I., at p. 117. See Jacques v. Steam Tug "Alexandra" (Owners), (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 325; also Reid v. British and Irish Steam Packet Co., Ltd., (1921) 2 K. B. 319. The question whether a workman's duties are those of manual labour is primarily a question for the arbitrator. In a case where a captain of a steam tug, whose remuneration exceeded £250 a year, had to perform some manual labour with the crew, and the arbitrator found that his duties were not primarily those of manual labour, the House of Lords upheld this decision. Where a pilot received wages of £6 a week for ten weeks before the accident and the county court judge found that his remuneration did not exceed £250 a year, the House of Lords held it was within the power of the judge so to find, though it was proved that the usual pay of such a pilot as the applicant was £6 a week (W. Thomson & Co. v. Mackay, (1921) 90 L. J. (H. L.) 1337).

- (b) a person whose employment is of a casual nature and who is employed otherwise than for the purposes of the employer's trade or business, not being a person employed for the purposes of any game or recreation and engaged or paid through a club; or

A casual labourer is outside the Act unless the work he does is for the purposes of his employer's trade or business, but a person employed for the purposes of any game or recreation and engaged or paid through the club, though he plays intermittently is within the Act.

Decisions.—A charwoman regularly employed held to be not a casual labourer (Dewhurst v. Mather, (1908) 2 K. B. 754), a window cleaner's work held to be of a casual nature (Hill v. Begg, (1908) 2 K. B. 802), a thatcher employed to thatch the roof of a farmhouse where the farmer carried on his farm business and also resided held a casual labourer (Manton v. Cantwell, (1920) A. C. 781), also a man cutting down trees in an employer's garden (M'Corthy v. Norcott, 2 B. 279; Knight v. Bucknill, (1913) W. C. Rep. 175; compare Williams v. Haigh, (1926) 134 L. T. 238). A temporary cook's employment may be held to be of a casual nature, depending much on the length of employment (Stoker v. Wortham, (1919) W. C. & I. 58). A labourer regularly employed as a woodman year by year for a season of about two months held not to be a casual labourer (Smith v. Buxton, (1915) W. C. & Ins Rep. 126). Where the windows were cleaned casually at a doctor's house, held, did not bring the case within the exception of employers trade or business (Rennie v. Reed, 45 S. L. R. 814); but otherwise where the work done was the lopping of trees and the employer was a retired doctor who farmed 215 acres for profit (Cotter v. Johnson, 5 B. 568); the mere owning of eight cottages and managing them does not constitute trade or business (Bargewell v. Daniel, 98 L. T. 257), though otherwise if regular business premises are repaired (Johnston v. Monastrevan General Store Co., 2 B. 813). Employment for the purposes of improving a house used for a trade or business is not of itself employment for the purposes of the trade or business (Alderman v. Warren, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 266; contrast Boothby v. Peter Patrick & Son, (1918) W. C. & I. 340). For a case in which the employer was held to be estopped from raising the defence of casual employment, see Fraser v. Driscoll, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 222.

As to a person employed for the purposes of a game or recreation, see notes to sect. 5 (3), post.

(c) a member of a police force ; or

For definition of "Police Force," see sect. 48 (1) of present Act. This includes a police officer who, as a statutory duty, acts as a fireman (Sudell v. Blackburn Corporation, 3 B. 227).

(d) an out worker ; or

For definition of "out worker," see sect. 48 (1) of present Act.

(e) a member of the employer's family dwelling in his house.

See sect. 4 (3) of present Act.

Member of the Employer's Family.—Such cannot recover against a principal under sect. 6 (1) as he is not a workman (Marks v. Carne, (1909) 2 K. B. 516); nor if only temporarily absent (M'Dougall v. M'Dougall, 48 S. L. R. 315). See also Wood v. Wood, (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. 538, where a farm worker employed by the partners in a farming business consisting of his two brothers and his sister, and living in a farmhouse belonging to the partnership, in the occupation of two out of the three partners, was held not to be excepted from the operation of sect. 13 of the Act of 1906 as being a "member of the employer's family, dwelling in his house," and, therefore, his dependants were held to be entitled to compensation under the Act.

As to the position of workmen in the service of the Crown, see sect. 33 of present Act.

(3) If on any proceedings for the recovery of compensation under this Act it appears to the judge of county courts or other person by whom the claim to compensation is to be settled that the contract of service or apprenticeship under which the injured person was working at the time when the accident causing the injury happened was illegal, he may, if having regard to all the circumstances of the case he thinks proper so to do, deal with the matter as if the injured person had at the time aforesaid been a person working under a valid contract of service or apprenticeship.

This was formerly effected by the Workmen's Compensation (Illegal Employment) Act, 1918, now repealed.

4.—(1) The dependants of a workman entitled to claim compensation under this Act where the injury results in death are such of the members of the workman's family as were wholly or in part dependent upon the earnings of the workman at the time of his death, or would but for the incapacity due to the accident

entitled to compensation.

Section 4. have been so dependent, and where the workman, being the parent or grandparent of an illegitimate child, leaves such a child so dependent upon his earnings, or, being an illegitimate child, leaves a parent or grandparent so dependent upon his earnings, shall include such an illegitimate child and parent or grandparent respectively.

(2) A person shall not be deemed to be a partial dependant of another person unless he was dependent partially on contributions from that other person for the provision of the ordinary necessities of life suitable for persons in his class and position.

(3) In this Act unless the context otherwise requires the expression "Member of a family" means wife or husband, father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, stepfather, stepmother, son, daughter, grandson, grand-daughter, stepson, stepdaughter, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister.

The dependants entitled to compensation are members of the workman's family, as to which see sub-s. 3, supra, and an illegitimate child or grandchild or parent or grandparent of an illegitimate child, sub-s. 1. This subsection does not, however, extend to the illegitimate children of the widow by another man born before her marriage to the deceased workman. See Scott v. L. N. E. Ry. Co., (1926) 2 K. B. 204; (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 135; 19 B. W. C. C. 457.

In every case they must have been dependent on the workman's earnings at the time of death, or but for the incapacity would have been so dependent.

They must also now be dependent for the "ordinary necessities of life" suitable to their class and position (sub-s. 2 above). This latter provision has and will in future cause much difficulty. It is believed that no common standard of living can be laid down. What the judge may be satisfied are necessities of life for one family, having regard to the earnings and expenditure of that family, would not necessarily be the necessities of life for another family, where the income and probably the expenditure were less. This important question has now been considered by the House of Lords in Welsh Navigation Steam Coal Co. v. Evans, (1927) A. C. 834; 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 906; 20 B. W. C. C. 537, which decided (overruling the Court of Appeal, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 290, and following their own decision in Fife Coal Co. v. McArthur, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 330; 19 B. W. C. C. 461), and on the express words of the new statute, that the state of the law had been brought back to what was declared in the case of Simmons v. White, (1899) 1 Q. B. 1005; 68 L. J. Q. B. 507, and not what was laid down by House of Lords in Main Colliery Co. v. Davies, (1900) A. C. 358; 69 L. J. Q. B. 755, namely, that it is only "necessaries of life" which can be recovered by the dependants. "Necessaries of life" must be to some extent a question of fact.

"You are to find out what such a family budget fitting to the class and position would naturally be. I agree that their actual expenditure is a prima facie guide, and I agree that there is no meticulous distinction between an absolute necessary and an article of comfort or a luxury. You are not to say that bread and butter is a necessary, but that if jam is added it is a luxury. But still you are to take the necessities of life. The expression is a common, well-understood expression, it indicates food, clothing, shelter and the necessary concomitants thereto. But to extend it to such a thing as saving, or what is the same thing, insurance, do utter violence to the expression, and though the learned Master of the Rolls says that he does not wish to say anything which would discourage thrift, I am afraid that I must reply that it is not allowable to encourage thrift by wresting a word used in a statute from its ordinary and natural meaning" (Welsh Navigation Steam Coal Co. v. Evans (supra), on p. 910 L. J. Reports).

Section 4 Notes.

The effect of this decision is to reinstate Simmons v. White (supra), to overrule Main Colliery Co. v. Davies (supra), to apply Fife Coal Co. v. McArthur (supra), and to overrule the opposing dicta in Peart v. Bolckow Vaughan & Co., (1925) 1 K. B. 399, and Kennedy v. Horden Collieries Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 438; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 307; and Pearce v. Southern Railway, (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 641.

Dependants.—Dependency is now well settled to be a question of fact. But to entirely ignore the legal presumption is to err as much on one side of the law as to found dependency on it is to err on the other. "The fact that a legal duty lay upon the workman to provide maintenance is an element to be considered, no doubt because people usually count upon getting what they are entitled to" (Lord Loreburn, L.C., in Keeling v. New Monkton Collieries, (1911) A. C. 648), and now so decided in Potts or Young v. Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., (1913) W. C. Rep. 547 (Sc.). But it will be a question of fact how far such rights were being actively enforced and with what likelihood of benefit. The dependency of a child is equally a question of fact (Lee v. Bessie, (1912) W. C. Rep. 57), as also of illegitimate children. Thus the married daughter of a man who lodged with her may not be a dependant, since the loss of the board money paid really falls on the husband (Montgomery v. Blows, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 89). But if a daughter was in fact living in entire dependence on her father the fact that she was capable of earning a living is not material, and she is entitled to compensation as one totally dependent (Simms v. Lilleshall Coll., (1917) W. C. & I. 218). But a granddaughter employed by the grandfather and paid by him is not dependent upon such grandfather, she is dependent upon her earnings (Mitchell v. Scottish Iron and Steel Co., Ltd., (1920) W. C. & I. 21). A posthumous child is in the same position as any other child, but a posthumous illegitimate child must prove the putative father had recognized the duty to support it before his death. His statement that he will marry the mother and provide a home for her are admissible in evidence on the issues of paternity and dependence (Lloyd v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 450; Harris v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 527). The question of paternity is a question of fact to be proved in the arbitration (Johnstone v. Spencer, 45 S. L. R. 802). A parent may be a dependant (Smith v. S.S. "Glendalough", (1919) W. C. & I. 365).

See sect. 21. As to determining amount of compensation between dependants and as to deciding who are dependants.

As to taking into consideration a pension payable to the dependants in consequence of the death of the workman, consult Baker v. Dalgleish Steam Shipping Co., (1922) 1 K. B. 361; 91 L. J. K. B. 392.

Widows' Orphans' and Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1925.—Sect. 25 of this Act is framed to prevent additional allowance or orphan's pension being paid where the husband or father died from injury, and compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act or a scheme has been awarded or agreed. On the Minister of Pensions receiving information as to this from the Registrar of the County Court within seven days such additional allowance or orphan's pension is to cease, provided that where the compensation money calculated in prescribed manner awarded to a child produces a smaller pension than would have been payable under this Act the deficiency is to be made up.

Somewhat complex rules have been made as to how this deficiency is to be calculated. See these rules, infra, Appendix LL., p. 1612.

Section 5.
Meaning of
"employer."

5.—(1) In this Act unless the context otherwise requires the expression "Employer" includes any body of persons corporate or unincorporate and the legal personal representative of a deceased employer, and, where the services of a workman are temporarily lent or let on hire to another person by the person with whom the workman has entered into a contract of service or apprenticeship, the latter shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to continue to be the employer of the workman whilst he is working for that other person.

Temporarily Lent on Hire.]—Workman must prove a subsisting contract of service between himself and lender (Boswell v. Gilbert, 2 B. 251; MacKinnon v. Miller, 46 S. L. R. 299; Reed v. Smith, 3 B. 223). Where a jobbing grinder rented power for his work from master cutlers and executed such work in their workshops as they gave him to do and did work for third parties when free, and while doing such work was injured, it was held that this was not a case of "lending" (Oates v. T. Turner & Co., (1916) W. C. & I., p. 335).

(2) In relation to a person engaged in plying for hire with any vehicle or vessel, the use of which is obtained from the owner thereof under a contract of bailment, the owner of the vehicle or vessel shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the employer.

There was always great doubt as to the position of the owner of vehicles, such as cabs, etc., let to the drivers on a contract of bailment, and as to whether the owner was the employer of the driver. In the case of King v. The London Improved Cab Co. (23 Q. B. D. 281; 58 L. J. Q. B. 456), it was held that he was not, though the owner under the Hackney Carriages Act became liable for his negligence. See also Gates v. Bill & Son, (1902) 2 K. B. 38, and the observations of the judges as to the real relationship between cab proprietor and cab driver. For the purposes of this Act the above subsection puts the question beyond doubt. See notes to sect. 3 (1), ante, p. 1294.

(3) In relation to a person employed for the purposes of any game or recreation and engaged or paid through a club, the manager, or members of the managing committee, of the club shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the employer.

The claim must be brought against the manager or members of committee, though generally a manager or member of a committee unincorporated cannot have a claim brought against them. In Walker v. Crystal Palace Football Club, (1910) 1 K. B. 87, the respondents were an incorporated company.

Liability in case of workmen
contractors.

6.—(1) Where any person (in this section referred to as the principal), in the course of or for the purposes of his trade or business, contracts with any other person (in this section referred to as the contractor) for the execution by or under the contractor of the whole or any part of any work undertaken by the principal, the principal shall be liable to pay to any workman employed in the execution of the work any compensation under this Act which he would have been liable to pay if that workman had been immediately employed by him; and where compensation is claimed from or proceedings are taken against the principal, then, in the application of this Act, references to the principal shall be substituted for references to the employer, except that the amount of compensation shall be calculated with reference to the earnings of the workman under the employer by whom he is immediately employed:

Provided that, where the contract relates to threshing, ploughing, or other agricultural work, and the contractor provides and uses machinery driven by mechanical power for the purpose of such work, he and he alone shall be liable under this Act to pay compensation to any workman employed by him on such work.

(2) Where the principal is liable to pay compensation under this section, he shall be entitled to be indemnified by any person who would have been liable to pay compensation to the workman independently of this section.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as preventing a workman recovering compensation under this Act from the contractor instead of the principal.

(4) This section shall not apply in any case where the accident occurred elsewhere than on, or in, or about premises on which the principal has undertaken to execute the work or which are otherwise under his control or management.

It will be observed this section does not apply unless the contract is in the course of or for the purposes of a person's trade or business (Brine v. May, (1913) W. C. Rep. 148), and unless it be for any work undertaken by him for such purposes. These latter words have been the occasion of much doubt, which, however, has been considerably cleared up by the cases of Skates v. Jones, (1910) 2 K. B. 903; Luckwill v. Auchin Steam S. Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 167; and Hayes v. Thomson, ib. 161. In Zugg v. Cunningham, 45 S. L. R. 670, the Lord President construed the section as if it referred to sub-contracting only, almost as if the words "for another" were to be read into the provision. The English courts would not so limit the words. The section applied to all work undertaken by the principals in the course of their trade. The decisions were given in cases rather peculiar in their special facts and apparently wider than they really have proved to be. The words "undertaken by" are used in contradistinction to "undertaken for a principal." To enable a principal to carry on his trade or business, he may need to have many things done for him by outsiders. If a shipowner, boilers may need scaling; if a manufacturer, tanks may need tarring; if a barge owner, barges may need overhauling; moulding manufacturers may need wood stacking. As to whether in the case of such contracts he is a principal to the men so employed to do the work, see Hockley v. West London Timber and Joinery Co., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 504; 83 L. J. K. B. 1520; Bobbey v. W. M. Crosbie & Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 36. But on the other hand, work may be undertaken by him as part of his regular trade or business, and through press of time or for other reason he may contract with others to do it for him, e.g., a speculative builder who sublets the mason work or the plumbing or the brick-setting; or a firm using lighters all over the world for the sale of coal, and wanting another lighter in another place (Dittmar v. Ship Y.

Section 6 Notes.

593, (1909) 1 K. B. 389); then in such contracts he will be a principal to the men employed by the contractor. "Trade or business" means something more than trade or business ad hoc. As the sheriff-substitute said in Graham v. Lewis Picture House, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 374, at p. 376, "It seems extravagant to suggest that a property owner who wants his roof repaired becomes pro tempore a roof-repairer and the master of the tradesman who undertakes the job."

Owing to sect. 48 (2), as to the exercise, etc., of their powers, the liability of corporations under this section is considerably extended (Mulrooney v. Todd and Bradford Corporation, (1909) 1 K. B. 165).

A man has no more rights against a principal than against his employer, e.g., Marks v. Carne, (1909) 2 K. B. 516; where a man being a member of the employer's family was not a "workman" within the Act. So notice given to an employer does not bind the principal who must be served (Griffiths v. Atkinson, (1912) W. C. Rep. 277); and a man having elected to make one liable cannot afterwards proceed against the other (Meier v. Dublin Corporation, ib. 30). See also Geddes v. Dunfermline District Committee, 20 B. W. C. C. 815. Whether both can be rightfully joined together in the same proceedings was left in doubt in Mulrooney v. Todd, (1909) 1 K. B. 165.

Machinery driven by Mechanical Power.]—The question of what was mechanical power was involved but not decided in Walsh v. Hayes, 43 Ir. L. T. 114, and it must be remembered cases under the old Act are misleading, as there the words were machinery driven by steam, water, or other mechanical power, i.e., other mechanical power ejusdem generis with steam and water. Here the words have no such restricted meaning.

A principal who has paid compensation to a workman of the contractor is entitled to be indemnified by any person who otherwise would have been liable to the workman. He can bring an action in the usual way, for this indemnity either in the High Court or in the County Court up to £100, but it can only be settled by arbitration if both parties agree. See sect. 30 and notes thereto. For practice, see rr. 20–28.

Sub-s. 4.]—In Dittmar's Case, supra, work on the barge, it being still in English waters, was held to be on or in or about. For the cases on the words on, in or about, see Ruegg's Employer's Liability and Workmen's Compensation (9th Ed.).

Provision as to cases of bankruptcy
of employer.

7.—(1) Where any employer has entered into a contract with any insurers in respect of any liability under this Act to any workman, then, in the event of the employer becoming bankrupt, or making a composition or arrangement with his creditors, or, if the employer is a company, in the event of the company having commenced to be wound up or a receiver or manager of the company's business or undertaking having been duly appointed, or possession having been taken, by or on behalf of the holders of debentures secured by a floating charge, of any property comprised in or subject to the charge, the rights of the employer against the insurers as respects that liability shall, notwithstanding anything in the enactments relating to bankruptcy and the winding-up of companies, be transferred to and vest in the workman, and upon any such transfer the insurers shall have the same rights and remedies and be subject to the same liabilities as if they were the employer. so however that the insurers shall not be under any greater liability to the workman than they would have been under to the employer.

Section 7.

(2) If the liability of the insurers to the workman is less than the liability of the employer to the workman, the workman may prove for the balance in the bankruptcy or liquidation, or, as the case may be, he may recover the balance from the receiver or manager.

(3) There shall be included amongst the debts which—

4 & 5 Geo. 5,
c. 59.

- (i) under section thirty-three of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, and section one hundred and eighteen of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1913, are in the distribution of the property or assets of a bankrupt, to be paid in priority to all other debts ;
- (ii) under section two hundred and nine of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, are in the winding-up of a company to be paid in priority to all other debts ; and
- (iii) under section one hundred and seven of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, are to be paid in priority to any claim for principal or interest in respect of debentures ;

the amount due in respect of any compensation or liability for compensation accrued before the following date, that is to say :—

- (a) In the first case the date of the receiving order ;
- (b) In the second case the date of the commencement of the winding up of the company ;
- (c) In the third case the date of the appointment of the receiver or of possession being taken mentioned in the said section one hundred and seven.

Where the compensation is a weekly payment, the amount due in respect thereof shall, for the purposes of this provision, be taken to be the amount of the lump sum for which the weekly payment could, if redeemable, be redeemed if the employer made an application for that purpose under this Act.

(4) In the case of the winding up of a company within the meaning of the Stannaries Act, 1887, such an amount as aforesaid, if the compensation is payable to a miner or the dependants of a miner, shall have the like priority as is conferred on wages of miners by section nine of that Act, and that section shall have effect accordingly.

(5) The provisions of this section with respect to preferences and priorities shall not apply where the bankrupt or the company has entered into such a contract with insurers as aforesaid.

3 & 4 Geo. 5,
c. 20.
8 Edw. 7,
c. 69.

(6) This section shall not apply where a company is wound up

Section 7. voluntarily merely for the purposes of reconstruction or of amalgamation with another company.

50 & 51 Vict.
c. 43.

This section is a consolidation of sect. 5 of the Act of 1906, sect. 19 of the Act of 1923, and Sched. 1 of the Act of 1923.

It subrogates the rights of an employer against his insurance company to the workman or workmen where the employer, whether a private person or a company, becomes bankrupt or is unable to pay his creditors, or even where debenture holders take possession of any of the property.

It also makes in all these cases all compensation money due or to become due a preferential debt, and for the full amount of the compensation money (before the Act of 1923 compensation money was only a preferential debt to a limited amount).

If the insurance company is only liable for a limited sum, less than the compensation payable, the balance may be recovered in full from the trustee, receiver or manager (Re J., an arranging debtor, Ex parte Reid, 45 Ir. L. T. 247). See, however, Clemmons Aluminium, Ltd., In re, (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 487. In this case the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, was held not to operate retrospectively, and therefore where a company had gone into liquidation before January 1st, 1924, and a workman had given notice to the liquidator of the company that he claimed to have a preferential claim, it was held that his rights had become fixed and ascertained on the date of the commencement of the liquidation, and that therefore sect. 19 (2) which abolished the limitation of £100, did not operate in his favour, and his preferential payment was limited to £100. When fixed, the sum will be paid into court to abide the order of the county court judge (ib.). See also Snowdown Colliery Co., Ltd., In re; South-Eastern Coalfield Extension Co., Ltd. v. Snowdown Colliery Co., Ltd., (1925) 94 L. J. Ch. 305. An arbitrator has himself no power to order payment (Homer v. Gough, (1912) 2 K. B. 303).

The rights of a workman against his employers' insurers are simply the rights of his employers, and nothing more, nothing less. See, for an example of the extent of the workman's right against the employer's insurers where employer becomes bankrupt, Craig and Another v. Royal Insurance Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 139. If arbitration be a condition precedent to their recovering, it will be equally a condition precedent to his recovering (King v. Phoenix Assurance Co., (1910) 2 K. B. 666); if the payment of calls in a mutual society is a condition of benefiting, but the employers through non-payment have not lost their rights, neither will the workman have lost his (Daff v. Mid. Coll., etc., (1913) 82 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 1340, and 6 B. W. C. C. 799). And in this case as it was an "extraordinary" accident the employers had not lost their right because the insurers had to pay out of the general fund contributed to by all the assured. But in another case (Pailin v. Northern Employers' Mutual Indemnity Co., Ltd., (1925) 2 K. B. 73; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 25) the accident was an "ordinary" accident in which case the insurers had only contracted to pay the ordinary claims when they were put in funds by the assured to enable them to do so and as the employers had ceased, on their bankruptcy, to put the insurers in funds the employers had no right of indemnity against the insurers and consequently neither had the workman.

Where an employer company was insured and both the employer company and the insurance office became insolvent and the workman sought to prove in the liquidation of the employer company, it was held in In re Pethick, Dix & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 5, that there was no right in such a case of preferential payment, and the workman's only remedy was proof against the insurance office. See also In re Renishaw Iron Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 126.

The effect of sub-s. 2 on sub-s. 1 is explained in Thrashbush Coal Co., Ltd. v. M'Inally, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 267, which also considers the position where both employer and insurer are in liquidation.

For a consideration of the employer's position where he is insured, compromises a claim made by a workman, and then the insurance office goes into liquidation, see Empire Guarantee, &c. v. Owen & Sons, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 270.

Section 7
Notes.

Amount of Compensation.

8.—(1) The compensation under this Act where death results from the injury shall be a lump sum of an amount calculated in accordance with the rules hereinafter contained, together with, if the workman leaves a widow or other member of his family (not being a child under the age of fifteen) wholly or partially dependent upon his earnings, and in addition leaves one or more children under the age of fifteen so dependent, an additional sum (hereinafter referred to as the children's allowance) of an amount calculated in accordance with the rules hereinafter contained, so, however, that the lump sum and children's allowance (which shall be added together and dealt with as a single sum) shall not in any case exceed in the aggregate six hundred pounds.

fatal cases.

(2) The lump sum shall be calculated in accordance with the following rules :—

- (i) If the workman leaves any dependants wholly dependent on his earnings, the lump sum shall be a sum equal to his earnings in the employment of the same employer during the three years next preceding the injury, or the sum of two hundred pounds, whichever of those sums is the larger, but not exceeding in any case three hundred pounds ;
- (ii) If the period of the workman's employment by the said employer has been less than the said three years, the amount of his earnings during the said three years shall, for the purposes of the foregoing rule, be deemed to be one hundred and fifty-six times his average weekly earnings during the period of his actual employment under the said employer ;
- (iii) There shall be deducted from the sum as above calculated the amount of weekly payments (if any) made to the workman before his death so, however, as not to reduce the lump sum below two hundred pounds ; and if such weekly payments have been redeemed under this Act, there shall also be deducted the amount paid in respect of the redemption thereof ;
- (iv) If the workman does not leave any dependants wholly dependent on his earnings, but leaves any dependants in part so dependent, the lump sum shall be such sum not exceeding in any case the amount payable under the foregoing rules as may be agreed upon or, in default of agreement, may be determined by arbitration under this Act to be reasonable and proportionate to the injury to the said dependants ;

(v) If the workman leaves no dependants, the lump sum shall be an amount equal to the reasonable expenses of his medical attendance and burial, not exceeding fifteen pounds :

(3) The amount of the children's allowance shall be calculated in accordance with the following rules :—

- (i) If both the widow or other member of the workman's family and such child or children as aforesaid were all wholly dependent on the workman's earnings, the children's allowance shall in respect of each such child be a sum equal to fifteen per cent. of the amount arrived at by multiplying the average weekly earnings of the workman, or where such earnings are less than one pound, then by multiplying one pound, or where such earnings exceed two pounds then by multiplying two pounds, by the number of weeks in the period between the death of the workman and the date when the child will attain the age of fifteen, fractions of a week being disregarded ;
- (ii) If the widow or other member of the workman's family and such child or children as aforesaid, or any of them, were partially dependent on the workman's earnings, the children's allowance shall be such proportion of the sum which would have been payable under the foregoing rule if all such persons had been wholly dependent as may be agreed upon or in default of agreement as may, taking into consideration the amount of the lump sum, be determined by arbitration under this Act to be reasonable ;
- (iii) No deduction shall be made from the children's allowance in respect of the amount of any weekly payments which may have been made to the workman under this Act in respect of the same injury, but if such weekly payments have been redeemed the amount paid in redemption thereof, if and so far as it exceeds the lump sum payable, shall be deducted from the amount of the children's allowance as ascertained under the foregoing rules.

Total Dependency.]—Compensation where the workman leaves dependants totally dependent is generally quite clear. It is three year's earnings but not less than £200, and not more than £300. If he has not worked three years, 156 times his average weekly earnings in the employment (As to the mode of ascertaining average weekly earnings, see sect. 10 of the present Act), but payments made to the workman during his lifetime, or in redemption of his compensation, must be deducted, but so as not to bring the total to less than £200.

Section 8
Notes.

In one case this amount is increased, namely where he leaves dependent children under the age of fifteen. This, so far as it relates to young children, seems right, but why it should be dependent upon there being in addition a widow or member of the family over fifteen seems incomprehensible. The result is that young children totally unprovided for and with no grown-up person to look after and assist them, do not get the increase, whilst if they have, say, a mother or brother or sister of mature age and earning something, they do get it.

This children's allowance is dealt with under sub-s. 3, which must be carefully considered. In this case payments made to the workman during his lifetime are not to be deducted, but amount paid in redemption of such payments is. As to the amount of additional compensation payable in the case of a posthumous child, see Athey v. Pickerings, (1927) 136 L. T. 535; 20 B. W. C. C. 215.

In the peculiar case of Green v. Premier Glynrhonwy Slate Co., (1928) 1 K. B. 561; 97 L. J. K. B. 32; 20 B. W. C. C. 563, the intriguing provisions of sect. 8 had to be dealt with. The workman left a widow and three children, two of whom were totally dependent on his earnings and the third partially dependent. The question was what was the children's allowance provided by the section. The county court judge apparently found that as there was one partial dependent the whole of the children must be treated as partially dependent, although two of them were wholly dependent and assessed compensation under r. ii of sect. 8 (3). This seems to be clearly wrong, but the decision of the Court of Appeal seems questionable upon a similar ground. The court apparently held that as there were children wholly dependent and partially dependent they must all be treated as wholly dependent, and held that they were driven to this conclusion by the wording of the whole section. The decision seems to be contrary to the intention of the Act.

It must be noted that in no case can the compensation, including the children's allowance, exceed £600, but the children may get the full allowance though the widow's allowance is reduced by payments during the workman's lifetime (Malcolm v. Barber, Walker & Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 516.)

Note.—Here the widow by appealing on behalf of her children was not attempting to approbate and reprobate the award at the same time.

An illegitimate grandchild (under the age of fifteen) of a workman who meets with a fatal accident in the course of or arising out of his employment, is a "child" within the meaning of sub-s. 1 above, and the workman in addition having left a widow wholly dependent upon his earnings, such grandchild becomes entitled to the additional compensation (Pritchard v. Bettisfield Colliery, Ltd., (1925) 2 K. B. 284; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 49), and on the construction of this involved and peculiar section it has now been held in the case of Faulkner v. Owners of Ship Sutton, (1927) 1 K. B. 207, as it was held in Scotland in the case of Campbell v. Portland Colliery Co., 19 B. W. C. C. 594, that where the deceased left a mother who was, of course, a member of the family, and two sisters under the age of fifteen, such sisters were held to be "children" left by the deceased, and so entitled to receive the additional compensation. But the employers of a deceased workman are not liable to pay compensation in respect of the accident which caused his death to the illegitimate children of his widow by another man born before her marriage to the deceased. See Scott v. L. N. E. Rail. Co., (1926) 2 K. B. 204; (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 135; 19 B. W. C. C. 457.

The Court of Appeal will not generally inquire into the amount of the award when the county court judge awards a sum within the statutory maximum (Healey v. Reilly, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 89). The county court judge should state in terms whether the dependency is total or partial. The scheme of the Act makes a great distinction between total and partial dependants, and the same conditions do not apply to the two cases, per

Section 8 Notes.

Lord Cozens-Hardy, M.R. in Whittaker v. J. Joicey & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 548. The award may connote partial dependency without any formal finding (Ford v. Oakdale Colliery Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 46). In total dependency the amount is fixed as specified (note the words in sect. 8 (2) (1) "in the employment of the same employer," words which were explained in Greenwood v. Joseph Nall & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 346, where it is pointed out that a change of grade is a change of "employer").

There may be total dependency in the case of a posthumous illegitimate child (Harris v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 527).

Taylor v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., (1916) W. C. & I. 325, is a curious case. There A. married B. and had three children. A. went to live with C. B. joined army. A. had illegitimate child by C. A. received B.'s separation allowance. C. killed by accident arising, etc. Held the illegitimate child was totally dependent, and that had it been proved that the separation allowance went into a common fund it would not follow that C.'s child was not totally dependent on C.'s earnings.

Partial Dependency.—“A person is not to be deemed a partial dependant of another unless he was dependent partially on contributions from that other person for the provision of the ordinary necessities of life suitable for persons in his class and position.” See sect. 4 (2) of the present Act. As to this question now see decisions of the H. L. in Welsh Navigation Steam Coal Co. v. Evans, and Fife Coal Co. v. McArthur, and remarks thereon as to cases affected or overruled on p. 1298. There was formerly considerable difficulty where the partial dependant died before the award was made, and it was held in such a case the compensation must bear a proportion to the injury received by that dependant. See Phillips v. Kershaw, Leese & Co., (1920) 3 K. B. 297; 89 L. J. K. B. 1016. This is all provided for now by the Act, sect. 2 (3). Where partial dependant dies now before award, nothing is payable.

In arriving at the amount there are two limits. One practice is: Find the actual benefit received, reduce to a weekly average, and by analogy with total dependency multiply by 156. See Smith v. S.S. "Glendalough", (1919) W. C. & I. 365, where this mode was adopted. The other is: Find the amount payable for total dependency, and simply deduct the capital value of the independent income. This was so done in Osmond v. Campbell and Harrison, (1905) 2 K. B. 852; followed in Littleford v. Connell, 3 B. 1. Here a woman earned 1s. 11d. a week, lost her husband, and the arbitrator gave her as totally dependent 156l., and deducted 6l. on account of her independent earnings. The reasonableness of either limit will depend on the particular facts of every case. Either adopted as an invariable rule may prove absurd. E.g., a mother receives, say, 10s. a week from a son earning 2l. wages. Wholly dependent she would receive 300l. If she earned 1s. 11d. (or 11s. 1d., the result would be the same) she would only receive 10s. $\times 156 = 78l.$ By the other method of computation, whether her son allowed her 2s. 6d., 10s., or even 1l. a week, she would still receive the same, namely 300l., less 1s. 11d. or 11s. 1d. $\times 156$, as the case might be. To find what is therefore reasonable, regard must be had to deceased's wages, dependant's income, and the amount allowed—three variants, not two. To work this out, no better system can be found than that of Judge Parry in Turner v. Miller, 3 B. 307, when awarding 125l., arrived at by no particular method: “I considered that the son had been a substantial contributor to the family for many years, and would have continued to be so had he lived, and assessed the money to be paid on that basis.” In Tamworth Colliery Co. v. Hall, (1911) A. C. 665, a father earned weekly 16s. 9d. in a colliery, and 13s. as a barber. His boy, maintained at home, earned 6s. 11d. in the colliery, and was worth 6s. further, helping him as barber. He was killed, and his father claimed as partially dependent. It was held dependency is a question of fact. The contribution of 6s. 11d.

Section 8

a week might or might not balance the cost of the maintenance. But the boy also was of value helping his father. This could not be reckoned as earnings being made as a member of the family, but there was no reason this claim should not be set off against his maintenance. This might leave a balance to the good contributed to the family chest, which the arbitrator would have to determine. So the facts presented themselves to the House of Lords. What weight (if any) was to be given to the independent income of the father (if any) was not discussed. Osmond's Case, supra, perfectly right on its own facts, could not possibly apply. Even if he were dependent and the earnings of the boy estimated at 6s. 11d. plus 6s., and with no deduction for maintenance, still such sum would be more than swamped by deducting the capital value of his own independent income. Here the old general practice might be fairest to give 156 times the amount of the weekly surplus. But even for this there is no rule, and the whole is a question of fact in which every incident at the time of the death, the salient period, must be considered. Cheverton v. Oceanic S.S. (No. 2), (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 462 ("The Titanic" disaster), is an extreme case. The deceased contributed to partial dependants 30s. a week, and the arbitrator gave the maximum 300*l.* But see Gourlay v. Murray, 45 S. L. R. 577, where the court did not approve of full amount given to an illegitimate child unwillingly supported by the father. Subject to the maximum in fixing a sum reasonable, etc., an arbitrator may take into account funeral expenses (Bevan v. Crawshaw, 4 W. C. C. 110). Evidence of the earnings which the workman would probably have earned had he survived is relevant (Fraser v. Fairfield, etc., Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 129).

9.—(1) The compensation under this Act where total or partial incapacity for work results from the injury shall be a weekly payment during the incapacity of an amount calculated in accordance with the rules hereinafter contained : Amount in cases of total and partial incapacity.

(See these rules below.)

Provided that—

- (a) if the incapacity lasts less than four weeks, no compensation shall be payable in respect of the first three days; and
- (b) in fixing the amount of the weekly payment, regard shall be had to any payment, allowance, or benefit which the workman may receive from the employer during the period of his incapacity; and
- (c) the weekly payment shall in no case exceed thirty shillings.

(2) The rules for calculating the weekly payment in the case of total incapacity shall be—

- (i) The weekly payment shall subject to rule (ii) be a sum not exceeding fifty per cent. of the workman's average weekly earnings during the previous twelve months, if he has been so long employed by the same employer, but if not, then for any less period during which he has been in the employment of the same employer :

- (ii) Where the maximum weekly payment calculated according to rule (i) is less than twenty-five shillings, the workman shall be entitled during such total incapacity to a weekly addition equal to one-half of the difference between such maximum weekly payment and the sum of twenty-five shillings or his average weekly earnings, whichever is the less, and such addition shall, for all the purposes of this Act, be treated as if it were part of the weekly payment.

(3) The rules for calculating the weekly payment in the case of partial incapacity shall be—

(i) If the maximum weekly payment would, had the incapacity been total incapacity, have amounted to twenty-five shillings a week or upwards, the weekly payment in case of partial incapacity shall be one-half the difference between the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident and the average weekly amount which he is earning or is able to earn in some suitable employment or business after the accident :

(ii) If the maximum weekly payment would, had the incapacity been total incapacity, have amounted with such addition, if any, as is provided by rule (i) in the case of total incapacity, to less than twenty-five shillings, the weekly payment in case of partial incapacity shall be a sum bearing the same proportion to the said difference as the said maximum weekly payment with such addition as aforesaid bears to the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident.

(4) If a workman who has so far recovered from the injury as to be fit for employment of a certain kind proves to the satisfaction of the judge of the county court that he has taken all reasonable steps to obtain, and has failed to obtain, such employment, and that his failure to obtain such employment is a consequence, wholly or mainly, of the injury, the judge shall order that his incapacity shall, for the purposes of this Act, continue to be treated as total incapacity for such period, and subject to such conditions, as may be provided by the order, without prejudice however to the right of review conferred by this Act :

Provided that every such order shall be made subject to the condition that it shall cease to be in force if the workman receives unemployment benefit.

Regard shall be had to any payment, allowance, or benefit.—See generally, as to the meaning of “payment, allowance or benefit” the important case of Considine v. McNery, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 114. This case was considered at some length in Watts v. Manchester Corporation, (1917) W. C. & I. 151, and in Langford v. Port of London Authority, (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 887. These are concerned primarily with the question whether the right to participate in benefits from a pension fund contributed to by the employers is within clause 3. As a rule all payments pending incapacity should be considered. It enables an employer to assist at once an injured man, knowing he has this qualified right to be indemnified. The parties agreed to settle for 10*l.*, which was paid. Though the court would not pass the agreement, it was held that regard would have to be had to this sum paid (Horsman v. Glasgow Navigation Co., 3 B. 27). It is immaterial that the workman's application for compensation relates only to a period subsequent to the time when the payment, allowance, or benefit was received (Porter v. Whitbread & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 59). Amounts received aliunde, as in poor relief, do not fall within the provision (Gilroy v. Mackie, 46 S. L. R. 325). So under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, whilst a seaman is not to receive overlapping benefits, yet this paragraph does not operate to deprive him of compensation on a mere technicality (McDermott v. Tintoretto, (1911) A. C. 35). Overpayments made prior to the commencement of the proceedings should not be taken into account (Doyle v. Cork Steam Packet Co., (1912) W. C. Rep. 203; Flynn v. Burgess and Others, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 238).

“Where . . . partial Incapacity results.” — Weekly Payment.—The average weekly earnings prior to the accident is fixed once and for all, and in all subsequent proceedings is res judicata.

Important questions arise as to the meaning of “incapacity for work.” A man may be quite capable of work and yet be incapacitated, because employers won't give him work because of his injuries (Ball v. Hunt, (1912) W. C. Rep. 261). Again, the incapacity must in fact result from the injury (Ystradowen Colliery Co. v. Griffiths, (1909) 2 K. B. 533). The onus is on the applicant to prove incapacity due to accident (Brownlee v. Coltness Iron Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 235); on the employer to prove an intervening cause (Bown v. Meggitt & Jones, (1917) W. C. & I. 40). If it be due to an unreasonable refusal to undergo an operation, it is not incapacity resulting from the injury (Walsh v. Locke & Co. (Newland), Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 95), but the onus is upon the employer to prove that the refusal of the workman to undergo the operation was an unreasonable refusal (Fife Coal Co. v. Cant, (1921) 90 L. J. H. L. 69). See also Fyfe v. Fife Coal Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 548. In this case the H. L. held that the question whether a workman's refusal to undergo treatment was reasonable or unreasonable was a question of fact. Secus, if the refusal was reasonable (Molamphy v. Sheridan and Others, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 19). The following cases may also be referred to where the incapacity was due to obesity: Clark v. George Taylor & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. p. 448; unskilful surgical treatment: Della Rocca v. Stanley Jones & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 33; old age: Lewis v. Wrexham and Acton Collieries Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 275; unnecessary operation: Lakey v. Blair & Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 78. A man may be incapacitated by the injury, although a collateral cause also prevents him earning wages, e.g., being shut up in an asylum (Slater v. Blyth Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 38), or prison (McNally v. Furness, Withy & Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 717), or internment (Cargo Fleet Iron Co. v. Funck, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 87); or heart disease (Harwood v. Wyken Colliery Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 317). If it be shown on an original application that the workman is capable of light work, the onus is upon him to show that he is unable to obtain suitable light work (Williams v. Ruabon Coal and Coke Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 32). If the man is able to do and get his old work, he is not incapacitated although the risk he runs in so working is greater than before, e.g., a one-eyed man risking the loss of the remaining eye, but whether such employment is suitable or not is a question of fact (Law v. William Baird & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 140, as explained in Burt v. Fife Coal Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 629). See also Pearson v. Archibald Russell, Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 71; Jackson v. Hunslet Engine Co., ibid., 183. If suitable work at his old wages which he can do is offered without clogging conditions, the workman is not incapacitated from earning wages, and cannot refuse the offer and claim compensation (Keavans v.

Section 9 Notes.

Mundy, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 180). See also Potts v. Guildford Syndicate, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 330. The position is, of course, different if no light work is available (Bonsall v. Mid. Coll., etc., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 331). Assuming incapacity, a workman is not disentitled from recovering compensation because he fails to return to work (Chapel Coal Co., Ltd. v. Devlin, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 621). For the position where the employer was prevented from giving the old work by a Trade Union, see Thompson v. Johnson and Nephew, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 333; Williams v. Oakwood Colliery, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 238. Compare Woodhouse v. Midland Ry., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 595; Webster v. Harrison, (1920) 89 L. J. K. B. 1077.

Workman under age.]—Special provisions for assessing the compensation of a workman under twenty-one years of age are gone, but now the case of any workman receiving small wages is regulated by sect. 9 (2) (ii) above.

An infant or indeed any workman who enjoyed the war additions compensation is entitled to keep it. See sect. 1 of Act of 1923 (not repealed).

An infant workman may have his compensation reviewed after six months, if he would, at the time of review, have been earning more wages. See sect. 11 (2) (3) of present Act.

N.B.—The provision in sub-s. 4 above is of great importance, for it enables the judge when he is satisfied that a man can do particular kinds of work, but cannot get any of them in consequence of his accident, to treat the incapacity as total incapacity, though this must cease if the workman chooses to receive unemployment benefit.

Rules for determining earnings.

10. For the purposes of the provisions of this Act relating to "earnings" and "average weekly earnings" of a workman, the following rules shall be observed:—

- (i) Average weekly earnings shall be computed in such manner as is best calculated to give the rate per week at which the workman was being remunerated: Provided that where by reason of the shortness of the time during which the workman has been in the employment of his employer or the casual nature of the employment, or the terms of the employment, it is impracticable at the date of the accident to compute the rate of remuneration, regard may be had to the average weekly amount which, during the twelve months previous to the accident, was being earned by a person in the same grade employed at the same work by the same employer, or, if there is no person so employed, by a person in the same grade employed in the same class of employment and in the same district;
- (ii) Where the workman had entered into concurrent contracts of service with two or more employers under which he worked at one time for one such employer and at another time for another such employer, his average weekly earnings shall be computed as if his earnings under all such contracts were earnings in the employment of the employer for whom he was working at the time of the accident;

- (iii) Employment by the same employer shall be taken to mean employment by the same employer in the grade in which the workman was employed at the time of the accident, uninterrupted by absence from work due to illness or any other unavoidable cause ;
- (iv) Where the employer has been accustomed to pay to the workman a sum to cover any special expenses entailed on him by the nature of his employment, the sum so paid shall not be reckoned as part of the earnings ;
- (v) Upon request of the workman to the employer liable to pay compensation, that employer shall furnish in writing a list of the earnings of that workman upon which the amount of the average weekly earnings may be calculated for the purpose of determining the amount of any weekly payment under this Act.

Section 10.

This last sub-section appeared first in the 1923 Act.

Earnings have long been held to include overtime, extras, tips (see G.W.R. v. Helps, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 287), profits, board and lodging, a house rent free, and such like, and the actual value to the man is the measure of value (Dothie v. MacAndrew, (1908) 1 K. B. 803 ; Green v. G. N. of Scotland Ry. Co., (1919) W. C. & I. 160). On the other hand, incidental advantages, as tuition, are not to be reckoned. No deductions are to be made for small payments a man has to make out of his wages, e.g., as for oil for a miner's lamp, or the sharpening of picks, essentials for a well-equipped workman to do his work with (Abram Coal Co. v. Southern, (1903) A. C. 306). Probably, expenses a man has to so incur to make himself personally fit—say, a joiner, who has to provide his own tools—would follow this decision, though given under the old Act and before par. (iv) was added. In M'Kee v. Stein, 47 S. L. R. 39, the Court of Session went so far as to allow no deduction for dynamite a miner had to provide in the course of his work (contrast Jones v. International Anthracite Collieries Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 49) ; but in Skipp v. Frodingham Iron and Steel Co., (1913) W. C. Rep. 230, without directly disagreeing, the Court of Appeal held that the terms of the contract—a gang to receive a lump sum, deduct cost of powder, and then divide—did not even raise the question, as the man's earnings were his share of the balance, neither more nor less. But apart from this, it is clear that there is all the difference possible between providing dynamite, which might be a very large item, and is only supplied this way to prevent wastefulness, and providing one's own personal tools and keeping them in order. Equally, where a man at his own expense gets another to help him (M'Kee v. Stein, 47 S. L. R. 39). In M. Ry. v. Sharpe, 6 W. C. C. 119, the House of Lords held that allowances to a guard in respect of board and lodging when away were to be included in earnings. This is clearly changed by this sub-paragraph.

In Williams v. "Maritime" (Owners), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 97—where the question was whether the captain of a ship was a "workman"—it appeared that he received £20 per month and a gratuity of £48 per annum if he kept the ship free of all damage and claims. If he did not keep the ship so free his remuneration was to be reduced to £16 per month and no gratuity. The ship was lost and it was held that the remuneration must be taken at £16 per month + the value of board and lodging.

Measure of Earnings.—Where an injured workman ceases to work as a servant, and commences business on his own account, the measure of his earnings will not always be governed by his profits or losses, but may be by what he would have to pay a man to do the work he is then doing (Duberley v. Mace, (1913) W. C. Rep. 199). For the position of a coal-cutting contractor see Logan v. Shotts Iron Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 86.

Computation of Weekly Earnings.—Average weekly earnings are to be computed in such manner as is best calculated to give the rate per week at which the workman was being remunerated. In considering his remuneration no account must be taken of earnings received under a contract of service not within the Act (Soles v. Abbott, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 124). The judge, however, is entitled to take into account wages paid by other employers (Twidale v. L. N. E. Rail. Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 455; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 292). See as to the general meaning of the words, "average weekly earnings," Cue v. Port of London Authority, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 481; 83 L. J. K. B. 1445. To find the weekly rate we first divide the amount earned by the weeks in which it was earned, noting, if a man takes a week off, he will not earn anything in it, nor will such week be included in those worked. Next, the idea of the Act is to take a period long enough for incidentals and accidentals to average themselves out—fifty-two weeks being the usual time indicated when, if there are some weeks in which no work is done, then for working purposes his year will be not one of fifty-two weeks, but one of fifty-two weeks less such weeks. In Bailey v. Kenworthy, (1908) 1 K. B. 441, where these rules are given, a man earned 82*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* in forty-nine weeks, but the full working year was only fifty weeks out of fifty-two. Thus the average rate at which he was being remunerated was $\frac{82\text{l. } 2\text{s. } 1\text{d.}}{49} \times \frac{50}{52}$.

Whilst weeks in which work could be done, but is not done, are to be disregarded, the same rule does not apply to broken weeks, e.g., in a colliery where a miner as a practice will often only work three or four days a week at most, and therefore a week is to mean an aggregate of days amounting to a week at the rate of as many days to the week as is usual to the employment (dictum of Cozens-Hardy, M.R., on Anslow's Case, and Carter v. Laing, 45 S. L. R. 938). The first part of the rule is unsatisfactory, e.g., a man earns 2*l.* a week, "plays" alternate weeks and is killed. If he has been employed three full years, his dependants will only be entitled to his aggregate earnings of 156*l.*; but if for a day less, they will be entitled to 156 times his average earnings of nearly 2*l.* a week, or the maximum of 300*l.* So as the man himself, if only incapacitated, will be entitled to half 2*l.* as compensation or exactly what satisfied him when working, viz., 1*l.* a week; therefore it will not grieve him if he never does another stroke of work in his life. This part of the rule has not yet been approved, save as an obiter in the House of Lords in Anslow v. Cannock Chase Colliery Co., (1909) A. C. 435. In this case the other part of the rule, much to the workmen's loss, was approved. Here a man, owing to stoppages, etc., could only be employed thirty-six weeks in a year and was employed only thirty-three weeks, in which he earned 68*l.* Thus the amount he was held entitled to was $\frac{68\text{l.}}{33} \times \frac{36}{52}$. Being practically, as he well knew, a 2*l.* a week man, he was much aggrieved at being thus rated at less than 30*s.*, and appealed to the Lords, but without success. In White v. Wiseman, (1912) W. C. Rep. 403, a man employed first by time and then by piece-work, had busy, ordinary, and slack days. On some he worked overtime, on the others there was not enough for a full day's work. The arbitrator found this was an abnormal incident, and so only regarded the busy and ordinary days. The Court of Appeal had little doubt the slack time was as much a normal incident as the busy times, and required all to be taken into account. So as regards illness, it must be regarded reasonably. To regard two weeks' illness where eight weeks' employment was taken as the basis of calculation, would mean a man would be expected to be ill two out of every eight weeks. But in a long period some illness is rightly to be expected and should be considered (Turner v. Port of London Authority, (1913) W. C. Rep. 123). Similarly if the workman is in the habit of only working, e.g., as fruit picker, for a few days a year that should be taken into consideration (Williams v. Hollings, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 540). Where a man obtains successive employments the average weekly earnings may be the total yearly earnings divided by 52 (Calver v. Groom and Symonds, (1918) W. C. & I. 364). For the position where stoppage of work is due to the war, see Griffiths v. W. Gilbertson & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 359.

Where a workman, a dairyman, is assisted voluntarily by his sisters to whom he makes an allowance, that allowance must not be deducted in estimating his average weekly earnings (Roper v. Freke, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 377).

Provided that . . . Shortness of Time, etc.]—A man's own history, however short, may furnish the best data for computing his compensation. It should be long enough for all incidents to average themselves out, or to furnish an average by inference. But where not sufficiently long, an arbitrator may arrive at his conclusion in any way he thinks best. He may be guided by what the man has previously earned where similarly employed—note be guided—or inquire into the earnings of others as specified. If again he simply has regard to such earnings, merely takes them as a guide, not as a precise measure, his conclusions cannot be interfered with.

See Bones v. Associated Portland Cement Manufacturers (1900), Ltd., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 456, where a very small sum was earned by a schoolboy during his holidays.

Same Grade.]—“In my opinion, the provisions of sched. I. (2) of 1906 Act (now above sect.) are intended as a guide, not a fetter” (Farwell, L.J., in Perry v. Wright, (1908) 1 K. B. 441). What is really wanted is to find the earnings of a man similarly employed, to refer to as a guide. See Cox v. Trollope & Sons, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 270, for an example of the way this guide may be employed. Whether grade be the same or not, if one man can command four days a week and another only three, the arbitrator should certainly have regard to this fundamental difference (Barnett v. Port of London Authority, (1913) W. C. Rep. 250). Personal qualifications as well as grade should be taken into consideration (Snell v. Bristol Corporation, (1914) 7 B. W. C. C. 236). Special qualifications in the employment itself should be regarded but not outside it, as where a skilled artisan takes work as a casual labourer, say, with a different employer.

Change of grade is a question of fact, and operates as a new employment. A temporary change, even with change of designation, as from hobbler to mate, is not conclusive (Jury v. Atalanta, (1912) 3 K. B. 366). For the position where the grade was changed after filing of declaration of liability, and in consequence of a cause unconnected with the accident, see Thompson v. Richard Johnson and Nephew, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 333. Earnings in mixed grades, i.e., where men in one grade are employed off and on in another, may be well if not best calculated by adding the earnings in both together, and dividing by the relevant period. The time in either grade is obviously too short to form a conclusive basis of estimating, and therefore an arbitrator must be guided by other factors. In fact, if an arbitrator will only preface his award with the remark that he thinks the time too short to be solely guided by it, and he has to do the best he can from the other evidence before him and says no more, appeals will be even less successful than they now are (Edge v. Gorton, (1912) 3 K. B. 360).

Unavoidable Cause.]—When ascertaining a particular workman's wages by means of comparison with a grade of workmen in the same employment, then the Act it is assumed means that interruption of the work of the grade due to illness or other unavoidable cause is not to be taken into account. Absence from work owing to a strike is not absence due to unavoidable cause (Price v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefolds, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 175).

Section 10
Notes.

Concurrent Contracts.—In Brandy v. S.S. Raphael, (1911) A. C. 413, a reservist's pay in the Navy was held to be received under a concurrent contract. This case was relied upon in the case of Harrison v. New Brynmally Colliery Co. in the Wrexham County Court, where a Territorial paid while in camp was treated as having received pay under a contract concurrent with his contract of service as a collier. Where a man has actually been employed three years with the same master, the compensation will be the aggregate of such earnings without including such concurrent earnings (Buckley v. London Docks, 2 B. 327). To be concurrent, the services need not be ejusdem generis (Lloyd v. Midland Railway, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 105). For the effect or non-effect of a railway company's rules forbidding employees working at other employments, see Lloyd v. Midland Railway, supra. But the remuneration received must be received under a contract of service. In Wild v. John Brown & Co., (1918) W. C. & I. 352, where a miner was also branch delegate of his Trade Union and also received payment from the checkweigh fund to inspect on behalf of the men abnormal plans, it was held that these earnings were not earnings under a concurrent contract. For the position where the person is employed regularly by A. and in work of a casual nature by others, see In re Hugh Peoples and Belfast S.S. Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 318.

If a workman is injured while employed by A. and compensation is paid, and then the workman is employed by B., again injured, and paid maximum compensation, the weekly payments still being made by A. may be ended until further order (M'Kinstrey v. Anchinlia Coal Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 327).

Earning or is able to earn.—Under the old Act, the only questions were: What was the man earning? What is he earning? (James v. Ocean Coal Co., (1904) 2 K. B. 213). The words, shall bear such relation to the amount of that difference as under the circumstances of the case may appear proper, were added to the Act but repealed by 1923 Act. These necessitated an inquiry into other facts. In Bevan v. Energlyn Collieries, (1912) W. C. Rep. 126, a miner had been earning 2l. 19s. 1d., and at the time of review was earning only 1l. 16s. The arbitrator awarded him 11s. 7d. as compensation. This made his total receipts 2l. 7s. 7d. for the week. But owing to the Eight Hours Act, had he been in full work and had never been injured, he could only have earned 2l. Thus it was held that though an arbitrator is bound by the difference between the two limits, yet when he determines what proportion of that difference to give, viz., 10, 20, 40, 60 per cent. or even the whole, he must consider all the circumstances of the case, of which such change in a scale of wages would be one. Compare Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., Ltd. v. M'Neill, (1918) W. C. & I. 282; Rennoldson v. Ellerman-Wilson Line, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 229; Sheldon v. Butterley Co., (1919) W. C. & I. 311; Cory Bros. & Co., Ltd. v. Tarr, (1917) W. C. & I. 271, where a general rise in wages was taken into account.

Where, after total incapacity, a workman is given light work and some compensation, and, owing to general rise in wages, he eventually earns at the light work his pre-accident wage, and subsequently, owing to further change in the condition of the labour market, either the wages earned at the light work fall below the pre-accident wage, or no light work is available, there being no change in the man's physical condition, his right to receive compensation for partial incapacity revives. See judgments in the House of Lords in the cases of Portland Colliery Co. v. Murray; John Watson, Ltd. v. Quinn; and Wm. Dixon, Ltd. v. Madden, reported together, (1923) A. C. 566. See also Lewis v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefolds, Ltd., (1928) 1 K. B. 20, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 664; 20 B. W. C. C. 359, in which the Court of Appeal, following the above cases, held, that when a workman is partially incapacitated and being employed at partial wages and compensation by the former firm, his right to receive proper compensation revives even where the cesser of work is due to economic causes, and it appears he would probably have been unemployed in any event. This case was followed in Bevan v. Nixon's Navigation Co., (1928) 97 L. J. K. B. 179 ; 20 B. W. C. C. 622, where the C. A. held that the arbitrator had properly applied the principles laid down in the above case ; but where the injury is such—as in the case of a small limp—and the workman does not prove that it affects either his capacity for work, or his opportunities of obtaining work, he is not entitled even to a declaration of liability (Williams v. Tredegar Iron & Coal Co., (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 722 ; 20 B. W. C. C. 480).

Where a workman partially incapacitated has been given light work in lieu of compensation, and such employment fails by reason of a strike, the right to compensation revives. See Hamilton v. Shelton Iron, Steel and Coal Co., Leigh v. The Same, and Timmins v. The Same, reported together, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 295.

If a man's earning capacity is reduced by two causes, only one of which is due to the accident, the other cause must be taken count of (Hoyland Brick Co. v. Ward, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 33). If it appears that for reasons apart from the accident the injured person did not wish to work, the probabilities are that such person's earning capacity is nil (Abbey v. James Nichols & Sons, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 97).

If an injured man is employed, he will get the benefit or otherwise of a general rise or fall in wages (Merry v. Cunningham, 46 S. L. R. 312). So where a man goes into business, the measure of his earnings will be not his profits nor losses, but what he would have to pay another as a servant to do his work (Paterson v. Moore, 47 S. L. R. 30 ; Duberly v. Mace, (1913) W. C. Rep. 199).

Compensation may be calculated by ascertaining wages earned before and after the accident without taking into account the amount the man might have earned (Heathcote v. Haunchwood Collieries, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 292, reversing (1917) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 140). The employment to be considered is the employment out of which the accident arose and it is the earnings in that employment that are to be contrasted with the earnings after the accident and the fact that formerly the applicant was employed in another employment was held to be irrelevant in Ling v. De Dion Bouton, Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 315.

Able to Earn.—Generally.—All the cases, infra, must now be considered in the light of sub-s. 4 of sect. 9 (ante, p. 1310), which enables the arbitrator to take into consideration the question whether inability to obtain suitable work is due wholly or mainly to the injury. "If he would have got work but for the accident, but cannot otherwise, it is because of the accident" (Kennedy, L.J., in Dobby v. Pease, 2 B. 370). This failure may be due to (a) physical incapacity ; (b) want of suitable employment ; (c) disability created by the Act itself. As to (a), physical capacity is a pure question of fact ; as to (b), it is not necessary the employment should be the same as before done by the man, and the one test is : is a man reasonable or not in wanting or refusing a certain class of work ? He has lost an eye. It may be reasonable to refuse work to imperil his remaining eye ; it may not. Cases are both ways, and it is solely for the arbitrator to decide. His discretion is practically unlimited. See, e.g., Housley v. Hadfields, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 456 ; Penman v. Smith's Dry Dock Co., Ltd., ibid., 452. In Radcliffe v. Pacific Navigation Co., (1910) 1 K. B. 685, a ship's butcher, two years after losing his first finger, had his full compensation restored because there was no suitable employment for such an unfortunate. In Hargreave v. Haughhead Coal Co., (1912) A. C. 319, a man had a right eye destroyed by accident, and was refused a suspensory order. Presumably the loss of his eye would never affect his obtaining suitable employment. Compare Hart v. Cory Brothers, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 522. (c) Disability due to the Act is responsible for half the anomalies and most of the difficulties in administering this part of the Act. Men can do work, and but for the Act would get work, and employers with two men to choose from choose the one least likely to make a claim. This is a real and serious disability due to the accident. It would be met by allowing such to contract out of the Act. Ball v. Hunt, (1912) A. C. 496, is a striking case of incapacity caused by the Act. A man lost the sight of an eye, its appearance being unchanged. He got his work and did his work. An accident to this sightless eye necessitated its removal, and he could get work no more. But for the Act employers would not mind whether a man had one eye or two, so long as he did his work.

If the result of the accident, though not to entirely incapacitate for work, renders the workman an "odd lot" in the labour market, the onus is on the employer to show that work of the kind which the workman is able to do is available (Cardiff Corporation v. Hall, (1911) 1 K. B. 1009; 4 B. W. C. C. 159). See also Yates & Thom, Ltd. v. Duxbury, (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 82; Kear v. Shelton Iron, Steel & Coal Co., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 123; United Steel Companies, Ltd. v. Clarke, (1926) 134 L. T. 456; 95 L. J. K. B. 684, and Higgs v. Sloan and Davidson, (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 662. See cases on last page.

Quite recently the question whether or not a workman can be described as an "odd lot" in the labour market has received special attention from the Court of Appeal. The principle enunciated appears to be that the workman is not an "odd lot" merely because he is incapacitated from following his own employment, neither is it sufficient generally to show that other fields of labour which he is competent to engage in are closed to him by the conditions of the labour market (H.M. Secretary of State for War v. Willoughby, (1922) W. C. & I. R. 171; Foster and others v. Wharnccliffe Woodmoor Colliery Co., (1922) 2 K. B. 701; (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 5; (1922) 15 B. W. C. C. 136; Gaffney v. Chorley Colliery Co., (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 1; (1922) 15 B. W. C. C. 158; Middleton v. Wharnccliffe Woodmoor Colliery Co., (1922) 15 B. W. C. C. 166; Jones v. Wharnccliffe Woodmoor Colliery Co., (1922) 15 B. W. C. C. 172, in which cases the decision in Kear v. Shelton Iron, Steel & Coal Co. (supra), is considered and explained.

Physical Incapacity.—What steps must a man take to get well? Every rule reduces to one. He must act reasonably, and of what is reasonable the arbitrator is sole judge. It may be reasonable for him to undergo an operation; it may not. The arbitrator must decide reasonably. See, e.g., Joseph Dolan & Sons v. Ward, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 274. So if through idleness and loafing a man lets his muscles get soft so that he cannot work, an arbitrator may find his incapacity is no longer due to the accident (David v. Windsor Steam Coal Co., 4 B. 177). But an arbitrator may not anticipate and reduce an award from a future date. Such award will be bad (Baker v. Jewell, (1910) 2 K. B. 673—which, however, does not invalidate awards made before the determination of that case (Evans v. Barrow Haematite Steel Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 355)). He can, however, effect the same thing by making an order for the time being and adjourning the hearing. This is useful in cases of neurasthenia, where a man will take no steps for his recovery. Neurasthenia may be as much the result of the accident as any other injury. Whilst it exists, an arbitrator cannot end the award, but can direct the man to take reasonable steps for his recovery, as indicated by evidence—he is not a doctor to say what in particular—and if on the adjournment he has not done so, he can then end or reduce the payments. As a rule, following the advice of one's doctor is strong evidence of such reasonable conduct, but it is not conclusive (O'Neil v. John Brown & Co., (1913) W. C. Rep. 235). See sect. 1, sub-s. 1, "Consequent Results due to Unreasonable Conduct, etc." A man may be suffering from incapacity and entitled to an award though his old employers offer him his old work at his old wages (Jackson v. Hunslet Engine Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 389).

Suitable Employment.—See notes to next sect., "Review."

Reviews of weekly payments.

11.—(1) Any weekly payment may be reviewed at the request either of the employer or of the workman, and on such review may be ended, diminished, or increased, subject to the maximum hereinbefore in section nine provided, and the amount of payment shall, in default of agreement, be settled by arbitration under this Act.

(2) Where the workman was at the date of the accident under twenty-one years of age and the review takes place more than six months after the accident *and the application for the review is made before or within six months after the workman attains the age of twenty-one years, the amount of the weekly payment may be increased to such an amount as would have been awarded if the workman had at the time of accident been earning the weekly sum which he would probably have been earning at the date of the review if he had remained uninjured.

* Words in italics substituted by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1926.

(3) Where the review takes place more than six months after the accident, and it is claimed and proved that, had the workman remained uninjured and continued in the same class of employment as that in which he was employed at the date of the accident, his average weekly earnings during the twelve months immediately preceding the review would, as a result of fluctuations in rates of remuneration, have been greater or less by more than twenty per cent. than his average weekly earnings during the twelve months previous to the accident (or if the weekly payment has been previously varied on a review during the twelve months previous to that review or the last of such reviews), the weekly payment shall be varied so as to make it such as it would have been if the rates of remuneration obtaining during the twelve months previous to the review had obtained during the twelve months previous to the accident.

For the purposes of this subsection "review" includes a review under the provision of any Act repealed by this Act corresponding to this section.

Under clause (2) the workman was bound to make his application for increased compensation before he attained twenty-one years (Jones v. Meiro's Collieries, (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 754, now before he is twenty-one and six months. See above.

A weekly payment may be reviewed at the instance of workman or employer at any time, but there must be a change of circumstances, otherwise the arbitrator would be asked to alter his own award. A change in the workman's physical condition is a change of circumstances. In most cases the question for review turns upon what the workman at the time of review is able to earn. See ante under sect. 10; but it must never be forgotten that since the provision in the Act of 1923 (now sub-s. 4 of sect. 9 of the present Act) the arbitrator must consider the question not only of the capacity to work, but the capacity to obtain work. (See note to sect. 9, above.)

Practice.—Suspension of compensation pending review (r. 59); execution (rr. 82-84).

A Review is not a re-hearing, nor available as a new trial, though in The Tync-Tees S. Co. v. Whitteck, (1913) W. C. Rep. 579, it was held that an outstanding question was not a condition precedent to giving jurisdiction on review, though absolutely necessary on an original application. Save as to this, so completely is a review regarded as fresh proceedings, that in Ree v. Templer; Howarth, Ex parte, (1912) 2 K. B. 444, it was held that a workman who had consented to an original application being determined by a committee could yet seek review by the county court judge. Had the matter been regarded as a continuing one, jurisdiction once established could not have been ousted. At the same time, at such hearing it will be res judicata that the original applicant is a "workman" and the respondent an "employer," that the workman has been injured by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment, that his original wages were so much, and his average weekly earnings were so much. See, e.g., Linthorpe v. Dinsdale Smelting Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 212. But the Act contemplates incapacity varying from time to time, therefore no finding as to incapacity at one date, whether as to physical condition or ability to earn, is res judicata as to a subsequent date; nor generally are inferences of fact, especially when actual developments may prove such inferences to be or not to be correct. The existence of a prior application to redeem (see sect. 13) does not deprive the arbitrator of jurisdiction to review on a workman's application (Moreland & Sons v. Eley, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 554).

Review generally operates from the date of application (Morton v. Woodward, (1902) 2 K. B. 276), but may from a date prior to the application where incapacity alters prior to that date, and the same is claimed in the application for review (George Gibson & Co. v. Wishart, (1915) A. C. 18, overruling Donaldson Bros. v. Cowan, (1909) S. C. 1292, and considering Morton v. Woodward, supra; Upper Forest and Western Steel and Tinplate Co., Ltd. v. Thomas, (1909) 78 L. J. K. B. 1113; Charing Cross, etc. v. Boots, (1909) 78 L. J. K. B. 1115; Hosegood and Sons v. Wilson, (1911) 80 L. J. K. B. 519). See also Talbot v. Vickers, Ltd., (1925) 2 K. B. 682; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 282, in which case Williams v. Bullfa and Merthyr Dare Steam Collieries (infra) was distinguished. See also Bagley v. Furness, Withy & Co. (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 518; 83 L. J. K. B. 1546, where it was held that the arbitrator had jurisdiction to terminate the award as from the antecedent date, the issue of incapacity as from that date having been raised in the application. In Williams v. Bullfa and Merthyr Dare Steam Colliery, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 527, where a minor applied to review, it was held that the arbitrator could not award an increase of compensation as from a date prior to the date of the application to review. An award cannot be terminated as from a future date (Baker v. Jewell, (1910) 2 K. B. 673).

The arbitrator has no jurisdiction to impound so many weeks' compensation on the ground that the employer had been defrauded where there is no actual evidence of fraud before him; still less has he jurisdiction to impound a further number of weeks' compensation towards payment of the employer's costs (Kirk & Randall, Ltd. v. Bourke, (1919) W. C. & I. 275).

If a memorandum of a disputed agreement be recorded, the order should be appealed against and not review asked. On the other hand, if an order be made, the parties may not subsequently commence fresh proceedings, they should apply for a review (Watts v. Logan and Hemingway, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 47).

Review acts on facts as then existent, but in case of ending compensation provision should be made for the future if a recrudescence of incapacity due to the accident may reasonably be anticipated. It can be done either by suspensory order, reducing the amount to 1*l.* a week, or by ending the order with declaration of liability. If one of these is not done, the award cannot be re-opened. In Wheeler v. Dawson, (1913) W. C. Rep. 59, after compensation had been ended, the arbitrator thought the man a malingerer; X-rays showed he still suffered from a piece of broken bone in his arm, but yet the award as made was final. A suspensory award ought not to be made where the man has completely recovered and there is no reasonable probability of a recurrence of incapacity (Leverington v. A. Dodman & Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 109), but, in the words of Lord Moulton (then Fletcher Moulton, L.J.), "no judge is entitled to treat the fact that a man can at the moment earn just as much as he could before his accident as being a justification for terminating the compensation" (The Tynron (Owners) v. Morgan, (1909) 2 K. B. 66). The test is—Is incapacity reasonably likely to supervene? (Chapman v. Sage & Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 472).

Receipt of full wages is not conclusive of restored capacity, but is only an element to be considered, though combined with restored physical capacity it may be a good cause for finally ending payments, but whilst the workman is receiving full wages no compensation can be awarded. So if there be permanent outstanding physical injury, yet if on the evidence such does not interfere with present earnings, nor is likely to affect future ones, an arbitrator may equally refuse a suspensory order. Although the workman is earning his old wages the arbitrator has no jurisdiction to terminate a declaration of liability where, in the employers' answer to the workman's application for review, the employers simply denied incapacity (Henshaw v. Fielding and Son, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 326).

A Condition Precedent to Review is that some change shall have taken place since the previous hearing. If a man be comparatively slightly injured but, by agreement, is paid full compensation, and then the injury develops so that he becomes really totally disabled, that is not a change of circumstances which could justify a review (Scott v. Long Meg Plaster Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 258). The onus of proving such change is on the party seeking a review, and once proved the question of "onus" is no longer involved. Each side should give evidence, and on such evidence, together with a note of matter already res judicata, an arbitrator must decide de novo. If a party does not prove any change he should practically be non-suited; if he does prove a change the matter is at large, and an arbitrator must decide on the evidence before him.

One of the most perplexing of questions an arbitrator has to decide is whether there is any suitable employment the man can do and what it will bring him in. If suitable employment be offered and refused full compensation cannot be awarded. Consider Jenkinson v. F. Steiner & Co., (1917) W. C. & I. 104. The arbitrator may supplement evidence by his own local knowledge (Silcock & Sons v. Golightly, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 164). As regards the man, what will impress him most will be the endeavour he has made to get work. The amount of compensation may be increased if on review evidence is adduced which shows a greater difficulty in finding work than was suffered at the time of the award (M'Alinden v. James Nimmo & Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 285). Persistent attempts coupled with failure would usually satisfy him no suitable employment was available. This is practically the result of Proctor v. Robinson, (1911) 1 K. B. 1004; a rider to this is the decision in Cardiff Corporation v. Hall, ib. 1009, that a man's accident may be such that whilst it incapacitates him from doing his old work of a special kind, say that of a skilled fitter, it still leaves open to him the whole market of work of an inferior grade which he can be reasonably asked to do. In this case a master does not guarantee the labour market, and attempts and failure to get work by no means conclude the matter. But see Ball v. Coulthard & Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 369, and as to what constitutes a workman an "odd lot" in the labour market. And as to the master, though it is open to him to prove a man will not seek suitable employment, or that there is a market for such class of worker, yet in practice the only effective evidence to rebut a workman's evidence he cannot get suitable work is proof that he himself has offered it. If he can prove the case in any other way, it is perfectly open to him to do so, he is not bound to offer work, but the difficulty is to prove it without doing so. If an arbitrator finds on the evidence there is no suitable employment available, he can continue the compensation as for total incapacity, and that, notwithstanding the employer has proved improvement in the physical condition—to have got a hearing at all implies that an employer must have proved so much—for though prima facie this establishes a presumptive right for the compensation to be reduced (Moore v. Pryde, (1913) W. C. Rep. p. 105), it is not conclusive. Whilst Roberts & Ruthven, Ltd. v. Hall, (1912) W. C. Rep. 269, carries these principles no further, still it is a most valuable case for the clear judgment in it on the point by Cozens-Hardy, M.R. (see ante, sect. 10, notes, “Able to earn”). Service in the army is not “suitable employment” (Thomson v. John Watson, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 498; but see Port of London Authority v. Gray, (1918) W. C. & I. 348, where it was directed that army pay must be taken into account as being what the man is earning, though it may not be all that he is able to earn in some suitable employment).

The cases mentioned in the above paragraph must now be read in the light of sect. 9 (4) of the present Act, which allows partial incapacity to be treated as total incapacity, if the judge is satisfied the workman, though fit for employment of some kind, has taken all reasonable steps to obtain it, and failed to obtain it, and that the failure is a consequence wholly or mainly of the injury.

Reduction of Payments to Nominal Sum.]—Usually resorted to where workman earning full wages at his old work, but handicapped if competing in the open labour markets, or where fresh symptoms may subsequently develop. It is now settled that the arbitrator has power to make it (Taylor v. L & N. W. Rail., (1912) W. C. Rep. 95). A suspensory award may be made on an original application for arbitration (Grigor v. S.S. Harelda, (1910) 26 T. L. R. 272; Green v. Cammell Laird, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 707). If not asked for at the hearing before the arbitrator it will not be granted on appeal (Harlock v. S.S. “Coquet” (Owners), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 73).

Termination of Payments.]—It is a question of fact for the arbitrator whether incapacity has ended or is continuing, or, in other words, whether payment should be terminated or not (Cranfield v. Ansell, (1910) 4 B. 57; Edmondsons, Ltd. v. Parker, (1911) 5 B. 70; Wheeler, Ridley & Co. v. Dawson, (1912) W. C. Rep. 410; Simpson v. Byrne, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 240; Maunder v. Hancock, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 327). The mere fact that the workman is permanently maimed does not prevent the payments being terminated if his wage-earning capacity be not reduced (Watson v. William Beardmore & Co., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 240). If the payments be once terminated, that is final (Nicholson v. Piper (No. 1), (1907) A. C. 215; Codenhead v. Ailsa Shipbuilding Co., (1910) S. C. 1129). Consequently payments should not be terminated if there be evidence that future incapacity may supervene (Braithwaite and Kirk v. Cox, (1911) 5 B. 877).

Review of Unrecorded Agreement.]—An application to review may be made where there is only a verbal agreement (Southbook Fireclay Co. v. Laughland, (1908) S. C. 831).

Review in the Case of Infants.]—Sub-s. 2 above deals with the case of infants. Three things are necessary. The workman must have been an infant at the time of the accident; the review must take place more than six months after the accident, and the application for the review must be made before or within 6 months after the workman attains the age of 21 years. If these three things occur, compensation may be raised to the amount he would probably have been earning at the date of review.

The fact that the workman (minor) had attained full earning capacity at the date of the accident does not per se deprive him of the benefit of the proviso (Quinn v. John Watson, Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 57).

In Malcolm v. Spowart & Co., (1913) W. C. Rep. 523 (Sc.), a minor was injured, and twelve months after his estimated wages were agreed at 25s., giving 12s. 6d. as compensation. He claimed to take this 25s. as a datum line, and there being a general rise in wages, he asked for his compensation to be proportionately increased. The arbitrator rightly said, his duty was to inquire into all the facts to determine what he would then probably be earning, which he did, and found 25s. was enough. Reference may also be made to Thompson v. Newton & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 413; Marshall, Sons & Co., Ltd. v. Prince, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 559.

As to review in cases of infants where the accident happened before 1st January, 1924, see Briggs v. Dryden and Talbot v. Vickers, (1925) 2 K. B. 667; 95 L. J. K. B. 275.

Note.—Sub-s. 3 above was formerly sect. 15 of the Act of 1923. By this sub-section the weekly payment may be reviewed after six months, not only where the condition of the workman is said to have changed, but it may be reviewed also at the request of either party if it is alleged that there has been a fluctuation in rates of remuneration of over 20 per cent. in the wages on which the compensation was before based.

12. An employer shall not be entitled otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbitration to end or diminish a weekly payment except in the following cases:—

- (1) where a workman in receipt of a weekly payment in respect of total incapacity has actually returned to work;
- (2) where the weekly earnings of a workman in receipt of a weekly payment in respect of partial incapacity have actually been increased;
- (3) where the medical practitioner who has examined the workman under section eighteen of this Act has certified that the workman has wholly or partially recovered, or that the incapacity is no longer due in whole or in part to the accident, and a copy of the certificate (which shall set out the grounds of the opinion of the medical practitioner) together with notice of the intention of the employer at the expiration of ten clear days from the date of the service of the notice to end the weekly payment, or to diminish it by such amount as is stated in the notice, has been served by the employer upon the workman:

Limitation of power of employer to end or diminish weekly payments.

Provided that—

- (i) in the last-mentioned case, if before the expiration of the said ten clear days the workman sends to the employer the report of a duly qualified medical practitioner (which report shall set out the grounds of his opinion) disagreeing with the certificate so served by the employer, the weekly payment shall not be ended or diminished, except in accordance with such report, or if and so far as the employer disputes such report, except in accordance with the certificate given by the medical referee in pursuance of section nineteen of this Act; and

Section 12.

- (ii) where an application has been made in pursuance of the said section nineteen to refer the dispute to a medical referee, it shall be lawful for the employer, pending the settlement of the dispute, to pay into court—
 - (a) where the notice was a notice to end the weekly payment, the whole of each weekly payment becoming payable in the meantime ;
 - (b) where the notice was a notice to diminish the weekly payment, so much of each weekly payment so payable as is in dispute ; and the sums so paid into court shall, on the settlement of the dispute, be paid to the employer or to the workman according to the effect of the certificate of the medical referee, or, if the effect of that certificate is disputed, as in default of agreement may be determined by the registrar or, on appeal, the judge ;
- (iii) nothing in this section shall be construed as authorising an employer to end or diminish a weekly payment in any case in which, or to an extent to which, apart from this section, he would not be entitled to do so.

This important section (formerly sect. 14 of the Act of 1923) was framed for the purpose of preventing employers, generally employers who were paying compensation by agreement unregistered stopping the compensation at their own will and pleasure, which often resulted in workmen being deprived of compensation for one or two months, i.e., until their case was heard.

Unless in pursuance of an agreement (it is not necessary that such an agreement should be a recorded agreement complying with Schedule II. (9) of the Act of 1906 (now sect. 23 of the present Act), see Feeney v. Firbeck Main Collieries, Ltd., (1926) 2 K. B. 218 ; 95 L. J. K. B. 689), or arbitration he can only do so now in three cases : (1) Where the man has returned to work ; (2) where the weekly earnings of the workman have actually been increased (it is difficult to see what this means) ; and (3) where a medical practitioner certifies that the workman has recovered wholly or in part, or that the incapacity is no longer due wholly or in part to the accident. Then he must (within six days, see infra) send this certificate together with notice that he proposes to stop or diminish the compensation in ten days from that date. Even in this last case the workman may meet the certificate of the employer's medical man by a counter-certificate of his own medical man who has examined him and which disagrees with the certificate of the employer's medical man. Then the matter may go before a medical referee. Here note the important effect of taking the referee's opinion is that both parties are not only bound by the opinion for the purpose of stopping the compensation, but are bound by it in any subsequent arbitration, unless and until he can show that since the making of the order fresh circumstances have arisen which will justify an independent application for arbitration (Rhodes v. Digby Colliery Co., Ltd., (1927) 1 K. B. 152 ; (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 127. Consequently the Editor strongly advises workmen not to agree in such circumstances to go before a medical referee. By refusing he does not lose his right to bring arbitration proceedings. See the cases of Pudney v. William France, Fenwick & Co., Ltd., and Smith v. Leach & Co., Ltd., reported together, (1925) 1 K. B. 346; (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 513, which cases also decide that the "weekly payments" referred to in this section include weekly payments made voluntarily or under an unrecorded agreement and are not confined to weekly payments under an award or recorded agreement.

Section 12.
Notes.

Where the employer has stopped compensation in any other circumstances than allowed by this section he must pay it up to the time of the arbitration proceedings. Where there is an application to the medical referee under this section the employer may if he chooses safeguard himself by paying the payments in dispute into court.

Note.—An employer, seeking the benefit of the procedure provided by this section, must comply with sect. 19 by serving the certificate of his medical practitioner within six days from the date thereof, for unless this is done there is no power or procedure available for the subsequent appointment of a medical referee. See Gillett v. John Fowler & Co. (Leeds), Ltd., (1927), 1 K. B. 435; 96 L. J. K. B. 261.

If the employer fails to proceed under the section after receipt of the workman's counter-report, but stops payment and does nothing more, and the workman then goes to arbitration, the workman, in spite of the fact that the judge finds that he had wholly recovered at the time of the service of the ten days' notice, was formerly held entitled to recover from the employer the weekly payments as from that date down to the date of the award. See Davies v. Glyncoerrug Colliery Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 339; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 42. This case and the Court of Appeal decision in Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, 19 B. W. C. C. 223, were both overruled by the decision in Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, (1927) A. C. 271; 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 364, which decided that where the workman had received a notice under sect. 14 of the Act and had sent a counter-notice, but before hearing admitted he had recovered, was not entitled to compensation after cesser of the incapacity up to date of award. See also Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. v. Dee, (1927) A. C. 299; 96 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 143; 20 B. W. C. C. 1. In this case it was held that the employer, where a registered agreement to pay existed could, pending arbitration, pay the compensation into court, and following their decision in Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies (supra), and to deal with the money in court in such manner as was right when the arbitration was concluded. These two cases, Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies and Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. v. Dee (supra), were followed by C. A. in Catton v. Ashwell and Nesbitt, (1928) 97 L. J. Ch. 199; 20 B. W. C. C. 594. The peculiarity of this case was that the workman had commenced an action in the Chancery Division asking for an injunction to restrain the defendants from discontinuing the weekly payments. The action was dismissed, and the C. A. held it had been rightly dismissed and that the case must be decided in accordance with the above two cases.

See also Pullen v. Enthoven, 20 B. W. C. C. 248; and Lowe v. Essex C. C., 20 B. W. C. C. 452; and Macaulay v. William Baird & Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 802.

The workman is not entitled to have his expenses paid as a condition of going before the Medical Referee under this section (Richards v. United National Collieries, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 716; 20 B. W. C. C. 465).

13. Where any weekly payment has been continued for not less than six months, the liability therefor may, on application by or on behalf of the employer, be redeemed by the payment of a lump sum of such an amount as, where the incapacity is permanent, would, if invested in the purchase of an immediate life annuity from the National Debt Commissioners through the Post Office Savings Bank, purchase an annuity for the workman equal to

of weekly payments.

Section 13. seventy-five per cent. of the annual value of the weekly payment, and as in any other case may be settled by arbitration under this Act; and such lump sum may be ordered by the committee or arbitrator or judge of the county court to be invested or otherwise applied for the benefit of the person entitled thereto:

Provided that—

- (a) nothing in this section shall be construed as preventing agreements being made for the redemption of a weekly payment by a lump sum; and
- (b) the provisions of this section which fix the amount of the lump sum for which a weekly payment may be redeemed where the incapacity is permanent, shall not apply in the case where the injured workman is at the date of the application under twenty-one years of age, and where, in the case of an injured workman under the age of twenty-one, the lump sum for which the weekly payment may be redeemed is determined by arbitration, the right which if the redemption did not take place the workman would have to have the weekly payment increased on a review under subsection (2) of section eleven of this Act shall be taken into account.

The additional compensation given by the War Addition Acts of 1917 and 1919 was not the subject of redemption, but any workman receiving weekly payment for total incapacity from an accident before December 31st, 1923, was entitled to continue to receive the same sums as he would have received if the Acts had not been repealed.

Whether this additional payment went on where the employer redeemed was a question much mooted, because the section said that the addition should only be to a "weekly payment" payable to the workman, and after redemption, of course, no weekly payment is payable. See notes to sect. 1 of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923.

If applications to redeem and review are in the list for the same day relating to the same workman, the arbitrator should hear both together, and should deal first with the question whether the compensation should be increased and then with the application to redeem (Moreland & Sons v. Eley, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 554).

If an employer applies to redeem under this paragraph his right is absolute (Kendall and Gent v. Pennington, (1912) W. C. Rep. 144), and at the hearing the arbitrator must fix the amount to be paid; if the incapacity, partial or total, is permanent, he must fix it at the sum settled by the Act as stated; if the incapacity is not permanent, at such an amount as he may assess on the evidence. The arbitrator must satisfy himself as to whether the physical condition of the injured workmen is stable. If the incapacity is permanent an infant is in no better position than an adult. If the incapacity is not permanent the amount is in the discretion of the arbitrator (Marshall, Sons & Co., Ltd. v. Prince, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 559).

Where the injury is permanent and the workman is in receipt of certain benefits besides a weekly payment the lump sum must not be calculated on the basis of the weekly payment simply, but on the weekly payment plus so much of the benefits as will make up the difference between the statutory liability and the agreed weekly payment (Clawley v. Carlton Main Colliery Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 265).

Section 13.
Notes.

The arbitrator's award must be definite and one that can be enforced by either party. In Booth v. Calico Printers Association, (1913) W. C. Rep. 540, where employers filed an application for review and redemption, the arbitrator found the incapacity permanent, and assessed a weekly sum of which the annuity value was 613*l*. At the same time he said he considered 300*l*. would be an ample amount under the circumstances. Before making his award he said he was bound to give the larger amount having no discretion in cases of permanent incapacity, and asked the employers if they wished to withdraw their application (Dixon v. Patten, 120 L. T. 170, where Irish Court of Appeal held they were so entitled). This not being done, he made his award practically in the terms of the paragraph:—the employers may redeem on payment of 613*l*.—leaving it optional with them to so redeem or continue the weekly payment.

The Court of Appeal held this was not correct; that they were bound by The Castle Spinning Co. v. Atkinson, (1905) 1 K. B. 336; that awards had to be definite and that speculative applications were not within the purview of this section.

There was a cross appeal that the incapacity (partial) was not permanent. The man had lost his left hand, but the stump was well healed. As regards the permanence of the physical incapacity there was no doubt, but the employers argued it could not be said a stage of finality had been reached in the case of his earning powers. The arbitrator found that as far as he could determine, there was evidence that the weekly payment he was likely to earn had arrived at a point of stability. There is no doubt he had most carefully considered all the facts and was fully alive to all the legal niceties involved, and the Court of Appeal held there was evidence to support his finding. Seeing, then, the danger of a general application to redeem, can an employer make one conditional on the arbitrator finding the incapacity not permanent? It would seem not. The Castle Spinning Co. Case is clear; speculative applications are not permissible. Here the employer applied to redeem if the amount assessed did not exceed 150*l*. Does this differ in principle from applying to redeem if the incapacity is not permanent? Apparently the only course open is to apply to redeem, and on the arbitrator expressing his opinion the incapacity is permanent, to withdraw the application before the award is made.

In the case of assessing an amount where the incapacity is not permanent, an arbitrator's discretion is almost unlimited, provided he only has regard to facts actually existing at the time of the application to redeem (Birmingham Carriage & Wagon Co., Ltd. v. Round, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 77). He cannot say, "I would at the date of the accident have given so much," and then deduct intermediate payments (Victor Mill, Ltd. v. Shackleton, (1912) W. C. Rep. 33), but short of this it is for him and him only to arrive at the amount. To assess an amount on the basis of incapacity being permanent without first deciding whether it is so or not is a misdirection (Swannick v. Congested Board of Ireland, (1913) W. C. Rep. 96). An order for redemption by consent cannot be appealed against (Howell v. Blackwell's Executors, 5 B. 293).

Review in the Case of Infants.—Proviso (b) of this section first appeared in the Act of 1923. The object is to prevent a very small compensation earned by an infant being redeemed for a small and insufficient sum. It is not necessary that a review should have taken place. The judge must consider what the compensation would probably have been if a review had taken place.

Assurance Companies Act, 1909.—Schedule 8, D. (2), of the Assurance Companies Act, 1909, provides that "Where the person insured [against workmen's compensation risks] by any policy issued by an underwriter is liable to make a weekly payment to any workman during the incapacity of the workman, and this weekly payment has continued for more than six months, the liability therefor shall before the expiration of twelve months from the commencement of the incapacity be redeemed by the payment of a lump sum in accordance with Sched. I. (17) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (now above sect.) and the underwriter shall pay the lump sum into the county court, and shall inform the court that the redemption has been effected in pursuance of the provisions of this schedule." Sect. 33 (1) (f) of the same Act provides that where money is so paid into a county court "the court shall (unless the court for special reasons sees fit to direct otherwise) order the lump sum to be invested or applied in the purchase of an annuity or otherwise, in such manner that the duration of the benefit thereof may, as far as possible, correspond with the probable duration of the incapacity." It should be noted that the Act does not apply to certain cases of mutual insurance societies or to marine offices issuing marine policies which inter alia cover workmen's compensation risks. See Assurance Companies Act, 1909, sect. 33 (1), (a), (b).

Conditions of Compensation.

Requirements as to notice of accident and claim for compensation.

14.—(1) Proceedings for the recovery under this Act of compensation for an injury shall not be maintainable unless notice of the accident has been given as soon as practicable after the happening thereof and before the workman has voluntarily left the employment in which he was injured, and unless the claim for compensation with respect to such accident has been made within six months from the occurrence of the accident causing the injury, or, in case of death, within six months from the time of death :

Provided that—

- (a) the want of or any defect or inaccuracy in such notice shall not be a bar to the maintenance of such proceedings if the employer is proved to have had knowledge of the accident from any other source at or about the time of the accident, or if it is found in the proceedings for settling the claim that the employer is not, or would not, if a notice or an amended notice were then given and the hearing postponed, be prejudiced in his defence by the want, defect or inaccuracy, or that such want, defect or inaccuracy was occasioned by mistake, absence from the United Kingdom, or other reasonable cause ; and
- (b) the failure to make a claim within the period above specified shall not be a bar to the maintenance of such proceedings if it is found that the failure was occasioned by mistake, absence from the United Kingdom, or other reasonable cause.

(2) Notice in respect of an injury under this Act may be given either in writing or orally to the employer (or if there is more than one employer to one of such employers) or to any foreman or other official under whose supervision the workman is employed, or to any person designated for the purpose by the employer, and shall give the name and address of the person injured, and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the date at which the accident happened.

(3) The notice if in writing may be given by delivering the same at, or sending it by post in a registered letter addressed to, the residence or place of business of the person to whom it is to be given. Section 14.

(4) Where the employer is a body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, the notice, if in writing, may also be given by delivering it or by sending it by post in a registered letter addressed to the employer, at the office, or, if there be more than one office, any one of the offices, of such body.

Several new provisions as to notice of injury and claim appeared in the 1923 Act, and are now incorporated in this Act, chiefly as to circumstances in which notice is excused. It is excused if the employer had knowledge of it. Oral notice is good. (This had been decided before it appeared in the Act.) It may be given to a foreman or other official with supervision over workmen, and if the employer should be the owner of a mine, quarry, or occupier of a factory or workshop, it is excused in other cases for which see next section, which relates to special provisions as to notice of accidents in mines, factories, etc.

The giving of notice as soon as practicable, and the making a claim within six months, unless excused, are conditions precedent to recovering. The claim need not be in writing (Lowe v. Myers, 8 W. C. C. 22). If the arbitrator leaves undecided the question of want of notice a new trial may be ordered (Silk v. Isle of Thanet Rural Council, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 647). Weekly payments made are usually conclusive evidence of a claim made and recognised, and certainly furnish a reasonable cause for its absence. Whether a notice has been given "as soon as practicable" is a question of fact. When a letter making a claim is posted a presumption arises that it has been delivered (Watts v. Vickers, Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 24).

As to Notice.—The giving of it and complying with the formalities are questions of fact, as also the giving it as soon as possible. If a workman fails in giving a proper notice he may be excused if he prove either that his employer has not been prejudiced in his defence, or that he has done so through mistake, etc., and now sometimes in other cases (see next section). The conditions are disjunctive. If a workman proves mistake a master will be liable, even if prejudiced to an extent of losing an insurance indemnity, and, if he is not prejudiced, it is not material how the defect or non-giving came about. If "reasonable cause" for the failure to give notice is once established, then proceedings under the Act may be maintained at any time, subject of course to the ordinary Statute of Limitations (Lingley v. Thomas Firth and Sons, Ltd., (1921) 1 K. B. 655; 90 L. J. K. B. 290). Principle applied in Drewett v. Britannia Assurance Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 434.

Prejudiced.—Formerly it was considered that like every other fact, no prejudice must be proved by evidence, though "no specific evidence of 'no prejudice' is required; it is an inference to be drawn from the whole facts of the case" (Farwell, L.J., in Eaton v. Evans, 5 B. 82). In the absence of any evidence one way or another the workman's claim was held to be barred (Ing v. Higgs, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 84; Lacey v. John Mowlem & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 63; Hodgson v. Robins, Hay, Walters and Hay, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 65). Slight evidence is sufficient to shift the onus (Shearer v. Miller, (1899) 2 F. 114). It is clear, however, that since the House of Lords decision in Eydmann v. Premier Accumulator Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 167, the earlier cases will have to be limited in application, since that case decides that there is no onus on the applicants of establishing the negative proposition that the respondents were not prejudiced and that the question of prejudice or no prejudice must be answered from a consideration of the evidence generally, and if the evidence is negative either way, the respondents must give positive evidence of prejudice. In other words, the burden is upon the respondents of establishing prejudice and not upon the applicant of establishing no prejudice, but the judge may find that the respondent was prejudiced from the general facts of the case. See Howard v. Sun Mill, Ltd., (1920) W. C. & I. 5. Certainly, in the words of Scrutton, L.J., in Mills v. Donnington Main Coal Co., (1917) W. C. & I. at p. 17, "under the present decisions of the House of Lords, employers will always run great risks who do not try and give some positive evidence of prejudice [in doubtful cases]." Compare and consider Selkirk v. National Radiator Co., (1917) W. C. & I. 99; Howarth v. Clifton and Kersley Coal Co., Ltd., (1920) 89 L. J. K. B. 1249. Reference may also be made as to what time will not be deemed as soon as practicable to Hunt v. Highly Mining Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 406; Dalgleish v. J. H. Gartside & Co., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 319. But note, an employer must be prejudiced in his defence, not merely in his pocket (Butt v. Gellyceidrim Colliery Co., Ltd., (1909) 3 B. 44; Snelling v. Norton Hill Colliery Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 497). The words "in his defence" are not confined to cases where owing to absence of notice the employers cannot ascertain the true facts or set up the proper defences. See per Phillimore, L.J., in Wassall v. James Russell & Sons, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 88, at p. 90. If the injury is fatal in any event it would probably be held, apart from exceptional circumstances, that the employer was not prejudiced (Lochgelly Iron & Coal Co., Ltd. v. Kirk, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 342; Burvil v. Vickers, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 563). Contrast Jones v. Arnold, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 513; Jones v. Thomas & Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 761. Compare the case of cancer induced by a fall, Howard v. Rowsell and Mattheus, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 314. The Court of Appeal has recently held that the question of prejudice or no prejudice is entirely a question for the arbitrator (Hinks v. James Riscoe & Sons, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 1068; 20 B. W. C. C. 558).

By this section an employer is entitled to the earliest possible notice, that he may at once investigate all the circumstances attending the accident. If want of notice prevents this, unless it can be shown it would have been useless in any event, it is strong evidence he is prejudiced (Leach v. Hickson, 4 B. 153). For the workman to recover in such a case the arbitrator must find specifically that there has been no prejudice. Thus in Hayward v. West Leigh Colliery Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 21, where workman died of septic poisoning due to a scratch and no notice was given for a week (and then was verbal), i.e., two days before death, the master was held by the Court of Appeal to have been prejudiced. The House of Lords, however, reversed the court below, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 233, largely on the ground that knowledge would have been useless in any event and that there was evidence to support the arbitrator's finding of "no prejudice." See also Miller v. Richardson, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 381; contrast Unger v. Howell, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 58; on the other hand, if knowledge of the accident in fact can be brought home to him, it will be strong evidence of no prejudice. Evidence of a conversation between the wife of the injured workman and the employer's book-keeper was apparently held admissible in Eydmann v. Premier Accumulator Co., Ltd. (supra). But the employer may waive (Davies v. Point Ayr Collieries, (1909) 2 B. 157). Entry by a manager of the particulars of the accident in a special book supplied for the purpose will be sufficient written notice (Stevens v. Insoles, Ltd., (1912) W. C. Rep. 111).

Mistake, Absence or other Reasonable Cause.—These words equally refer to claims not made in time. Mistakes may be mistakes of law, or mistakes of fact. Ignorance of law, or that the law exists, is not a mistake (Bramley v. Evans, 3 B. 34; Roles v. Pascall, (1911) 1 K. B. 982; even though the master's advice as to the right to claim was relied on and he innocently made a mistake (Prophet v. Roberts, (1919) W. C. & I. 5). But it is possible that ignorance in the case of an infant may be an excuse. (See per Judge Mulligan in Mason v. King's Lynn Docks Co., L. J. C. C. Rep., April 14th, 1917, p. 27.) A mistake in law may be taking a wrong view, or wrongly construing an Act of Parliament. A mistaken belief is not a mistake of fact (Clapp v. Carter, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 80). A mistake of fact must be a mistake of an existing fact (Roles v. Pascall, (1911) 1 K. B. 982). For the cases as to how far if a man does not realise he is injured, that is such a mistake, see Coulson v. South Moor Colliery Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 161; Flood v. Smith and Leishman, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 212; Clapp v. Carter, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 80; Fox v. Barrow Hematite Steel Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 321; Haward v. Rowsell and Matthews, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 314; Hoare v. Arding and Hobbs, 5 B. 36; Millar v. Refuge Ass. Co., (1912) S. C. 37; Breakwell v. Clechill Granite Co., 5 B. 133; White v. Ford Motor Co. (England), (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 25; Walton v. T. Wall & Sons (ibid.), p. 17; Clay v. Sherwood Colliery Co., (1923) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 18; 92 L. J. K. B. 169. The determining question probably is, Is the injury latent or trivial—or patent or serious? See Potter v. John Welch & Sons, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 607. If he does so realise he must at once give notice and make his claim (Edgerton v. Moore, (1912) 2 K. B. 308; Webster v. Cohen, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 268; distinguished in Thompson v. N. E. Marine Engineering Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 13). In Griffiths v. Atkinson, (1912) W. C. Rep. 277, a plumber gave notice to his employer, a sub-contractor, in the expectation he would pass it on to the principal. The expectation was not realised, but it was held not a mistake as to an existing fact, and so not within the proviso. See also Pimm v. Cement Talbot, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 350.

There have been innumerable cases of fact decided, but an arbitrator can find no better guide than that given by Cozens-Hardy, M.R., in Eaton v. Evans, 5 B. p. 83, "I have said more than once that where there is a possible doubt of an accident at all, the court should be astute to require notice speedily, and should also be astute on the question whether the employer has been prejudiced. . . . That must not be taken to lay down any principle of law applicable to a case where the bona fides of the claim is absolutely beyond dispute, where the fact of there having been an accident has been proved to the satisfaction of the county court judge, and where the ailment from which the applicant is suffering is one which does not make itself manifest immediately."

Similarly, his lordship expressed a still stronger opinion on the duty of men at once to report slight hurts where first aid was provided, and which, if used, might prevent serious developments (Brady v. Can. P. Rail., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 479).

The following cases may also be referred to: Thompson v. N. E. Marine Eng. Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 13 (workman thought accident trivial for some time when he saw doctor, held reasonable cause); compare the similar cases of Zillwood v. Winch, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 87; Rankine v. Alloa Coal Co., (1904) 6 F. 375; Ellis v. Fairfield S. & E. Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 88; Brown v. Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., (1907) S. C. 198. See also Fenton v. Owners of Ship Kelvin, (1925) 2 K. B. 473; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 316, in which it was held that the fact that the workman did not realise the connection of cause and effect between the accident and the incapacity from which he was suffering was reasonable cause for his delay in giving notice. If the injury were not apparent at the time it was received the court may hold it a reason for want of notice, even where the employer has put up notices in the works requiring notice to be given within a certain time. See Albison v. Newroyd Mill, Ltd., (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 667. See cases, supra, and Tibbs v. Watts Blake, Bearne & Co., (1909) 2 B. 164; Fry v. Cheltenham Corp., 81 L. J. K. B. 41. Contrast Webster v. Cohen, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 268; Clapp v. Carter, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 80. Receipt of ex gratia payments made by the employer after notice of accident may form a reasonable excuse for not making a claim (King v. Port of London Authority, (1919) W. C. & I. 241; Hillman v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., (1920) W. C. & I. 38; Harper v. Harper, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 260). See also Hill v. L. B. Holliday & Co., (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 897, in which it was held that where a workman is in such a serious state of health that he can neither make a claim nor consult anyone in reference to the claim such condition constitutes such a case of mental inertia as to furnish a "reasonable cause." Admission of liability by the employer is no excuse for failure to make a claim (Abel v. Estler Bros., (1919) W. C. & I. 156; Dobson v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 97.)

In Hillman's case, supra, the Court of Appeal expressed the duty of a county court judge as being in this regard to find the facts, and having done so to direct himself as a matter of law whether these facts constituted, within the true meaning of the Act, a reasonable cause. This is a matter of law and is subject to appeal.

Absence.—In Dight v. S.S. Craster Hall (Owners), (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 714, a sailor suffered severe injuries; he reached a port in U.S.A. There he spent a considerable time in hospitals and convalescent homes, eventually reaching England two years later as a distressed seaman. He might have returned earlier as a distressed seaman. Held, want of notice due to absence, and absence due to accident, not to another cause, e.g., settling down abroad.

As to Claim (As to failure to make claim in consequence of Mistake, Absence or other Reasonable Cause, see supra).—Claim for compensation means, not initiation of proceedings, but a notice of claim for compensation (Powell v. Main Colliery Co., (1909) A. C. 366). Since this case and Thompson v. Gould & Co., [1910] A. C. 409, mere notice of intention to claim is sufficient (compare In re Allen and Hoey Arbitration, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 193, and contrast Bennett v. Wordie & Co., (1899), 1 F. 855; Marno v. Workman Clark & Co., (1900) 2 Q. B. 149, n.). It is not necessary to state amount claimed (Thompson v. Gould, supra). It need not be in writing (Lowe v. Myers, (1906) 2 K. B. 265). A conversation between the applicant's wife and respondent in which the latter is asked by her whether he will compensate is apparently insufficient (Johnson v. Woolton, (1911) 27 T. L. R. 487). But conversations which showed the employer clearly that the workman intended to seek legal aid unless payments which had been stopped were continued is sufficient (In re Allen and Hoey Arbitration, supra). Mere notice of accident is not a claim (Perry v. Clements, (1901) 49 W. R. 669; Abbott v. Biggleswade Joint Hospital Bd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 533). An application for arbitration is a claim (Fraser v. G. N. of Scotland Rail., (1901) 3 F. 908). The onus that claim is made within time is upon the applicant (Roberts v. Crystal Palace Football Club, (1909) 3 B. 51). Where a workwoman omitted to make a claim, wishing to conceal her injury in order to be able to continue at work, the Court of Appeal reversed the finding of an arbitrator who had held that this was a reasonable cause for failure to make the claim within the prescribed time (Lingley v. Firth, (1920) 37 T. L. R. 149; and compare Dobson v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 97); Bishop v. Civil Service Supply Association, (1922) 15 B. W. C. C. 128, where judge refused to accept a letter marked "without prejudice" as evidence of a claim).

As to whether an absolute bar.—The employer may be estopped from denying the claim (Turnbull v. Vickers, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 323; Wright v. Bagnall, (1900) 2 Q. B. 240; Heaton v. Tomlinson & Son, (1904) 117 L. T. Jo. 3). The question is whether the workman has been lulled into security (Heaton v. Tomlinson & Son, supra); or employer may have waived (Linklater v. Webster & Son, (1904) 117 L. T. Jo. 3). Where it was doubtful whether there was estoppel or waiver owing to state of the evidence the case was sent back in Lee v. Cortonwood Colliery Co., (1901) Times Newspaper, November 11th. Payment by the employer of compensation may or may not constitute waiver (Rendall v. Hill's Dry Dock, etc., Co., (1900) 2 Q. B. 245; O'Neill v. Motherwell, (1907) S. C. 1076; Healey v. Galloway, (1907) 41 Ir. L. T. 5; Lynch v. Lansdowne (Marquis), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 244). Payment of full wages may be a "reasonable cause" for not making a claim (Luckie v. Merry, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 395). In King v. Port of London Authority, (1919) W. C. & I. at p. 245, the Lord Chancellor refused to lay down any general principle that, under all circumstances, the continued payment of the same wages by the employer to the injured workman after the accident amounts to reasonable cause for not giving notice, and the same presumably applies in the case of failure to claim. See Soyer v. Johnson Matthey Co., (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 1011; 20 B. W. C. C. 504, in which the headnote apparently lays down that the fact that the workman continued in the employment receiving full wages is not a reasonable cause for the workman failing to make his claim. This seems to be putting the principle too high, and is scarcely supported by the judgments, especially when regard is had to the dictum of the Earl of Birkenhead in King v. Port of London Authority (supra).

Six Months.—The claim must be brought by dependants within six months of death, even though the workman had made a claim in his lifetime (Wilson v. Maple Mill, Ltd., (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 666). Where the accident happened at 11.30 a.m. on November 24th, and claim was lodged at 5.30 p.m. on May 24th following, it was held to be within the six months in Peggie v. Wemyss Coal Co., (1909) S. C. 93.

Acquiescence in Stoppage of Payments.—See Rankine v. Fife Coal Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 207.

Notice of accident to inspectors.—The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, sect. 28, reduces the time provided by the Notice of Accidents Act, 1906, and the Coal Mines Act, 1911, with regard to the giving of notice by the employer to the inspectors from seven days to three days. Although not very cognate to the Workmen's Compensation Acts this may prove useful as enabling, in many cases, the workman to prove that the employer had notice of the accident. This section is not repealed, see p. 1408.

Prevention of or remedies for relief of accidents.—With the object of preventing, or providing means of remedy for accidents, the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, by sect. 29 makes various provisions as to first aid boxes, ambulance rooms and persons in charge of such, in factories, and in addition empowers the Secretary of State to make similar rules for the purposes of safety with regard to places to which any of the provisions of the Factories Acts apply. This section is not repealed, see p. 1408.

15.—(1) There shall be kept constantly posted up in some conspicuous place at or near every mine, quarry, factory or workshop where it may be conveniently read by the persons employed, a summary, in such form as may be prescribed, of the requirements of this Act, with regard to the giving of notice of accidents and the making of claims and the procedure to be followed in the case of industrial diseases, and, in the event of such summary becoming effaced, obliterated or destroyed, it shall be renewed with all reasonable dispatch.

In the event of any non-compliance with the provisions of this subsection the owner, agent or manager of the mine or quarry or the occupier of the factory or workshop shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding five pounds, and any such proceedings may be instituted by an inspector of mines or factories.

Special provisions as to notice of accident in mines, factories, &c.

Section 15.

(2) The want of, or any defect or inaccuracy in, the notice of an accident required by the last preceding section of this Act shall not be a bar to the maintenance of proceedings for the recovery of compensation under this Act where the employer is the owner of a mine or quarry or the occupier of a factory or workshop—

- (a) if such summary as aforesaid has not been posted up in accordance with the provisions of this section; or
- (b) if the accident has been reported by or on behalf of the employer to an inspector of mines or factories; or
- (c) if the accident has been entered in any register of accidents kept by or on behalf of the employer at the mine, quarry, factory or workshop; or
- (d) if the injury has been treated in an ambulance room at the mine, quarry, factory or workshop.

(3) For facilitating the giving of notice of accidents for the purposes of this Act, a book in the prescribed form shall be kept at every mine, quarry, factory or workshop, in which the prescribed particulars of accidents happening to persons employed at the mine, quarry, factory or workshop may be entered by the injured workman or some other person acting on his behalf, and an entry in such book, if made as soon as practicable after the happenings of the accident, shall be sufficient notice of the accident for the purposes of this Act.

The book shall be kept at such place as to be readily accessible at all reasonable times to any injured workman who was employed at the mine, quarry, factory or workshop, and any person bonâ fide acting on his behalf.

If in the case of any mine, quarry, factory or workshop the provisions of this subsection are not complied with, the mine, quarry, factory or workshop shall be deemed not to be managed or kept in conformity with the enactments relating thereto.

(4) For the purposes of this section, the expression "factory or workshop" shall include any works or premises to which any of the provisions of the Factory and Workshops Acts, 1901 to 1920, apply; and the expression "prescribed" means prescribed by the Secretary of State.

The comparatively new provisions of this section first appeared in the Act of 1923.

It must be noted that they apply only to mines, quarries, factories and workshops and works or premises to which any provisions of the Factory and Workshops Acts apply.

Parts of the Factory Acts were by the 1901 Act applied to docks, wharves quays and warehouses and machinery used for loading and unloading ships.

The section not only requires the employer to post up the provisions of the Act as to notice, etc., and keep an accident book, but excuses notice of accident where this is not done or where the employer has reported the accident to the Government inspector, or entered it in the accident book, or where the workman has been treated at the works ambulance.

Section 15
Notes.

16.—(1) If a workman receiving a weekly payment ceases to reside in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man, he shall thereupon cease to be entitled to receive any weekly payment, unless the medical referee certifies that the incapacity resulting from the injury is likely to be of a permanent nature. Conditions as to residence.

(2) If the medical referee so certifies, the workman shall be entitled to receive quarterly the amount of the weekly payments accruing due during the preceding quarter so long as he proves, in such manner and at such intervals as may be prescribed by rules of court, his identity and the continuance of the incapacity in respect of which the weekly payment is payable.

The Secretary of State may prescribe the fee to be paid for such a certificate. The words "The Channel Islands or the Isle of Man" were added to the words "United Kingdom" by the 1923 Act, sect. 24 (8). It also added "Northern Ireland," but this is omitted as in the definition section (sect. 48), the expression "United Kingdom" includes "Northern Ireland."

17. Where a workman has given notice of an accident, or where an accident has occurred in respect of which the necessity of giving notice under this Act is dispensed with, he shall, if so required by the employer, submit himself for examination by a duly qualified medical practitioner provided and paid by the employer, and, if he refuses to submit himself to such examination, or in any way obstructs the same, his right to compensation, and to take or prosecute any proceeding under this Act in relation to compensation, shall be suspended until such examination has taken place. Conditions as to submission to medical examination in first instance.

This section embraces clause (4) of Sched. I. of the old Act as altered by sect. 10 (5) of Act of 1923. With this section the provisions of sect. 18 must be considered.

Medical Examination.—The one rule is a workman must be reasonable: an employer must be reasonable, and it does not follow that what is reasonable in one case will be reasonable even in a similar case. Of what is reasonable, the arbitrator is sole judge (Morgan v. Dixon, (1912) A. C. 74). He may decide it is reasonable for a workman to have his own doctor present when examined by his employer's doctor—though he cannot order the employer to pay such doctor's fees (Osborn v. Vickers Maxim, 2 W. C. C. 130); he may decide it is not. Both parties should do their utmost to facilitate a fair examination, and with as much regard for the convenience of each other as the nature of the case permits of. This section is not limited to one examination if a further one is reasonably required (Mayor v. South Kirkby, etc., Collieries, (1913) W. C. Rep. 305), even where the first examination took place after the dispute arose (Smith v. D. Davis and Sons, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 299), and provides for effective examination before an award is made; whilst sect. 18 similarly provides for examination afterwards, when compensation is being paid.

Section 17
Notes.

The workman, besides submitting to examination, should place no difficulties in the employer's way to hinder him from seeing the medical notes relating to the treatment of the injuries. Per Swinfen Eady, L.J., in Booth & Sons v. Carter, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 59.

A workman who enlists and is sent abroad and cannot therefore be medically examined in England cannot be deemed to have obstructed medical examination (J. & C. Harrison, Ltd. v. Dowling, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 351).

See also Rule 58.

Periodical submission to medical examination.

18. Any workman receiving weekly payments under this Act shall, if so required by the employer, from time to time submit himself for examination by a duly qualified medical practitioner provided and paid by the employer. If the workman refuses to submit himself to such examination, or in any way obstructs the same, his right to such weekly payments shall be suspended until such examination has taken place.

See last section.

This section applies only to the case of a workman who is actually at the time receiving weekly payments under the Act (Smith v. Davis & Sons, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 299).

It must be noted that where the workman refuses the examination or obstructs it, though he afterwards consents, he can get no compensation for the period when the payments were suspended either under sect. 17 or sect. 18. (See sect. 20.)

Provisions as to submission to
examination.

19.—(1) A workman shall not be required to submit himself for examination by a medical practitioner under either of the two last preceding sections otherwise than in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of State, or at more frequent intervals than may be prescribed by those regulations.

(2) Where a workman has so submitted himself for examination by a medical practitioner, or has been examined by a medical practitioner selected by himself, and the employer or the workman, as the case may be, has within six days after such examination furnished the other with a copy of the report of that practitioner as to the workman's condition, then, in the event of no agreement being come to between the employer and the workman as to the workman's condition or fitness for employment, the registrar of a county court, on application being made to the court by both parties, or, subject to appeal to the judge, by one of the parties, may refer the matter to a medical referee:

Provided that where the application is made by only one of the parties, the registrar, or on appeal the judge, if he is of opinion that, owing to the exceptional difficulty of the case or for any other sufficient reason, the matter ought to be settled in default of agreement by arbitration, shall refuse to allow the reference.

(3) The medical referee to whom the matter is so referred shall, in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of State, give a certificate as to the condition of the workman and his fitness for employment, specifying, where necessary, the kind of employment for which he is fit, and that certificate shall be conclusive evidence as to the matters so certified. Section 19.

(4) Where no agreement can be come to between the employer and the workman as to whether or to what extent the incapacity of the workman is due to the accident, the provisions of this section shall, subject to any regulations made by the Secretary of State, apply as if the question were a question as to the condition of the workman.

(5) If a workman, on being required so to do, refuses to submit himself for examination by a medical referee to whom the matter has been so referred as aforesaid, or in any way obstructs the same, his right to compensation and to take or prosecute any proceeding under this Act in relation to compensation, or, in the case of a workman in receipt of a weekly payment, his right to that weekly payment, shall be suspended until such examination has taken place.

(6) Rules of court may be made for prescribing the manner in which documents are to be furnished or served and applications made under this section and the forms to be used for those purposes.

This embraces Sched. I. (15) of the old Act as amended by the Act of 1923.

The important alteration in the section is that if after examination the parties cannot agree as to the workman's condition or fitness for employment, the registrar of the court may send it to a medical referee on the application of one party only, whereas previously both parties had to consent. As the medical referee's opinion is final, the editor recommends that the workman should not consent to the case going before the medical referee, who very rarely is able to hold a proper inquiry on evidence. If it is sent against his wish he can now appeal to the judge.

It is important to note that not only is the certificate of the medical referee conclusive as to the condition of the workman, but it is also conclusive of his fitness for employment and the kind of employment for which he is fit which the medical referee has generally no proper opportunities of deciding. See Short v. Parker, (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 849. The judge cannot interfere with it, even to the extent of giving a declaration of liability (Richard Evans & Co., Ltd. v. Gilbie, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 117).

He may also have to decide, where the matter has been sent to him, whether the incapacity was due to the accident, generally the most difficult question for the court to decide under the Act.

A medical referee apparently may subsequently give a second certificate inconsistent with his first (Richard Evans & Co. v. Scahill, 20 B. W. C. C. 348).

A Reference by Mutual Agreement.—Although under this paragraph the medical referee's decision is final, the extent of earning capacity may still remain for decision (Cruden v. Wemyss Coal Co., (1913) W. C. Rep. 188), and the finality of the certificate does not extend to matters of cure, e.g., where the medical referee stated that a small surgical operation would remove the incapacity (Earl Fitzwilliam's Collieries v. Crossley, (1925) 133 L. T. 495). If the certificate is ambiguous, an arbitrator may rightly ask for an explanation (Kennedy v. Dixon, (1913) W. C. Rep. 333).

to suspension of right to compensation.

Procedure for settling questions.

20. Where under this Act a right to compensation is suspended no compensation shall be payable in respect of the period of suspension.

See note to sect. 18 above.

Procedure for determining Compensation and settling Questions.

21.—(1) If any question arises in any proceedings under this Act as to the liability to pay compensation under this Act (including any question as to whether the person injured is a workman to whom this Act applies), or as to the amount or duration of compensation under this Act, or, except as otherwise expressly provided, to the right to or amount of any indemnity under this Act, the question, if not settled by agreement, shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be settled by the arbitration of a representative committee, or of an arbitrator, or of a judge of county courts in accordance with the First Schedule to this Act.

(2) Any question as to who is a dependant shall, in default of agreement, be settled by arbitration under this Act, or, if not so settled before payment into court under this Act, shall be settled by the county court, and the amount payable to each dependant shall be settled by arbitration under this Act, or, if not so settled before payment into court under this Act, by the county court.

This section embraces sect. 1 (3) of the old Act, and in addition the parts of the old Act which allow the right or amount of any indemnity under the Act to be settled by arbitration (see sect. 6 (2) of old Act) also the question as to who is a dependant, which was formerly Sched. I. (8) of the old Act.

Question must be specified in application for arbitration (Rule 8).

If any Question.]—Some question, is a condition precedent to arbitration and must be existent on the launching of the application (Wooder v. Lush, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 328; Higgins v. Poulson (No. 1), 5 B. 66). To what must an employer agree if he would avoid litigation and “any question”? His attitude is, “I will give everything the Act requires of me.” The workman on his part asks for an agreement in terms expressing this, so that he may register it. Then what does the Act give?

This we find in sect. 1, sub-s. 1, read with sect. 9 of the Act. Read together shortly we get—his employer shall be liable to pay compensation where total or partial incapacity results, which shall be a weekly payment during the incapacity not exceeding so much.

Here it is clear that whatever the amount, the payment is to be during the incapacity however long it continues. And therefore, at the outset a workman has a right to an unqualified agreement by the master to pay him compensation during such incapacity. A master cannot say, “Yes, you are incapacitated this week and I will pay you,” and then go on admitting liability from week to week only. The man’s right is a vested right to compensation for the whole period of the incapacity, and a master must admit this or a question will arise (Shaddick v. Palmer’s Shipbuilding and Iron Co., (1917) W. C. & I. 225). But the incapacity may vary. Certainly this is the very thing the Act contemplates, and the compensation should automatically vary with it. A master must admit liability to pay compensation, i.e., some compensation, during the whole term of the incapacity, but this does not mean he must admit liability to pay any specific amount the whole time. The amount, as we have said, must vary as the incapacity varies.

Section 21
Notes.

So a test of any proffered agreement in this respect is : Suppose the employer at any time stops payment, will the workman be able to enforce his rights or have to take proceedings to have his rights declared (see judgment, Haldane, L.C., in Freeland v. Summerlee Iron Co., (1913) W. C. Rep. 302). Thus for an employer to make an agreement beyond cavil, it should be to pay the agreed amount during the total incapacity, and thereafter during partial incapacity such amount as might from time to time be agreed, or failing agreement as might be determined by arbitration. Agreement to pay the full compensation during total incapacity only does not preclude a question arising (Cooper v. Wales, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 307; Round v. Watken & Son, (1917) W. C. & I. 134). See also Parker v. London Brick Co. & Forders, Ltd., (1928) 97 L. J. K. B. 42; 20 B. W. C. C. 573.

The position is somewhat different where compensation is being actually paid and received, for then, if an employer thus admits amount and liability, the fact that he further intimates that he thinks the man almost well, or that when he does think he is well, or that when his doctor certifies he is well he will stop payment does not raise a question, certainly not a present one. And so where a memorandum of agreement is filed providing for payment of an agreed sum during total disablement, but leaving future payments, when disablement has ceased to be total, open for future agreement, it was held in Sampson v. G. S. N. Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 36, that no question had arisen. Again, where the employers did not deny liability but asked for and obtained medical examination, and no further correspondence passed, and thirteen days later the workman commenced proceedings, it was held that no question had arisen (Crone v. Donaldson Line, Ltd., (1916) W. C. & I. 235). See also Bedwell v. London Electric Rail. Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 408, where employers expressed willingness to pay full compensation until in their opinion workman was fit to resume but declined to make an unqualified admission and it was held that no question had arisen. See, also, Smith v. Redpath, Brown & Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 14, where the employer denied concurrent employment but paid compensation. Here it was held that the man was receiving compensation under an implied agreement and that no question had arisen, and the proper course for the workman to take, if he was dissatisfied, was to apply for a review. Compare Wright v. Minister of Munitions, (1919) W. C. & I. 154. A question may arise when for any reason he says the incapacity is ended or altered and the workman says it is not (Payne v. Fortescue, (1912) W. C. R. 386). If the workman desires the more exact agreement to which he is entitled, he must demand it before accepting compensation, the giving and receiving of which without reservation goes far to establishing a present agreement between the parties. If he does so insist, he will be entitled to an agreement to be paid during the incapacity, and not during the pleasure of his employer's doctor.

Form 24 gives the form of award made on arbitration proceedings. It has been approved in Higgins v. Poulson (No. 2), (1912) W. C. Rep. 244. After first stating the weekly sum to be paid, it then says—but which the Act does not—that it, the particular amount, is to be continued during the total or partial incapacity of the workman, or until ended, diminished, etc., as provided. This hitherto has proved highly favourable to the workman, who gets the full amount between the application and the hearing of the review, even if totally recovered. True, by Morton v. Woodward, 4 W. C. C. 143, an employer may get an order dating from the application, though not earlier, but virtually it is useless, as he cannot set off the over-payments against current compensation (Hosegood v. Wilson, (1911) 1 K. B. 30). So an arbitrator may have regard to them under sect. 9 (1) (b) in fixing a new weekly sum, but this does not help when the amount should be ended.

For the form of order approved in cases where the applicant is not incapacitated at the time of the hearing, but may become so, see King v. Port of London Authority, (1919) W. C. & I. 241, at p. 245.

If not Settled by Agreement.]—It is almost needless to observe that for an agreement to hold it must have been made with a full appreciation of its terms (Brown v. Hunter, 49 S. L. R. 695); and an arbitrator must inquire into its validity so as to determine how far he has jurisdiction. Such validity will, of course, be governed by the common law applicable to all agreements (Ellis v. Lochgelly Iron, etc., Co., 46 S. L. R. 960).

When a claim is made, an employer is entitled to a reasonable time in which to admit or deny liability, and proceedings must not be rushed (Caledon, etc. v. Kennedy, 43 S. L. R. 637).

An infant's agreement, apart from the Act of 1906, needs the consent of the court to make it binding (Bates v. John Holding & Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 6).

If a point be agreed, e.g., that the applicant is a "workman" the arbitrator has no jurisdiction, either on an original application for compensation and on an application to record a memorandum of agreement, to open up the point agreed (Goodsell v. "Lloyds" (Owners), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 585).

The critical time to consider in determining whether a question has arisen or whether the parties are ad idem is the date of commencing proceedings (Baldwin v. Electric and Ordnance Accessories Co., Ltd., (1919) W. C. & I. 263). An offer to give an agreement "in suitable terms" is not an offer to pay the maximum compensation to which the man might be entitled on arbitration (Goode v. Sentinel Wagon Works, Ltd., (1920) W. C. & I. 8).

See notes to Sched. I. of this Act (formerly Sched. II. of old Act) dealing with arbitrations.

Power to
awards.

22. Where, on application being made in accordance with rules of court, it appears to a county court that, on account of neglect of children on the part of a widow, or on account of the variation of the circumstances of the various dependants, or for any other sufficient cause, an order of the court or an award as to the apportionment amongst the several dependants of any sum paid as compensation, or as to the manner in which any sum payable to any such dependant is to be invested, applied, or otherwise dealt with, ought to be varied, the court may make such order for the variation of the former order or the award, as in the circumstances of the case the court may think just.

This section was formerly Sched. I. (9) of the Act of 1906.

The sum awarded must be apportioned between the dependants. The arbitrator has no power under the Act to deprive its statutory guardian of the custody of an infant (Fleming v. Roburite Co., Ltd., (1917) W. C. & I. 82).

Registration of agreements and awards.

23.—(1) Where the amount of compensation under this Act has been ascertained, or any weekly payment varied, or any other matter decided under this Act, either by a committee or by an arbitrator or by agreement, a memorandum thereof shall be sent, in manner prescribed by rules of court, by the committee or arbitrator, or by any party interested, to the registrar of the county court, who shall, subject to such rules and subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, on being satisfied as to its genuineness, record such memorandum in a special register, and thereupon the memorandum shall for all purposes be enforceable as a county court judgment:

Provided that—

(a) no such memorandum shall be recorded before seven days after the despatch by the registrar of notice to the parties interested ; and Section 23.

- (b) where a workman seeks to record a memorandum of agreement between his employer and himself for the payment of compensation under this Act and the employer, in accordance with rules of court, proves that the workman has in fact returned to work and is earning the same wages as he did before the accident, and objects to the recording of such memorandum, the memorandum shall only be recorded, if at all, on such terms as the judge of the county court, under the circumstances, may think just.

(2) The judge of the county court may at any time rectify the register.

(3) Where a memorandum of an agreement for the payment of a lump sum is so sent for registration, the registrar, and if in pursuance of this Act the matter is referred to the judge, the judge of the county court, shall have power, in accordance with rules of court,—

- (a) to require either party to the agreement to furnish him either orally or in writing with such information as he may consider necessary, or to require the attendance of any of the parties to the agreement before him ;

- (b) when the information as to the workman's condition appears to him to be insufficient or conflicting, to require a report as to the workman's condition to be obtained from a medical referee ; and in the event of either of the parties failing to comply with any such requirement of the registrar, the registrar may refuse to record the memorandum and refer the matter to the judge, who shall have power to make such order as he may in the circumstances think just.

(4) Where it appears from any such report of a medical referee that the prospects of the workman's recovery from incapacity cannot as yet be approximately determined, the registrar, or on appeal the judge, may refuse to record the memorandum.

(5) Any agreement for the payment of a lump sum shall disclose the amount (if any) paid or payable under or in respect of the agreement by the employer to the solicitor of the workman or his dependants as costs, and, if it appears to the registrar that the amount is excessive, the registrar may direct that the bill of costs be submitted to him for taxation, and thereupon the registrar shall, subject to review by the judge, tax such costs in accordance with rules of court ; and if the costs are reduced on such taxation, the amount of such reduction shall either be applied or dealt with for the benefit of the workman or his dependants, or paid to the employer, or otherwise dealt with as the judge may direct.

Section 23.
14 & 15 Geo.
5, c. 38.

(6) The approved society or committee by which sickness or disablement benefit under the National Insurance Act, 1924, payable to the workman is administered, shall be entitled to send to the registrar objections to the registration of an agreement for the payment of a lump sum, and, in the event of the attendance of any of the parties to the agreement being required, shall be entitled to appear before the registrar, or, if the matter is referred to the judge, before the judge.

(7) Rules of court may be made providing that in any case where in connection with an application for the registration of any such agreement as aforesaid there is a hearing before the registrar or the judge, or a report from the medical referee is required to be obtained, the registrar or judge shall have the power of awarding costs.

This section embraces Schedule II. (9) of Act of 1906 (except that the part where the registrar has authority to deal with inadequacy of sum or improper means, which now appears in sect. 25), and sect. 12 of the Act of 1923.

“Parties Interested.”]—Where the workman is a member of an approved society under the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, the approved society is a “party interested” for the purpose of the registration and may appear and object to the recording of a memorandum of agreement.

When the parties come to an Agreement, under the Act (which they may do without arbitration), either party may apply for it to be recorded under this paragraph as provided by above rules. There must, however, be “agreement” (Madden v. Guest's Executors, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 559). And this application may be made at any time, provided meanwhile it has not become spent or worked out. But only a memorandum of the actual agreement entered into can be recorded. It can neither be added to nor modified. If not satisfactory, some question may arise (see sect. 21 of Act); but if accepted at all, the very terms agreed must be recorded. Agreements may be verbal. What has been agreed will be a question of fact to be decided by evidence, but no implied term can be introduced into the agreement so formed. An agreement may be implied from payment of compensation, and in Hartshorne v. Coppice Colliery Co., (1912) W. C. Rep. 256, it was powerfully argued the agreement to be implied was to bear the full burden of the Act. Contrast, however, Madden v. Guest's Executors, supra. The court could by no means agree with the proposition that from payment in one class of circumstances—during total incapacity—there could be implied a quite different term, e.g., to pay during partial incapacity. See also Godbold v. L.C.C., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 336. Payment is evidence of admission of liability, may justify no notice being given or claim being made, but how far it can be registered as an agreement must be entirely governed by the surrounding circumstances (Phillips v. Vickers, Maxim, (1912) 1 K. B. 16).

Where there is an agreement the terms of which neither disputes, but under which the amount of compensation payable is doubtful, the proper course is to deal with the matter under Rule 82 (4). See Moake's Case quoted in the notes to that rule.

In registering an agreement the functions of the court are generally ministerial only. Its duty is to inquire: Does the agreement submitted for registration express in fact the agreement actually made? If so, and only if so, it should be registered (Hudson v. Camberwell Borough Council, (1917) W. C. & I. 144). If by mistake an agreement as registered does not record the agreement as made, the register may be rectified by the judge. But rectification of the register cannot be used to modify or vary the agreement itself. If through mistake or error an agreement has been entered into and registered, steps must be taken for rectification of the agreement made before any alteration can be made in the register (Schofield v. Clough, (1912) W. C. Rep. 301).

Inconsistent Applications.]—The applicants applied to register an agreement; the employers objected; without withdrawing application to register the applicants then applied for arbitration as if no agreement. Not allowed to be heard as one case (Armston Coal Co. v. King, (1913) W. C. Rep. 388 (Sc.)).

Workman's Death.]—For the position where the workman died from a cause unconnected with the accident after a redemption agreement had been sent to the registrar to record but before the time for sending in notices of objection had elapsed, see Price v. Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 245. It was there held that the registrar and employer having no knowledge of the death the memorandum was duly recorded and was enforceable.

Spent Agreement.]—If at the time of applying for registration the agreement has worked itself out, is in fact spent, it should not be recorded, nor is there an absolute right to record if a considerable time to has been allowed to elapse during which the employer can come forward and say the workman has recovered. It is then in the arbitrator's discretion to refuse to allow the agreement to be registered (Somerville v. Barclay, Curle & Co., 19 B. W. C. C. 536). The registration only applies to where compensation is payable, and not to where as a matter of history it has been payable (Popple v. Frodingham Iron and Steel Co., (1912) 2 K. B. 141; an important decision of most extensive application which, however, has been limited considerably by the decision in Rex v. Thetford C. C. Registrar, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 136). The case of Rex v. Thetford C. C. Registrar decides that even where the agreement gives to the workman all he could possibly claim and gives it him in the form of a lump sum so that there can be no future payments, the employer can still insist on registration. Whether an agreement is in fact spent will have to be found on the evidence. Where there was an agreement containing a condition "that this weekly payment is only to be continued so long as I am totally incapacitated for work and that the amount of any payment due in respect of subsequent partial incapacity is to be ascertained as and when a question arises," it was held that in view of this term in the agreement, which provided for the case of partial incapacity, the agreement was not "spent" on the cesser of total incapacity, and that therefore the agreement was a proper one to be recorded. See Hulmston v. Birkenhead Union, (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 529. Not unusually, the practice is to decide whether an "agreement" is spent and hear an application to review at one and the same time. A memorandum must be recorded before it can be basis of proceedings (Colville v. Tigue, 43 S. L. R. 129).

Memorandum enforceable as a County Court Judgment.]—A workman must obtain leave before issuing execution. Rule 82 is even more stringent than the old rule for which it is substituted, and not only must he show default in payment of a weekly sum, but also that default has been made in complying with the agreement (Ibrahim Said v. Welsford, 3 B. 233), and the employers are entitled to be heard that this is not the case (ib.). Cf. McDowell v. McGladdery, (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 228. A registrar is not entitled to give leave to issue for execution when the incapacity is in dispute (Warren v. Roxburgh, (1912) W. C. Rep. 306); this seems to be the result of this case, though it is really difficult to see where the registrar went wrong.

Probably the practice will now be governed by sub-rule 5 of Rule 82. It will be noted many difficult points of practice are cleared up by rules actually made ad hoc, and old decisions should be closely scanned in the light of recent rules.

An agreement for compensation can only be enforced by a memorandum being registered and not by action (Cochrane v. Trail, 37 S. L. R. 662).

Section 23

Notes.

For circumstances where an administratrix was held capable of enforcing a recorded agreement, see Price v. Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 245.

Variation of Agreement.—The prudent rule that one order should be varied by another order equally applies to a recorded agreement, and if such be varied it is not usually wise to leave it on the register without also recording the varying agreement (Fife Coal Co. v. Lindsay, 45 S. L. R. 317). The effect of returning to work is to impliedly vary an agreement. A workman having returned to work for six months sought to recover on an agreement the whole of the compensation accrued for the same time, but his claim was disallowed (Baird v. McWhinnie, 45 S. L. R. 338). Compensation that has so accrued on a recorded agreement is usually recoverable on simple proof it is outstanding, without inquiry into the incapacity subsisting or otherwise, but if there is no record the whole circumstances must be inquired into. The analogy is much that of payments under an award. Till challenged it stands, and payments then due or paid cannot be taken exception to, though it be otherwise when once review is demanded.

Costs.—An agreement sent for registration must disclose the costs paid or to be paid by the employer to the solicitor of the workman, and if excessive may be added to the compensation or returned to the employer as the judge may direct (sub-sect. 5).

Where the court refused to record (the workman opposing) and ordered the employer to pay costs and then the workman changed his mind and later opposed his own opposition, it was held on appeal that the order as to costs must be discharged, the order refusing to record the agreement standing (Cambridge v. Taylor, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 96, followed in Scott v. Shilling, (1920) W. C. & I. 1).

Registration of composition agreements.

24. Where the person against whom a claim for compensation is made under this Act disputes his liability to pay compensation, but makes an agreement (in this Act referred to as a composition agreement) whereby in consideration of the payment of a lump sum the claim for such compensation purports to be precluded, the agreement shall be sent for registration in like manner and subject to the like conditions as in the case of an agreement for the redemption of a weekly payment by a lump sum.

This provision first appeared in the Act of 1923 (sect. 21).

This section will also prove of great practical use. It enables an employer who disputes his liability to pay compensation, but is nevertheless willing to pay a certain sum, and makes an agreement with the workman to this effect, to have such an agreement registered in the same way as an agreement for redemption of weekly payments by a lump sum. The registrar, or on appeal the judge, in considering whether the sum named in the agreement is adequate, must take into consideration the question whether or not liability to pay compensation is doubtful.

See as to the registration of such an agreement, sect. 25, infra.

Invalidity of certain agreements
registered.

25.—(1) An agreement as to the redemption of weekly payments by a lump sum, if not registered in accordance with this Act, shall not, nor shall the payment of the sum payable under the agreement, exempt a person by whom the weekly payment is payable from liability to continue to make that weekly payment, unless he proves that the failure to register was not due to any neglect or default on his part.

(2) An agreement as to the amount of compensation to be paid to a person under a legal disability or to dependants, if not registered in accordance with this Act, shall not, nor shall the payment of the sum payable under the agreement, exempt a person by whom the compensation is payable from liability to pay compensation unless he proves that the failure to register was not due to any neglect or default on his part.

Section 25.

(3) A composition agreement if not registered in accordance with this Act shall not, nor shall the payment of any sum payable thereunder, exempt the employer from liability under this Act.

(4) Where it appears to the registrar of the county court on any information which he considers sufficient that an agreement to which this section applies ought not to be registered by reason of the inadequacy of the sum or amount agreed to be paid, or by reason of the agreement having been obtained by fraud or undue influence or other improper means, he may refuse to record the memorandum of the agreement sent to him for registration and refer the matter to the judge, who shall in accordance with rules of court make such order (including an order as to any sum already paid under the agreement) as in the circumstances he may think just:

Provided that in the case of a composition agreement in determining whether or not the sum agreed to be paid under the agreement is adequate the registrar, or if the matter is referred to the judge, the judge, shall have regard to the question whether or not liability to pay compensation under this Act is doubtful.

(5) The judge may within six months after a memorandum of an agreement to which this section applies has been recorded in the register order that the record be removed from the register on proof to his satisfaction that the agreement has been obtained by fraud or undue influence or other improper means, and may make such order (including an order as to any sum already paid under the agreement) as in the circumstances he may think just.

This section embraces Schedule II. (10), and parts of Schedule II. (9) of the old Act, and parts of sect. 21 of Act of 1923.

Practice.—Record memorandum (Rules 43—49); rectification (Rule 50); proviso (d) (Rule 51); proviso (e) (Rule 52); execution (Rule 82); setting aside award (Rule 85); enforcing memorandum in another court (Rule 89).

See generally as to this clause Macey v. Edmonton Munitions Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 224.

Rule 19 (1) (a) (ii.) seems ultra vires, because compensation in the first instance must be a weekly payment (Mulholland v. Whitehaven Colliery Co., (1910) 2 K. B. 228). The rule may, however, be intended to be confined to cases where incapacity has ceased before the hearing.

Redemption of a Weekly Payment—Duty of Registrar.—Under this sect. a registrar can refuse to record a memorandum of agreement (1) if not satisfied as to its genuineness; (2) if there be evidence that it was improperly obtained; (3) if the sum is inadequate and the lump sum is to be paid in redemption of a weekly payment; (4) if the sum is inadequate and the payment is to be made to a person under disability or to dependants (H. D.

Section 25
Notes.

Rawlings, Ltd. v. Hodgson, (1918) W. C. & I. 184; Segura v. Blampied, 4 B. 192), but he cannot fix it (Mortimer v. Secretan, (1909) 2 K. B. 77). In considering whether an amount arrived at by agreement is adequate the judge is not bound by Schedule I., par. 17, now sect. 13, though the sum agreed on may be the same as would, at the time, have been the amount awarded on an application by the employers to redeem the weekly compensation (Sharp v. Richardson and Co., (1920) 3 K. B. 152; 89 L. J. K. B. 1050). In O'Neill v. The Anglo-American Oil Co., 2 B. 434, the arbitrator held 175*l.* was inadequate to redeem 17*s.* 3*d.* a week. The parties and their advisers wished to close at this sum, and on it appearing on appeal that the arbitrator had seemingly misdirected himself by regarding the incapacity as permanent, the court approved the transaction. In two cases a judge has found the amount inadequate, and on subsequent proceedings has correctly found for the employer altogether (Beech v. Bradford Corporation, 4 B. 236; Marriott v. Brett, 5 B. 144). The scope of this section is considerably extended by sect. 16 (1) (c) of the National Insurance Act, 1924, in cases where the workman is an insured person.

The Court of Appeal in Ryan v. Hartley held that the registrar under the above section had no power to refuse to register agreement except in the three cases mentioned in the sub-section, namely: Where it was in redemption of a weekly payment, or an amount payable to person under disability, or to dependants, and consequently where an agreement was made for a lump sum by a workman of full age in respect of his own injury not receiving weekly payments, the registrar had no jurisdiction. This decision was followed in Hudson v. Camberwell Corporation, (1917); Rawlings, Ltd. v. Hodgson, (1918); Williams v. Minister of Munitions, (1919); and Haydock v. Goodier, (1921), some of which cases went much further and laid down that a workman could not be in receipt of weekly payments unless the payments had been settled by arbitration or agreed between him and the employer, and the employer was under an obligation to continue the payments.

All these cases have been overruled by the House of Lords in Russell v. Rudd, (1923) A. C. 309; (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 429, which decided: Firstly, that a workman cannot make an agreement with the employer for a lump sum, except as provided in the Act, and this, therefore, must be subject to approval by the registrar or the court; and secondly, that any sum agreed upon in substitution for the right given to an injured workman by the Act must be regarded as a sum in redemption of weekly payments, and thus again become subject to the approval of the registrar.

The effect of all this is that now every agreement whether with person of full age or on behalf of infants, by which a sum is taken in exchange for abandoned rights under the Act, must be registered. Even a composite agreement as it is called must be registered, but the registrar or judge in considering whether this is a fair agreement must consider whether or not liability to pay compensation under the Act is doubtful. Rule 85 provides for agreements, etc., obtained by fraud, though not for mistake. The arbitrator has no right to find fraud if no allegation of fraud is made (Hudson's Case, supra).

Infants.—Following the decision of the Court of Appeal in Rhodes v. The Soothill Colliery Co., (1909) 1 K. B. 191, which declares that agreements with infants shall be conditional only unless and until a memorandum has been recorded, elaborate rules (60, 61, and 62) have been made, enabling employers to pay money into court where there are infants, and providing for registrars approving of agreements on their behalf under this paragraph. Rule 60 (12) makes an employer liable for costs prior to payment in, but relieves him from them thereafter.

It has been held by the Court of Appeal that where an agreement has been entered into between the father as next friend of an infant workman and the employers, for the payment of a lump sum by way of compensation, and a memorandum thereof had been duly recorded by the registrar under the provisions of this paragraph, the agreement becomes as effective as if it had been signed by the infant workman himself (Rhodes v. The Soothill Wood Colliery Co., (1909) 1 K. B. 191, followed), and the county court judge, in the absence of proof that the agreement was obtained by fraud, etc., has no jurisdiction to order the agreement to be removed from the register (Ware v. Whitlock, (1923) 2 K. B. 418; (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 763).

Removal of Agreement from Register.—The judge may at any time within six months remove an agreement from the register if obtained by fraud or improper means; afterwards it cannot be removed. This means if the application to remove is made within six months, although the hearing may be later (Paterson v. Ardrossan Harbour Co., 19 B. W. C. C. 621).

26.—(1) The compensation payable in the case of death shall, Payments unless otherwise ordered, as hereinafter provided, be paid into into court. the county court:

Provided that if so agreed the compensation in the case of death shall, if the workman leaves no dependants, be paid to his legal personal representative or, if he has no such representative, to the person to whom the expenses of medical attendance and burial are due.

(2) Where a weekly payment is payable under this Act to a person under any legal disability, the county court may, on an application being made in accordance with rules of court, order that the weekly payment be paid during the disability into court.

(3) The provisions of the Second Schedule to this Act shall have effect with respect to money paid into court under this Act and the application and investment thereof.

Practice, Rules 60—62.

As to payment in with denial of liability, see now composition agreements dealt with in last section; also Johnston v. Oceanic Steam Navigation Co., (1912) W. C. Rep. 162; and Rule 60 as to payment in, generally; Rule 61, with admission of liability; and Rule 62, with denial of liability. The amount payable to each dependant must be apportioned (Daniels v. Ocean Coal Co., (1900) 2 Q. B. 250), though in the case of the death of one participant, her share does not go to her estate, but so far as unappropriated, remains as part of the original fund to be for the benefit of the remaining dependants (Ivey v. Ivey, (1912) 2 K. B. 118). Where pursuant to Rule 53 a lump sum has been paid into court in satisfaction of all claims in respect of an accident to an infant workman, the latter, on attaining full age, is entitled to have the money paid out to him, there being no discretion in the county court judge to refuse payment of the whole or any portion of the sum to a person not under any legal disability (Johnston v. H. Liston & Co., (1919) W. C. & I. 277).

For the general provisions as to payment into court and investment, see Schedule II. of the present Act.

27.—(1) Where any matter under this Act is to be done in a county court, or by, to, or before the judge or registrar of a county court, then, unless the contrary intention appear, the same shall, subject to rules of court, be done in, or by, to, or before the judge or registrar of, the county court of the district in which all the parties concerned reside, or if they reside in different districts the district prescribed by rules of court, without prejudice to any transfer in manner provided by rules of court.

Provisions
as to county courts.

Section 27.

51 & 52 Vict.
c. 43.

(2) The duty of a judge of county courts under this Act, or in England of an arbitrator appointed by him, shall, subject to rules of court, be part of the duties of the county court, and the officers of the court shall act accordingly, and rules of court may be made both for any purpose for which this Act authorises rules of court to be made, and also generally for carrying into effect this Act so far as it affects the county court, or an arbitrator appointed by the judge of the county court, and proceedings in the county court or before any such arbitrator, and such rules may, in England, be made by the five judges of county courts appointed for the making of rules under section one hundred and sixty-four of the County Courts Act, 1888, and when allowed by the Lord Chancellor, as provided by that section, shall have full effect without any further consent.

This section embraces Schedule II. (11) and (12) of the old Act.

This section includes all respondents as employers within United Kingdom (Rex v. Owen, (1902) 2 K. B. 436), and also employer respondents resident abroad where the claim arises out of a contract of service made in this country (Hunter v. Stadtische Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 493; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 300; (1925) 133 L. T. 488). Service can be made by registered post (Rule 16).

As to court in which proceedings are to be taken (Rule 88); stay of proceedings when several applications for arbitration (Rule 17); transfer of proceedings (Rule 90); proceedings subsequent to award (e.g., execution) in a court other than that in which award was made (Rule 89); service and substituted service (Rules 16, 92 and 93).

Rules are the machinery by which an Act is reduced to practice; if they fall short in this respect they are defective, if they do more than this, they are ultra vires, as far as they do this, they have statutory effect.

As to procedure generally (Rule 29); anything not covered by special rules to follow practice in county court as far as possible (Rule 96).

For Rules to be used in proceeding under the Act, see post.

Extension of powers of representative committees.

28. The Secretary of State may, by order, either unconditionally or subject to such conditions or modifications as he may think fit, confer on any committee representative of an employer and his workmen, as respects any matter in which the committee act as arbitrators, or which is settled by agreement submitted to and approved by the committee, all or any of the powers conferred by this Act exclusively on county courts or judges of county courts, and may by the order provide how and to whom the compensation money is to be paid in cases where, but for the order, the money would be required to be paid into court, and the order may exclude from the operation of subsections (4) and (5) of section twenty-five of this Act agreements submitted to and approved by the committee, and may contain such incidental, consequential, or supplemental provisions as may appear to the Secretary of State to be necessary or proper for the purposes of the order.

This section was formerly Schedule II. (16) of the old Act. It gives the Secretary of State power to confer the privileges which county courts enjoy on a committee, and may allow them to approve agreements of settlement instead of the registrar or judge of the county court.

A county court judge has no jurisdiction to set aside an award made by a Committee. Blakey v. Samuelson, (1920) 3 K. B. 508.

Section 28
Notes.

Alternative remedies, &c.

29.—(1) When the injury was caused by the personal negligence or wilful act of the employer or of some person for whose act or default the employer is responsible, nothing in this Act shall affect any civil liability of the employer, but in that case the workman may, at his option, either claim compensation under this Act or take proceedings independently of this Act; but the employer shall not be liable to pay compensation for injury to a workman by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment both independently of and also under this Act, and shall not be liable to any proceedings independently of this Act, except in case of such personal negligence or wilful act as aforesaid.

Remedies
independently of
employer.

(2) If, within the time hereinbefore limited for taking proceedings under this Act, an action is brought to recover damages independently of this Act for injury caused by an accident, and it is determined in such action or on appeal that the injury is one for which the employer is not liable in such action, but that he would have been liable to pay compensation under the provisions of this Act, the action shall be dismissed; but the court in which the action is tried, or, if the determination is the determination (on an appeal by either party) by an appellate tribunal, that tribunal, shall, if the plaintiff so choose, proceed to assess such compensation, but may deduct from such compensation all or part of the costs, which, in its judgment, have been caused by the plaintiff bringing the action instead of proceeding under this Act. In any proceeding under this subsection, when the court or appellate tribunal assesses the compensation, it shall give a certificate of the compensation it has awarded and the directions it has given as to the deduction of costs, and such certificate shall have the force and effect of an award under this Act:

Provided that an appellate tribunal may, instead of itself assessing such compensation, remit the case to the county court for the assessment of the compensation, and in such case may order the county court to deduct from the amount of compensation assessed by it all or part of such costs as aforesaid.

This section embraces sect. 1 (2) (b) of the old Act, and sect. 18 of the Act of 1923.

This provision reserves to a workman all rights against his employer other than under the Act. But such rights reserved are only alternative, not cumulative, and the Act is clear as to the workman's personal rights. A workman shall not attempt to be paid twice for the same injury. He must elect which remedy he will enforce, and having elected will be bound by it. It may be that he may try to assert other rights against his employer and fail; in this case, sub-s. 2 provides machinery—which must be adopted—by which he may fall back upon the Act for compensation. So it may be he may try to assert rights under the Act and fail, but if the Act in no way applies—to give him compensation, e.g., if he claims as a workman when he is not a workman—neither will it apply to deprive him of any rights he may have outside it. It will be otherwise, however, if a claim be made and dismissed on its merits, e.g., for wilful disobedience (Burton v. Chapel Coal Co., Ltd., 36 S. L. R. 375). There are many cases as to what is an effective exercise of an option, but none furnish a conclusive test. Such exercise is clearly a question of fact to be determined by evidence in every case. See Bennett v. L. and W. Whitehead, Ltd. (infra). The filing a claim, withdrawn on receipt of respondent's answer and the initiation of legal proceedings, generally is only some evidence of the exercise of such option, and is by no means final. The one only test that emerges as at all general—and it is by no means of universal application—is, has the man deliberately taken money with the full knowledge it has been given him and only given in discharge of the payer's liability. If so, he has elected and can seek further payment from no one else and for no other cause. If the payment and receipt has been with a reservation, e.g., by a master making an allowance to a workman pending an action against a third party, there is no evidence of an election, rather the reverse (Oliver v. Nautilus S.S. Co., 5 W. C. C. 65; Wright v. Lindsay, 49 S. L. R. 210). In the case of Codling v. John Mowlem & Co. (No. 1), (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 579, where the workman died and the employers paid into court £300, the maximum sum due under the Act, and it was invested on behalf of his children with the knowledge and consent of his widow, the widow was held to have elected and an action by her at common law for negligence was held not maintainable.

So it has been held that an arbitrator rightly found there was no evidence of a bonâ fide election when the parties settled under the Employers' Liability Act to avoid coming under the Act. The man died, his dependants tried to reopen the matter and succeeded (Howell v. Bradford, 4 B. 203; also Hawkes v. Cole, 3 B. 163). As to independent rights of dependants, see Gill v. Fortescue, (1913) W. C. Rep. 471.

Practice, Rule 54.

The prosecution of an action—certainly to its conclusion—is an election under sub-sect. 1, above.

See Bennett v. L. and W. Whitehead, Ltd., (1926) 2 K. B. 380; (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 268. In this case there were three alternative claims: (1) for damages under the Employers' Liability Act; (2) for damages for negligence at common law; and (3) for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Acts. This action was discontinued and the workman commenced fresh proceedings for compensation only under the Workmen's Compensation Acts. Held by a majority of the Court of Appeal that there had been no conclusive election, and that consequently he was not debarred from proceeding with this claim for compensation.

The effect of sub-sect. (2), above, is to reverse the previously existing law, viz., that it was the court alone which tried the abortive action which could assess the compensation. Now the workman may appeal in the action, and still reserve his right to ask for compensation under the Act. The decision in Harrison v. Wythemoor Colliery Co., (1922) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 180; 2 K. B. 674; 91 L. J. K. B. 832; is consequently no longer law. See also Adair v. David Colville & Sons, 20 B. W. C. C. 702.

If there is an appeal the Court of Appeal may upon dismissal of the appeal, either assess the compensation itself and deal with the costs or send the case to the county court to have compensation assessed. On any such application further evidence may be given (Baxter v. Norris, 9 W. C. C. 33), and the judge will hear it as an arbitrator would (Slavin v. Train, 49 S. L. R. 93). Rights under this sub-section are limited to the actual parties in the action, and do not enure for the benefit of other dependants (Kyle v. M'Gintys, 4 B. W. C. C. 389).

30. Where the injury for which compensation is payable under this Act, or any scheme certified under this Act, was caused under circumstances creating a legal liability in some person other than the employer to pay damages in respect thereof—

Section 30.

Remedies
both against employer and stranger.

- (1) The workman may take proceedings both against that person to recover damages and against any person liable to pay compensation under this Act or such scheme for such compensation, but shall not be entitled to recover both damages and compensation; and
- (2) If the workman has recovered compensation under this Act or such scheme, the person by whom the compensation was paid, and any person who has been called on to pay an indemnity under section six of this Act relating to liability in case of workmen employed by contractors, shall be entitled to be indemnified by the person so liable to pay damages as aforesaid, and all questions as to the right to and amount of any such indemnity shall, in default of agreement, be settled by action, or, by consent of the parties, by arbitration under this Act.

Under the last section, where the workman had a double claim against his employer, it has been seen he has to elect. Under this section, where he has a claim against his employer and an outsider, he can proceed against both, but he is to be paid once only. Probably the section does not mean that he can take proceedings against both at the same time, but that if he fails against one he can then try the other. See Long v. G. N. Rail. Co., (1902) 86 L. T. 802. See also Cumberland v. Lanarkshire Tramways Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 780. Acceptance of compensation from an employer is probably a "recovery" (Aldin v. Stewart, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 454; Gray v. N. B. Ry. Co., ibid., 458, 460). It is different, however, if the compensation is accepted with the reservation of all rights against third parties and on the terms that if damages are obtained the compensation will be refunded (Kelly v. N. B. Ry. Co., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 516). If a workman recovers under the Act and then dies his dependants cannot proceed at common law against the persons guilty of the negligence which caused the injury (Gray v. N. B. Rail. Co., (1915) S. C. 211). See generally as to the position as regards election of remedies, Ruegg's Workmen's Compensation, 9th edition, pp. 218-220.

Sub-s. 2. Employer's Indemnity.]—Where a workman would have a right of action against another for the injuries he has sustained, so far, and only so far, and no further has an employer a right to an indemnity. See Saies v. British Petroleum Co., Ltd. & Great Western Rail., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 1289, where the county court judge awarded indemnity to the employers, because, though holding that there was some contributory negligence on the part of the workman who was killed, the effective negligence, which occasioned the death, was the negligence of the third parties. See also Hines v. Tousley (Newell (third party)), (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 773.

If a workman would have a right against fellow workmen for negligence, and he has (Lees v. Dunkerley Brothers, (1911) A. C. 5), an employer has the same. His rights are simply co-extensive with those of his workman. And if such rights once become vested, so also do those of the employer, and even where death would have ended the workman's rights, his death does not end those of his employer. Under the definition, "workman" includes dependants, and in Smith's Dock v. Redhead, (1912) 2 K. B. 323, the employer on the workman's death had to compensate an illegitimate child with no rights against the third party; but as the injury was caused under circumstances creating a liability in some person other than the employer, and the workman, as defined, recovered compensation, therefore the employer was entitled to be indemnified.

If the employer's own negligence, equally with that of the third party, is the cause of the accident, he has no right over under sub-sect. 2, supra (Cory v. France, (1911) 1 K. B. 114).

In Dickson v. J. A. Scott, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 67, it was decided that the occupiers of premises in which a workman was injured by falling down an unlighted unfenced hole some short time after working hours were liable to the employer who had paid compensation. The workman was regarded as a licensee to whom a duty to take care was owed.

The Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, does not apply to an action under this section by an employer who has paid compensation and sues the defendants for indemnity (Tuckwood v. Mayor, &c., of Rotherham, (1921) 1 K. B. 526; 90 L. J. K. B. 341).

What does the Indemnity cover?—The whole matter is fully discussed in Nettleingham v. Powell, (1913) W. C. Rep. 22. On February 18th, 1911, a workman was injured and compensation 15s. a week paid. In August, the employer first found injuries due to negligence of defendants and wrote demanding indemnity, which was refused. December 2nd they reduced payments to 7s. 6d. January 1st, 1912, workman instituted proceedings. Hearing fixed for February 6th. February 5th, informed defendants, who did not attend. On hearing, settled for £52 10s. and costs, £22 10s. They claimed indemnity:—fifty weeks' compensation; workman's fare to be medically examined, 14s. 6d.; his costs, £22 10s.; own costs, £17 16s.; medical fee, £9 9s.; total £136 12s. They did not comply with r. 24, now r. 25 and modified to meet this case. It was held this did not forfeit their rights under this section, but put them to strict proof of every item.

Settled by Action.—If third parties agree to settlement by arbitration, they seriously limit their right of appeal (Cutsforth v. Johnson, N. E. Rail. third parties, (1913) W. C. Rep. 131), as they can only object to a finding of fact if no evidence.

Substitution of liability under scheme for liability
under Act.

31.—(1) If the Registrar of Friendly Societies, after taking steps to ascertain the views of the employer and workmen, certifies—

- (a) that any scheme of compensation, benefit or insurance for the workmen of an employer in any employment, whether or not such scheme includes other employers and their workmen, provides scales of compensation not less favourable to the workmen and their dependants than the corresponding scales contained in this Act, and
- (b) that, where the scheme provides for contributions by the workmen, the scheme confers benefits at least equivalent to those contributions, in addition to the benefits to which the workmen would have been entitled under this Act; and
- (c) that a majority (to be ascertained by ballot) of the workmen to whom the scheme is applicable are in favour of such scheme;

the employer may, whilst the certificate is in force, contract with any of his workmen that the provisions of the scheme shall be substituted for the provisions of this Act, and thereupon the employer shall be liable in respect of those workmen only in accordance with the scheme. Section 31.

(2) The Registrar may give a certificate to expire at the end of a limited period of five years, and may from time to time renew with or without modifications such a certificate to expire at the end of the period for which it is renewed.

(3) No scheme shall be so certified which contains an obligation upon the workmen to join the scheme as a condition of their hiring, or which does not contain provisions enabling a workman to withdraw from the scheme.

(4) The Registrar shall not certify, or renew a certificate of, any such scheme unless he is satisfied that adequate provision is made to secure the discharge of liabilities arising under the scheme, both during the currency of the scheme and after the scheme is revoked or expires, so far as there may be any liabilities outstanding at the date of revocation or expiry.

(5) If complaint is made to the Registrar by or on behalf of the workmen of any employer that the benefits conferred by any scheme no longer conform to the conditions stated in subsection (1) of this section, or that the provisions of such scheme are being violated, or that the scheme is not being fairly administered, or that satisfactory reasons exist for revoking the certificate, the Registrar shall examine into the complaint, and, if satisfied that good cause exists for such complaint, shall, unless the cause of complaint is removed, revoke the certificate.

(6) When a certificate is revoked or expires, any moneys or securities held for the purpose of the scheme shall, after due provision has been made to discharge the liabilities already accrued, be distributed as may be arranged between the employer and workmen, or as may be determined by the Registrar in the event of a difference of opinion.

(7) Whenever a scheme has been certified as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the employer to answer all such inquiries and to furnish all such accounts in regard to the scheme as may be made or required by the Registrar.

(8) Where a scheme certified under this Act provides for payment of compensation by a friendly society, the provisions of the proviso to the first subsection of section eight, section sixteen, and section forty-one of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, shall not apply to such society in respect of such scheme.

(9) The Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies shall include in his annual report the particulars of the proceedings of the Registrar under this Act.

(10) The Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies may make regulations for the purpose of carrying this section into effect.

Section 31
Notes.

This section embraces sect. 3, Schedule I. (21) of the old Act, and sect. 17 of the Act of 1923.

Sect. 6 of the Act of 1923 also deals with the same subject. This section is not repealed, and will be found on p. 1407, and infra.

By sect. 6, sub-s. (1), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, if it appears to the Registrar of Friendly Societies that any scheme duly certified by him under sect. 3 (1) of the Act of 1906 (now sub-s. (1) above) no longer complies with the requirements of that section by reason of the foregoing provisions of this Act, he shall make such amendments of the scales of compensation provided by the scheme as may in his opinion be necessary to render them not less favourable to the workmen and their dependants than the corresponding scales contained in the principal Act as amended by this Act.

By sect. 6 (2) of Act of 1923, where the Registrar has amended scales of compensation provided by any such scheme as aforesaid the scheme shall have effect as if when originally made it had provided for the substitution as from the date of the commencement of this Act of the amended scales for the scales originally contained therein and the amended scales shall continue to apply until the expiry of the certificate in force at the commencement of this Act, or of any renewal thereof given by the Registrar under the principal Act.

By sect. 17 of Act of 1923 (now sub-s. (4), above) the Registrar is not to certify or renew the certificate of any scheme under sect. 3 of the principal Act unless satisfied that adequate provision is made to secure the discharge of all liabilities arising under the scheme both during the currency of the scheme or after it is revoked or expires.

For rules, see Appendix GG.

By Horn v. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, (1911) 1 K. B. 24 (compare Barton v. Admiralty Commissioners, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 37), a valid scheme under this section is substituted for the provisions of the Act in its entirety. It is under this section only that contracting out of the Act is provided for, but when a workman does come within the scheme he is outside the Act altogether. This case was followed in Haworth v. Andrew Knowles (No. 2), (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 746, when a scheme came to an untimely end, and the man wanted to make the masters liable, but could not. He had contracted out of the Act. Horn's Case was distinguished in Leaf v. Fuzze, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 601, where the meaning of the word "accident" in a valid scheme was read according to the extended meaning given to it in the Act, i.e., so as to include industrial disease.

In Godwin v. Admiralty Commissioners, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 680, the same decision was given, and the objection to the recertifying of the scheme under the old Act of 1897 was disallowed.

Where the rules are revised with the result that the compensation payable is increased a workman injured before the revision is entitled to compensation at the increased rate as from the date of revision (Beard v. Committee, etc. West Yorkshire Coll., (1918) W. C. & I. 159).

Apart from this section contracting out is forbidden, but in Ryan v. Hartley, (1912) W. C. Rep. 236, it was decided that a disputed claim might be settled by payment of a lump sum, and that this did not constitute an agreement requiring registration.

The view taken in Ryan v. Hartley was shown to be incorrect by the decision of the House of Lords in Russell v. Rudd, (1923) A. C. 309 and (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 429. See supra. Ryan v. Hartley is, therefore, overruled. Since these cases, however, the matter has been set at rest by sect. 24 of the present Act, which allows an employer in a doubtful case to make a composition agreement, though such an agreement must be registered. (See notes to sects. 24 and 25.)

Apart from this, the only protection a master has is, a "spent agreement" cannot be registered (Popple v. Frodingham Iron and Steel Co., (1912) 2 K. B. 141).

In British and South A. S. N. Co. v. Neil, 3 B. 413, the parties agreed that if a dispute arose as to total incapacity the workman should join in an application for a reference to a referee under Schedule I. (15) of Act of 1906 (now sect. 19), and that if he refused compensation should be ended. This penal clause was held to be a contracting out of the Act, and therefore rendered the agreement void.

Section 31
Notes.

Where a scheme provided that any question with regard to what was an injury within the meaning of that term as used in the scheme should be determined by the committee, it was decided in Allen v. G. E. R., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 388, that the decision of the committee was final and ousted the jurisdiction of the courts. If the workman complains that he has not been heard, his remedy is to apply for an order upon the committee or tribunal to hear and determine his claim in accordance with substantial principles of justice (Dowling v. G. E. Ry., (1919) W. C. & I. 75).

Money paid or payable under a scheme approved under this section cannot be assigned, charged or attached (see sect. 40, post).

32.—Nothing in this Act shall affect any proceeding for a fine under the enactments relating to mines, factories or workshops, or the application of any such fine.

Saving as respects fines under Mines and Factories Acts.

If the employer is fined, this is no defence to an action for damages by an injured man (Lees v. Sykes (third parties) v. Dunkerley Bros., (1911) A. C. 5).

Application to special Classes of Persons.

33.—(1) This Act shall not apply to persons in the naval or military or air service of the Crown, but otherwise shall apply to workmen employed by or under the Crown to whom this Act would apply if the employer were a private person :

Application to workmen in employment of Crown.

Provided that in the case of a person employed in the private service of the Crown, the head of that department of the Royal Household in which he was employed at the time of the accident shall be deemed to be his employer.

(2) The Treasury may, by warrant laid before Parliament, 50 & 51 Vict. modify for the purposes of this Act their warrant made under section one of the Superannuation Act, 1887, and notwithstanding anything in that Act, or any such warrant, may frame schemes with a view to their being certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies under this Act. c. 67.

Practice, Rule 95.

Concurrent Contracts.—In Brandy v. S.S. Raphael, (1911) A. C. 413, a stoker on a merchant vessel was a member of the Naval Reserve, and received 6*l.* a year as a retainer. Held this was earnings under a concurrent contract of service under Sched. I. (2) (b) of old Act (now sect. 10 (ii)). The Crown not being liable in certain cases did not mean no other employer should be.

34.—(1) When provision has been made in pursuance of regulations under the Coal Mines Act, 1911, or under any order which has effect as if made under that Act, for the formation or training of a rescue brigade, any accident caused to a workman employed in or about a mine to which that Act applies, who is with the consent of his employer being trained as a member of the rescue brigade, and arising out of and in the course of his training, shall,

Application to men being trained or engaged in rescue work in mines. 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 50.

Section 34.

for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to arise out of and in the course of his employment in the mine.

(2) Any workman engaged in any rescue work or ambulance work at any such mine shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed while so engaged to be employed by the owner of the mine, as defined by the Coal Mines Act, 1911.

See notes to Rescue Work in Mines, under sect. 1.

Application of Act to persons employed on ships.

35.—(1) This Act shall apply to masters, seamen and apprentices to the sea service and apprentices in the sea-fishing service, provided that such persons are workmen within the meaning of this Act, and are members of the crew of any ship registered in the United Kingdom, or of any other British ship or vessel of which the owner, of * (if there is more than one owner) the managing owner, or manager resides or has his principal place of business in the United Kingdom, subject to the following modifications:—

(a) The notice of accident and the claim for compensation may, except where the person injured is the master, be given to the master of the ship as if he were the employer, but where the accident happened and the incapacity commenced on board the ship it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the accident:

Practice Rules 38-40.

(b) The provisions of subsection (1) of section fifteen of this Act (other than those relating to the institution of proceedings by an inspector of mines or factories) shall apply to ships and the masters thereof in like manner as it applies to factories and the occupiers thereof:

(c) In the case of the death of the master, seaman or apprentice, the claim for compensation shall be made within six months after news of the death has been received by the claimant:

(d) Where an injured master, seaman or apprentice is discharged or left behind in a British possession or in a foreign country, depositions respecting the circumstances and nature of the injury may be taken by any judge or magistrate in the British possession, and by any British consular officer in the foreign country, and if so taken shall be transmitted by the person by whom they are taken to the Board of Trade, and such depositions or certified copies thereof shall in any proceedings for enforcing the claim be admissible in evidence as provided by sections six hundred and ninety-one and six hundred and ninety-five of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and those sections shall apply, accordingly:

* Query "or."

Sect. 695 is printed post, Part V. For Order in Council, see Appendix HH. p. 1608.

Section 35.

- (e) In the case of the death of a master, seaman or apprentice, leaving no dependants, no compensation shall be payable if the owner of the ship is under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, liable to pay the expenses of burial :

This seems to be sect. 34, Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, substituted for sect. 207, Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (see post, Part V.).

- (f) The weekly payment shall not be payable in respect of the period during which the owner of the ship is, under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, as amended by any subsequent enactment, or otherwise, liable to defray the expenses of maintenance of the injured master, seaman or apprentice :

- (g) Any sum payable by way of compensation by the owner of a ship under this Act shall be paid in full notwithstanding anything in section five hundred and three of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (which relates to the limitation of a shipowner's liability in certain cases of loss of life, injury or damage), but the limitation on the owner's liability imposed by that section shall apply to the amount recoverable by way of indemnity under section thirty of this Act relating to remedies both against employer and stranger as if the indemnity were damages for loss of life or personal injury :

- (h) Subsections (2) and (3) of section one hundred and seventy-four of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (a) (which relates to the recovery of wages of seamen lost with their ship), shall apply as respects proceedings for the recovery of compensation by dependants of masters, seamen and apprentices lost with their ship as they apply with respect to proceedings for the recovery of wages due to seamen and apprentices ; and proceedings for the recovery of compensation shall in such a case be maintainable if the claim is made within eighteen months of the date at which the ship is deemed to have been lost with all hands. :

(a) See Part V. The provisions are additional, not substitutive, means of proof (Maginn v. Carlingford Lough S.S. Co., 43 Ir. L. T. R. 214), and application for arbitration may be brought at any time if other proof of death be available (Ib.).

- (2) This Act shall not apply to such members of the crew of a fishing vessel as are remunerated wholly or mainly by shares in the profits or the gross earnings of the working of such vessel, except in such cases and subject to such modifications as the Secretary of State may by order provide :

Provided that no such order shall come into force until it has

Section 35. been laid before each House of Parliament for a period of not less than twenty-one days during which the House has sat, and, if 2 & 3 Geo. 5, either House before the expiration of those twenty-one days
 c. 31. presents an address to His Majesty against the order or any part thereof, no further proceedings shall be taken thereon, but without prejudice to the making of a new order.

(3) This section shall extend to pilots to whom the Pilotage Act, 1913, applies, as if a pilot when employed on any such ship as aforesaid were a seaman and a member of the crew.

(4) This Act shall also apply to any person, not being a master, seaman or apprentice to the sea service or the sea fishing service, employed on board any such ship as is mentioned in this section, if he is so employed for the purposes of the ship or of any passengers or cargo or mails carried by the ship, and if he is otherwise a workman within the meaning of this Act.

This section comprises sect. 7 of the old Act, sect. 8 of Act of 1923, and part of sect. 9 of Act of 1923.

As to meaning of "ship," "seamen," etc., see sect. 48 of Act, and Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 742. The Act does not seem strictly limited to services actually on board. In Dothie v. MacAndrew, (1908) 1 K. B. 803, a captain went on shore about deserting seamen and was injured when stepping into a tram, and it seemed accepted he was within the Act.

"Manager" by sect. 48 means the ship's husband or other person to whom the management of the ship is entrusted by or on behalf of the owner.

Seamen must also be workmen. A master may still be a workman, though owner of shares in the ship. Such ownership does not necessarily make him a partner (Sharpe v. Carswell, (1910) S. C. 391; 47 S. L. R. 335).

Although a seaman is within the Act, it does not enable him to recover in respect of an industrial disease under sect. 43, since he cannot get the necessary certificate. See Curtis v. Black & Co., (1909) 2 K. B. 529.

Members of the Crew.]—This may possibly limit "seamen" to regular hands as distinguished from temporary workers, though "signing on" may not be a necessary formality. Cattlemen employed by cargo owners to see after their animals on board have been held not part of the crew (Anglo-Argentine Co. v. Temperley S. Co., (1899) 2 Q. B. 403); but see now sub-s. (4).

Registered.]—This section applies only to registered or British ships as specified (Mortimer v. Wisker, 83 L. J. K. B. 1245). A colonial sailor on a colonial ship belonging to a colonial owner had, therefore, no rights under this section, and though injured locally has no rights apart from it (Panagotis v. Pontiac, (1912) W. C. Rep. 74).

Sub-s. (1) (f) only means benefits must not overlap (McDermott v. Tintoretto, (1911) A. C. 35). Thus the court has no jurisdiction to award compensation instead of wages under an apprenticeship deed (Turner v. "Haulwen" (Owners), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 50). Nor will the usual general release signed at the end of the voyage apply to a claim under the Act (Buls v. Teutonic, (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 752). The mere fact that the injured seaman is being maintained and paid his wages under the provisions of sect. 34 (2) of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, does not debar the seaman from proceeding under the Workmen's Compensation Acts. In such a case the arbitrator, if he finds in favour of the seaman, should make a declaration of liability simply (Ashrody v. S.S. "City of Edinburgh" (Owners), (1919) W. C. & I. 257).

Where a seaman had deserted the House of Lords held, by a majority, that, as the shipowner was no longer liable to defray the expenses of his maintenance under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (now 1906), the seaman could recover compensation, though he was liable to penalties for deserting his ship (Anchor Line, Ltd. v. Mohad, (1922) 1 A. C. 146; 91 L. J. (H. L., 65).

A man employed on a fishing vessel who received, in addition to his food and some other small perquisites, wages at a fixed rate per week, and also poundage on the net profits of the voyage, was under the principal Act a "member of the crew of a fishing vessel . . . remunerated by a share in the profits" (Costello v. Kelsall Bros., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 410). A man in receipt of a bonus varying with the catch, a bonus called "trip money," is not "remunerated by shares in the profits," Duck v. North Sea Steam Trawling Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 527; Newstead v. "Labrador" (Owners), (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 519. Under the old Act the sub-section was held no less to apply because a share fisherman was paid a wage for shore duty (Gill v. Aberdeen S. T. and F. Co., 45 S. L. R. 247), or received payment in kind and a regular wage as well as his share (Costello v. S.S. Pigeon (Owners), (1913) A. C. 407; (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 410), or did something incidental to his work as an optional extra (Whelan v. G. N. S.S. Co., 78 L. J. K. B. 860), or was guaranteed a minimum weekly amount (Admiral F. Co. v. Robinson, (1910) 1 K. B. 540), or received a share and a weekly wage even if the share be a trifle, 3d. in the pound of net profits, and the weekly wage the substantial remuneration. Contrast Woolfe v. Colquhoun, (1912) W. C. Rep. 342. But a man is not a share fisherman, even under sub-s. 2 of the old Act, who, though remunerated by a share, does not fish, but simply carries fish from curing stations to vessels (Jamieson v. Clark, 1 B. 228). Men receiving "Stocker" and "Liver money" were held under the old sub-section to be remunerated by shares (Burman v. "Zodiac" Steam Fishing Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 520; 83 L. J. K. B. 1683; Stephenson v. Rossall S. F. Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 121). Even under the old sub-section, the question whether a member of such a crew was remunerated by a share in the profits or gross earnings of the vessel was always to some extent a matter of degree. Now he cannot be excluded from the benefits of the Acts unless his remuneration is wholly or mainly remuneration of this description. The cases quoted above have lost some of their application.

Sub-s. (4) was added by the 1923 Act, and is an extension of the meaning of "seaman."

A person employed for the purposes of the ship or of any passengers or cargo or mails carried by the ship is now deemed to be a "seaman."

36.—(1) The Secretary of State may by order extend the provisions of this Act, subject to such modifications and exceptions as may be specified in the order, to such persons, being workmen within the meaning of this Act, employed as pilot, commander, navigator, or member of the crew of any aircraft to which this section applies when outside Great Britain, in such circumstances as may be specified in the order.

Power to extend principal Act to aircraft outside Great Britain.

(2) The aircraft to which this section applies are aircraft registered in the United Kingdom the owner of which resides or has his principal place of business in Great Britain.

(3) An order under this section shall not come into force until it has been laid before each House of Parliament for a period of not less than twenty-one days during which that House has sat, and if during that period either House presents an address to His Majesty against the order or any part thereof, no further pro-

Section 36. proceedings shall be taken thereon, but without prejudice to the making of a new order.

The Secretary of State has made the Order, dated December 19th, 1924, which came into force on April 1st, 1925. The Order is set out post, Appendix KK.

Power to make Orders in Council for giving effect to conventions with Foreign States.

37.—(1) For the purpose of giving effect to any Convention with a Foreign State providing for reciprocity in matters relating to compensation to workmen for injuries by accident, it shall be lawful for His Majesty by Order in Council to make provision—

- (a) for modifying this Act in its application to cases affected by the Convention, so, however, as not to alter the amount of compensation in any case to which this Act may apply;
- (b) for determining, in cases where rights to compensation accrue both under this Act and under the law of the State with which the Convention is made, under the law of which country the workman shall be entitled to recover compensation;
- (c) for conferring on county courts powers for the admission of evidence taken abroad and the procuring and taking of evidence for use abroad, or otherwise for the purpose of facilitating proceedings for the recovery of compensation under the respective laws of the two countries.

(2) If the Convention extends to Northern Ireland, the provisions of this section shall extend to the enactments regulating the payment of compensation to workmen for injuries by accident for the time being in force in Northern Ireland.

(3) In particular, but without derogating from the generality of the foregoing provisions of this section, any such Order in Council may make such modifications in this Act in its application to workmen who are French citizens as appear to His Majesty to be necessary to give effect to a convention between His Majesty and the President of the French Republic signed at Paris on the third day of July, nineteen hundred and nine, and this Act shall apply to such workmen subject to the modifications contained in the Order.

The Workmen's Compensation Acts never applied outside the United Kingdom (Tomalin v. Pearson, (1909) 2 K. B. 61), but by this section His Majesty may make conventions with foreign States for reciprocity in matters relating to compensation to workmen.

As His Majesty has now power by Order in Council to make a convention with any foreign State, the Workmen's Compensation (Anglo-French Convention) Act, 1909, is repealed (see Schedule IV.), but the Order in Council made thereunder is still in force (sect. 50 (2), post, p. 1377). For text of Order in Council, see post, Appendix EE., p. 1596.

A convention between the United Kingdom and Denmark has now been concluded. For text of Convention and of Order in Council see post, Appendix FF, p. 1598. See also Rules 75A and 75B.

*Administrative Provisions.Section 38.

38.—(1) The Secretary of State may appoint such legally qualified medical practitioners to be medical referees for the purposes of this Act as he may, with the sanction of the Treasury, determine, and the remuneration of, and other expenses incurred by, medical referees under this Act shall, subject to regulations made by the Treasury and except so far as they are defrayed by fees received from the parties under this Act, be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament.

Appointment and remuneration of medical referees and arbitrators.

Where a medical referee has been employed as a medical practitioner in connection with any case by or on behalf of an employer or workman or by any insurers interested, he shall not act as medical referee in that case.

(2) The remuneration of an arbitrator appointed by a judge of county courts under the First Schedule to this Act shall be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament in accordance with regulations made by the Treasury.

The medical referee under sect. 43, post, has an appellate jurisdiction from the certifying surgeon, and his decision is final; under sect. 19, in a reference by order of the court, his certificate is final; under Schedule I. (11) he simply makes a report, which the judge may accept or not, and now if the case is referred under sect. 12, his decision is likewise final. By Schedule I. (5) he may be summoned as an assessor, and may state his opinion, but he cannot be examined, sworn or cross-examined. By leave of court he may be asked questions, but not as a witness, but as adviser (Hugo v. Larkins, 3 B. 228). For Special Regulations, see Appendix CC. So, further, he may there and then examine the applicant, and an arbitrator may act on his advice without disclosing to the parties what such advice is (Smith v. Foster, (1913) W. C. Rep. 420).

Until 1923 the medical referee had to be invoked by both parties. Now the registrar may send the dispute to the medical referee on the application of one party, though where made by one party, the registrar, or on appeal the judge, if he thinks the case of exceptional difficulty, or other sufficient reason exists why it should be settled by arbitration, shall refuse the application.

The same thing occurs if the matter is referred under sect. 12 to a medical referee.

In the Editor's opinion, registrars should be most careful about referring under either of these sections where the decision is final on the application of one party only, and the workman or his advisers should never agree to it. The judge may always appoint a medical referee (see Schedule I. (5)), and until 1923 the fees of medical referees were paid by money provided by Parliament. Now a party requiring a medical referee must pay or give security for costs.

The medical assessor must confine himself to assisting the arbitrator with his expert medical knowledge (Earwicker v. London Graving Dock Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 137).

A medical referee who on an appeal under sect. 43 had expressed the opinion that the workman had recovered ought not to sit as a medical assessor at a subsequent hearing of an application for compensation. See Wallis v. A. G. Soutter & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 113.

The arbitrator may act upon the advice of the medical assessor on matters of medical opinion or inference although there be no such opinion or inference expressed or drawn by the medical witnesses (Woods v. Wilson, Sons & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 285; Carpenter v. Wandsworth Borough Council, (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 28). The opinion of the medical assessor is not binding of course on the judge (Connelly v. Alex. Cross & Sons, (1917) W. C. & I. p. 121).

Section 38
Notes.

In general, when difficult medical questions may arise, it is better to have an assessor to sit in court with the judge. The arbitrator has no power, before hearing evidence on either side, to refer the matter for report to him (unless by consent (Renshall's Case, infra)). Should he do so the resulting report is not admissible in evidence on the hearing of the application (Peill & Sons v. Payne, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 205). The report, when made, is not conclusive, still less binding on the arbitrator. In Scotstoun Est. Co. v. Jackson, 48 S. L. R. 440, an arbitrator referred to a referee and then found the exact opposite of his report. It was held he could so find. But the arbitrator may accept it as conclusive of the point at issue and refuse to hear evidence to the contrary (Renshall v. Spencer, (1917) W. C. & I. 233). For regulations referred to, see Appendix BB. On the face of them they seem to contemplate a living person, one who can be examined; but in Carolan v. Harrington, (1911) 2 K. B. 733, it was held they did not so cut down the paragraph, and that a reference as to the cause of death was within its purview. The regulations equally contemplate a conflict of evidence before such reference is made, and if no medical evidence be given, such reference should not be made (Carroll v. Gray, 47 S. L. R. 646), and see Renshall's Case, supra.

See Rules 56 (1) and 98, as to appointment of referee; Rule 56 (2), as to examination of workman; Rule 76 (6), as to costs; and by Rule 43 (2), a copy of the report must be annexed to the memorandum filed under Schedule I. (11).

Detention of ships.

39.—(1) If it is alleged that the owners of any ship are liable as such owners to pay compensation under this Act, or any corresponding enactment for the time being in force in Northern Ireland, and at any time that ship is found in any port or river of England or Northern Ireland, or within three miles of the coast thereof, a judge of any court of record in England or Northern Ireland may, upon its being shown to him by any person applying in accordance with the rules of the court that the owners are probably liable as such to pay such compensation, and that none of the owners reside in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, issue an order directed to any officer of customs or other officer named by the judge requiring him to detain the ship until such time as the owners, agent, master, or consignee thereof have paid such compensation, or have given security, to be approved by the judge, to abide the event of any proceedings that may be instituted to recover such compensation and to pay such compensation and costs as may be awarded thereon; and any officer of customs or other officer to whom the order is directed shall detain the ship accordingly.

(2) In any legal proceeding to recover such compensation, the person giving security shall be made defendant, and the production of the order of the judge, made in relation to the security, shall be conclusive evidence of the liability of the defendant to the proceeding.

Section 39.

(3) Where a complaint is made to the Secretary of State that before an application can be made under this section the ship in respect of which the application is to be made will have departed from the limits within which she can be arrested, the ship shall, if the Secretary of State so directs, be detained for such time as will allow the application to be made and the result thereof to be communicated to the officer detaining the ship, and that officer shall not be liable for any costs or damages in respect of the detention, if made in accordance with the directions of the Secretary of State.

(4) Section six hundred and ninety-two of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, shall apply to the detention of a ship under this Act as it applies to the detention of a ship under that Act, and, if the owner of a ship is a corporation, it shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to reside in the United Kingdom if it has an office in the United Kingdom at which service of writs can be effected.

See Part V.

(5) Where a ship has been demised to charterers, the provisions of this section shall apply to claims against the charterers of the ship as they apply to claims against the owners of a ship with the substitution of charterers for owners :

Provided that no ship shall be detained on a claim against the charterers of the ship after the expiration of the term for which the ship is demised to them.

(6) The foregoing provisions of this section shall extend to Northern Ireland.

(7) Without prejudice to any other means of enforcing claims in Scotland, this section shall, with the substitution of references to the sheriff for references to a judge of any court of record in England, apply to a ship found in any port or river of Scotland, or within three miles of the coast thereof, in like manner as it applies to a ship found in any port or river of England or within three miles of the coast thereof.

This section embraces sect. 11 of the old Act and sect. 20 of the Act of 1923.

Practice, Rules 39, 40 and 88.

It must be noted that if the ship is demised to charterers, the Act applies to them in the same manner as to the owners.

Suppose a "workman," not a member of the crew, was injured in a home port, when working on a foreign ship for a foreign owner, could he avail himself of the machinery of this section to secure compensation? As it contemplates foreign owners being so liable, probably if he could get over the initial difficulties of making a claim and giving notice—of course sect. 35 would not apply to help him—there seems no reason why he should not. (Consult Hunter v. Stadtische, &c., Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 493; 95 L. J. K. B. 300.) But for our courts so to interfere on behalf of a foreign seaman on a foreign ship belonging to a foreign owner merely because he happened to be within our territory would seem to be wanting in the courtesy which is due from one nation to another. We have no right to interfere in the relations of foreign masters with their own servants. The point is discussed in Panagotis v. Pontiac, (1921) K. B. 74; see also The "M. Moxham," 1 P. D. 107.

40. A weekly payment payable under this Act or any scheme certified under this Act, or a sum paid by way of redemption thereof, shall not be capable of being assigned, charged, or attached, and shall not pass to any other person by operation of law, nor shall any claim be set off against the same.

This section is Schedule I. (19) of the old Act, with the words "or any scheme certified under this Act," above added by the 1923 Act.

This clause does not bar a claim by a legal personal representative to enforce a deceased workman's right against his employer (Price v. Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 245).

Overpayment of Compensation.—In Hosegood v. Wilson, (1911) 1 K. B. 30, a workman had been overpaid compensation. Although his employer could recover this amount by action, or, at least, get judgment for it—not quite the same thing—yet he could not treat such overpayments as payments on account of future weekly payments, and to stop payment of compensation until the balance was wiped off was decided to be wrong.

Though the compensation money cannot be charged, yet, under the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, advances may be made to an injured workman generally, pending the time he is claiming compensation, and on notice by the society or committee which advanced the money, such money has to be repaid out of the compensation (see Appendix AA). This is in effect charging the compensation, but it is under statute.

The purpose of sect. 16 of the National Health Insurance Act, 1924 (post, p. 1563), is to ensure that a workman shall not receive both National Insurance benefit and compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act at the same time. If his compensation is less than the benefit to which he is entitled as National Insurance benefit he only receives the balance to make up this sum.

In order to determine this, clause (c) of sub-s. (1) requires the employer who has agreed the compensation with the workman at less than fifteen shillings a week or who has agreed upon a lump sum as redemption of weekly payments to send notice in writing to the Minister or the society or committee concerned giving the particulars of such agreement. The agreement then is subject to the provisions of sect. 25 (4) of the present Act, and the registrar may refuse to record it.

This section does not extend the power of the registrar (Hudson v. Camberwell Borough Council, 10 B. W. C. C. 400). The Insurance Commissioners or society have now a right to appear before the Registrar and object to a memorandum being recorded (sect. 23 (6), ante). See also next section as to repayment of Poor Law relief.

Repayment of poor relief.

41. Where an authority has granted out-door relief to a person pending the settlement of his claim to compensation under this Act or any scheme certified thereunder, and either—

(a) such relief would not have been granted had the person then received or been in receipt of compensation under this Act; or

(b) such relief is in excess of the amount which would have been granted had the person then received or been in receipt of such compensation;

the authority may give notice of the relief so provided to the person liable to pay the compensation, and if such notice is given the person so liable shall on demand, and on being furnished with a certificate by the authority of the amount of the relief so provided or of the amount of such excess, as the case may be, repay to the authority, up to the amount which he is liable to pay as compensation, less such part (if any) of that amount as he has already duly paid at the time of receiving the notice aforesaid, the amount of the relief or of the excess certified as aforesaid, and the receipt of the authority shall, up to the amount of the repayment, be a full and valid discharge to that person in respect of the compensation payable by him to the person relieved :

Section 41.

Provided that, if the person so liable to pay compensation gives to the authority by which such notice as aforesaid is given notice that he intends to pay, or that he has paid, compensation, he shall not be under any obligation to make any repayment in respect of any relief provided after the date of the payment of the compensation or after the time at which the notice so given is received by the authority, whichever is the later.

This section was formerly sect. 23 of the Act of 1923. The words "an authority," supra, are very wide. It is thought it only applies to guardians of the poor who grant out-door relief.

Where the guardians of the poor have granted out-door relief to a person pending the settlement of his claim for compensation and such relief would not have been granted, or not granted to the same extent had the person then received or been in receipt of compensation, they may give notice of such fact to the person liable to pay the compensation, who must, on receiving such notice and certificate of the amount of the relief so given, repay to the guardians up to the amount he is liable to pay as compensation. He is not bound to pay again compensation already paid, and the receipt of the guardians for money so paid to them is his full discharge.

If the person liable to pay compensation gives notice to the authority that he intends to pay or has paid compensation, he is not liable to repay in respect of relief provided after the date of the payment of compensation, or the time at which the notice so given is received by the authority. See above section.

See also notes to last section as to advances under the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, becoming a charge on the compensation.

42.—(1) Every employer in any industry to which the Secretary of State may direct that this section shall apply shall, on or before such day in every year as the Secretary of State may direct, send to the Secretary of State a correct return specifying the number of injuries in respect of which compensation has been paid by him under this Act during the previous year, and the amount of such compensation, together with such other particulars as to the compensation as the Secretary of State may direct, and in default of complying with this section shall be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a fine not exceeding five pounds.

Returns as to compensation.

Section 42.

(2) Any regulations made by the Secretary of State containing such directions as aforesaid shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament as soon as may be after they are made.

This was formerly sect. 12 of the old Act. Regulations dated October 17th, 1913, are now in force.

PART II.APPLICATION TO CERTAIN INDUSTRIAL DISEASES.

Application of Act to industrial diseases.
1 Edw. 7,
c. 22.

43.—(1) Where—

- (i) the certifying surgeon appointed under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, for the district in which a workman is employed certifies that the workman is suffering from a disease mentioned in the Third Schedule to this Act and is thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed ; or

The industrial diseases to which the Act applies are those set out in Schedule III. to this Act and the numerous other diseases which have from time to time been added by the Secretary of State. All these cases appear immediately after Schedule III. on pp. 1380 et seq.

- (ii) a workman is, in pursuance of any special rules or regulations made under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, suspended from his usual employment, on account of having contracted any such disease ; or

(iii) the death of a workman is caused by any such disease ; and the disease is due to the nature of any employment in which the workman was employed at any time within the twelve months previous to the date of the disablement or suspension, whether under one or more employers, he or his dependants shall be entitled to compensation under this Act as if the disease or such suspension as aforesaid were a personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of that employment, subject to the following modifications :—

- (a) The disablement or suspension shall be treated as the happening of the accident ;

As to the meaning of these words see the decision of the Privy Council in a case from the Supreme Court of New South Wales upon like words in the Act of New South Wales (Victoria Insurance Co. v. Junction North Broken Hill Mine, (1925) A. C. 354, (1925) 94 L. J. P. C. 78).

- (b) If it is proved that the workman has at the time of entering the employment wilfully and falsely represented himself in writing as not having previously suffered from the disease, compensation shall not be payable ;
- (c) The compensation shall be recoverable from the employer who last employed the workman during the said twelve months in the employment to the nature of which the disease was due :

Provided that---

Section 43.

(i) the workman or his dependants if so required shall furnish that employer with such information as to the names and addresses of all the other employers who employed him in the employment during the said twelve months as he or they may possess, and, if such information is not furnished, or is not sufficient to enable that employer to take proceedings under the next following proviso, that employer upon proving that the disease was not contracted whilst the workman was in his employment shall not be liable to pay compensation ; and

(ii) if that employer alleges that the disease was in fact contracted whilst the workman was in the employment of some other employer, and not whilst in his employment, he may join such other employer as a party to the arbitration, and if the allegation is proved that other employer shall be the employer from whom the compensation is to be recoverable ; and

(iii) if the disease is of such a nature as to be contracted by a gradual process, any other employers who during the said twelve months employed the workman in the employment to the nature of which the disease was due shall be liable to make to the employer from whom compensation is recoverable such contributions as, in default of agreement, may be determined in the arbitration under this Act for settling the amount of the compensation, or, if the amount of compensation is not in dispute, as may be determined by arbitration under this Act.

- (d) The amount of the compensation shall be calculated with reference to the earnings of the workman under the employer from whom the compensation is recoverable ;
- (e) The employer to whom notice of the death, disablement or suspension is to be given shall be the employer who last employed the workman during the said twelve months in the employment to the nature of which the disease was due, and the notice may be given notwithstanding that the workman has voluntarily left his employment ;
- (f) If an employer or a workman is aggrieved by the action of a certifying or other surgeon in giving or refusing to give a certificate of disablement or in suspending or refusing to suspend a workman for the purposes of this section, the matter shall in accordance with regulations made by the

Section 43.

Secretary of State be referred to a medical referee, whose decision shall be final, and the medical referee when deciding the matter shall also certify as to the condition of the workman at the time when he is examined by him, and such certificate by the medical referee shall be conclusive.

(2) For the purposes of this section the date of disablement shall be such date as the certifying surgeon certifies as the date on which the disablement commenced, or, if he is unable to certify such a date, the date on which the certificate is given :

Provided that—

(a) Where the medical referee allows an appeal against a refusal by a certifying surgeon to give a certificate of disablement, the date of disablement shall be such date as the medical referee may determine :

(b) Where a workman dies without having obtained a certificate of disablement, or is at the time of death not in receipt of a weekly payment on account of disablement, it shall be the date of death.

(3) The Secretary of State may make orders for extending the provisions of this section to other diseases and other processes, and to injuries due to the nature of any employment specified in the order not being injuries by accident, either without modification or subject to such modifications as may be contained in the order.

(4) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of a workman to recover compensation in respect of a disease to which this section does not apply, if the disease is a personal injury by accident within the meaning of this Act.

The section of the old Act which dealt with industrial disease was sect. 8. This section was added to and amended by the Act of 1923, and the joint provisions now appear in sects. 43, 44 and 45 of the present Act. Sect. 43 is composed of sub-ss. 1, 4, 6 and 10 of sect. 8 of the old Act, and sub-s. 2 of sect. 11, and sub-s. 9 of sect. 24 of the Act of 1923.

Sect. 44 is composed of sub-ss. 2, 3 and 5 of sect. 8 of the old Act, and sect. 13 of the Act of 1923.

Sect. 45 is composed of sub-ss. 7 and 8 of sect. 8 of the old Act.

A previous employer joined as a party, or from whom the last employer seeks to obtain contribution under this section, has no right in the event of his being aggrieved by the action of the certifying surgeon in granting the certificate to appeal to a medical referee. The last employer, who between himself and the workman has to pay the compensation, can alone appeal. See Anderton v. Markham, Heywood & Co., and James Eastwood & Sons, (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 525.

The medical referee can only decide (1) whether or not the workman is suffering from an industrial disease; (2) whether he is disabled thereby; (3) the date of the commencement of that disability: he cannot decide whether or not the disease was contracted in the service of the employers against whom the claim is brought (Turton v. East Barnsley Colliery Co., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 267); though now, by sect. 1 (f), he must, when giving his certificate under the above section, also certify as to the condition of the workman at the time he examines him, which certificate is to be conclusive.

If the report is ambiguous the judge may, and should, communicate with the medical referee in order, if possible, to clear up the ambiguity (Fowler v. British Dye Stuffs Corpn., (1921) 14 B. W. C. C. 34).

"Suffering from Industrial Disease."—These words may include, and should if the facts so show be construed to include, the case of a workman suffering from the results of a surgical operation rendered necessary by the disease (Archibald Russell, Ltd. v. Corser, (1921) 1 A. C. 351; 90 L. J. (H. L.) 77). The Court of Appeal has also held that proneness to recurrence is "suffering from" a disease (Starkey v. Clayton, (1925) 133 L. T. 612; Prendergast v. Lancaster Collieries, (1926) 134 L. T. 166). See, however, M'Dougall v. Summerlee Iron Co., Ltd., 19 B. W. C. C. 774, in which it was held that where the disease is recurrent and the arbitrator finds that the workman had never recovered from the first attack, and the workman has settled his claim under the first attack for a lump sum, compensation cannot be given in respect of a recurrence of the disease. Reversed in House of Lords on ground that the second disablement was a new accident (20 B. W. C. C. (H. L.) 419).

For practice, see Rules 41, 98, and for Regulations with Regard to Certifying Surgeons and Medical Referees, Appendix BB.

Silicosis.—By the present Act both the Silicosis Acts have been repealed and in effect re-enacted as to workmen suffering from silicosis by sect. 47 of the present Act. See notes to that section.

Workmen's Compensation (Ironworkers' Cataract) Order, 1925.—Cataract was added to the list of industrial diseases on May 18th, 1925, but the order limited compensation to not longer than six months in all, and not more than four months unless he has undergone an operation for cataract. For order see infra, p. 1383. See Davies v. Baldwins (20 B. W. C. C. 116), where it was held under the proviso added to the order in 1925 that when a workman has undergone an operation at any time, even after a period of four months from the date of disablement and the medical referee advises that the workman is still disabled, the compensation is not limited by the order to any stated period.

The absence of a bed or a place in a ward or a vacancy in a suitable place for an operation may be a good medical reason for the non-performance of such an operation.

Against whom to Proceed.—The workman should in general proceed against the employer in whose service he was when the disability, in respect of which he is proceeding, occurred, not against an employer in whose employ he was when an earlier attack of the same disease disabled him (Timpson v. John Mowlem & Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 219).

The workman who has been suspended under this sub-s. 1 (2) may at once obtain a certificate of disablement under this sub-s. 1 (1), and this certificate is good even where it names a date as the commencement of the incapacity earlier than the date named in the first certificate. The judge is bound by the certificate unless appealed from, and cannot hear evidence to prove that the man is not suffering from the disease named in the certificate at the time to which the certificate relates. See Rollings v. Thompson, (1922) 1 K. B. 329; 91 L. J. K. B. 301.

Sub-s. 1 (iii.). Death may result directly from the disease, or indirectly from its sequelæ, e.g., from granular kidney following lead poisoning. Whilst sect. 44, sub-s. (1), assumes a disease in certain cases to be due to the nature of the employment, it does not assume that sequelæ are the result of the disease. This the applicant must prove (Haylett v. Vigor, (1908) 2 K. B. 837). It was formerly held that dependants must prove in all cases (unless sect. 44 (1) applies) that the disease was caused or aggravated by the employment under the respondent employer (Dean v. Rubian Art Pottery, Ltd., (1914) 2 K. B. 213). This case was followed in Blatchford v. Staddon and Founds, but the latter case has now been overruled in the House of Lords, (1927) A. C. 461; 96 L. J. K. B. 608; 20 B. W. C. C. 391. The House of Lords held that to entitle a workman to compensation under this section it is sufficient for him to prove that his work with his last employer during the twelve months previous to the date of the disablement was of the same nature as the work to which the disease was due, although such work was neither responsible for nor aggravated the disease.

In M'Ginn v. Udston, (1912) W. C. Rep. 134, a miner suffered from nystagmus. He was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus due to the employment. This presumption was rebutted by the finding of the medical referee that it was ordinary, not miner's nystagmus. But this did not preclude his proving it was miner's nystagmus in the ordinary way; it only altered the onus of proof. In Scullion v. Cadzow Coal Co., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 129, it was held that the work of a surface labourer was not mining. See now, however, definition of miner's nystagmus in Schedule, post, p. 1383. The workman suffering from nystagmus is now within the Act, whether he was engaged in mining or not.

Notice must be given and claim made as in general, but the nature of the disease may furnish a reasonable cause for delay (Moore v. Naval Colliery Co., (1912) 1 K. B. 28; Rule 41). The date of the certificate must not by analogy be deemed the date of the quasi-accident (Keary v. Archibald Russell, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 201).

If an employer having to pay compensation can prove that the disease was contracted with another employer, he may join such employer, and if he succeeds in proving this, such other employer has to pay the compensation assuming the other employer has employed him within twelve months. Under sub-s. 1 (c) (iii.), where the disease is of gradual contraction, he may, without proving anything more than that the workman was with such employer during any part of the preceding twelve months, recover contribution (Mallinder v. Moores, Booth and Moores third parties, (1912) 2 K. B. 124). In calculating contribution payable the arbitrator ought to take into consideration the working conditions in the various employments (Barron v. Seaton Burn Coal Co., Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 132).

In apportioning the respective liability of consecutive employers the arbitrator must not merely take the respective length of time the workman has been in the several employments, but must consider all the facts (Barron v. Seaton Coal Co., (1915) 1 K. B. 756). The meaning of the term "employment" was considered by Lord Johnston in the Scots case of M'Gowan v. Merry and Cunningham, Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep., at p. 545.

If the employer cannot trace the employer in whose service the disease was contracted he must pay the compensation subject to his right to contribution (Doeherty v. Arch. Russell, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 68).

Certificate.—Condition precedent, but if procured only in time for hearing will be in order (Taylor v. Burnham, 46 S. L. R. 482). A seaman suffered from lead poisoning, though within the Act he failed to recover because there was no certifying surgeon to whom he could apply for a certificate (Curtis v. Black, (1909) 2 K. B. 529). The order of a medical referee allowing an appeal against the refusal of a certifying surgeon to give a certificate of disablement and fixing the date of the man's disablement is a sufficient certificate for the purpose of this section (Chuter v. J. J. Ford & Sons, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 104). If the party complaining does not appeal against the terms of the certificate he cannot impugn the certificate at a subsequent hearing of the workman's application for compensation (Bedford v. Cowtan & Sons, Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 168); even though it can be shown that the certifying surgeon has made a slip (Chippendale v. High Explosives, Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 338). It is essential to a workman's claim that he should prove the date of the disablement, and if the date alleged in the application is a date which has been finally negated by the decision of the medical referee, the application may be dismissed (Frost v. Clanway Colliery Co., Ltd., (1920) W. C. & I. 47).

In Powell v. Cauldon Potteries, Ltd., (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 245; 20 B. W. C. C. 16, the certificate was incomplete in that it did not state the date of disablement or say that the surgeon was unable to state that date; the surgeon died before it could be amended. Held, certificate never having become effective, the workman could obtain a valid certificate from the new certifying surgeon.

Appeal to Medical Referee.—Sub-s. 1 (iii.), proviso (f).—This limits the functions of the referee to allowing or disallowing the certificate of the certifying surgeon having regard to the facts then existing (Garrett v. Waddell, 48 S. L. R. 937, and Winter v. Addie, ib. 940). If he adds a note to his finding, it must be read, but if inconsistent with the finding it must go back to him for a proper report (M'Ginn v. Upton Coal Co., (1912) W. C. Rep. 134). In Birks v. Stafford Coal Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 755, the date fixed by such surgeon was useless to the applicant. He appealed to the referee. The employer argued no such appeal lay, the finding of such surgeon as to date being final. Held not so. Applied in Rees v. Imperial Navigation Coal Co., 20 B. W. C. C. 287. The medical referee may do anything that the certifying surgeon could have done (M'Ginn v. Upton Coal Co., (1912) W. C. Rep. 134). He may not make a finding on the evidence (Booth & Sons v. Carter, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 59). If the certificate is ambiguous and contradictory the arbitrator may refuse compensation (Mapp v. A. Straker & Son, Smith Bros., Ltd., (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 98). The certificate must specify the workman's employment at the date of the disablement, whether or not the employment was a process referred to in the Schedule (Marr v. The Leadhills Co., Ltd., (1918) W. C. & I. 296).

Review.—Where the employer applies to review on the ground that the workman is no longer suffering from the industrial disease, evidence showing that the workman is suffering from another disease caused by the industrial disease is relevant and should not be excluded (Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co. v. Evans, (1916) W. C. & I. 241); consider also Chorley Colliery Co. v. Bolton, (1916) W. C. & I. 329. As to the questions, and the only questions, which a medical referee has to consider when the case is appealed to him, see Turton v. East Barnsley Colliery, Ltd., (1921) 1 K. B. 369.

As to practice, see Rule 41.

44.—(1) If the workman at or immediately before the date of such disablement or suspension as aforesaid was employed in any process mentioned in the second column of the Third Schedule to this Act, and the disease contracted is the disease in the first column of that Schedule set opposite the description of the process, the disease, except where the certifying surgeon certifies that in his opinion the disease was not due to the nature of the employment, shall be deemed to have been due to the nature of that employment unless the employer proves the contrary.

Supplemental provisions as to industrial diseases.

For the meaning of "at or immediately before" see Dean v. Rubian Art Pottery Ltd., (1914) 2 K. B. 213, and M'Taggart v. William Barr & Sons, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 335.

See Meadows v. Ellerman Lines, Ltd., (1920) 3 K. B. 544; 89 L. J. K. B. 1234, as to meaning of words "employed in any process"; what is necessary to rebut the statutory presumption created by this sub-section, see Glancy v. John Watson, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 40.

Section 44.

(2) Where a workman claims to be suffering from and disabled by a disease to which the foregoing provisions of this Part of this Act apply, the employer may agree with the workman that he is liable to pay compensation without requiring the workman to obtain the certificate of the certifying surgeon mentioned in those provisions, and thereupon the workman shall be entitled to compensation as for injury by accident from the date of the agreement or from such other date as may be agreed.

Any such agreement may be recorded in the manner provided by section twenty-three of this Act, and shall be enforceable against the employer in like manner and subject to the same provisions as an agreement to pay compensation in case of an injury by accident.

(3) In such cases, and subject to such conditions as the Secretary of State may direct, a medical practitioner appointed by the Secretary of State for the purpose shall have the powers and duties of a certifying surgeon under the foregoing provisions of this Part of this Act, and those provisions shall be construed accordingly.

(4) The Secretary of State may make rules regulating the duties and fees of certifying and other surgeons (including dentists) under the foregoing provisions of this Part of this Act.

It must be noticed that under sub-s. 2 of the above section, if employer and workman can agree that the workman is suffering from an industrial disease within the Act, a certificate of the certifying surgeon need not be obtained. The agreement can be registered and enforced like any other agreement to pay compensation. Sub-s. 3, above, seems to give the Secretary of State power to appoint any medical man and invest him with the duties of a certifying surgeon.

Mutual insurance of employers

45.—(1) Where, after inquiry held on the application of any employers or workmen engaged in any industry to which the foregoing provisions of this Part of this Act apply, it appears that a mutual trade insurance company or society for insuring against the risks under those provisions has been established for the industry, and that a majority of the employers engaged in that industry are insured against such risks in the company or society and that the company or society consents, the Secretary of State may, by Provisional Order, require all employers in that industry to insure in the company or society upon such terms and under such conditions and subject to such exceptions as may be set forth in the Order.

(2) Where such a company or society has been established but is confined to employers in any particular locality or of any particular class, the Secretary of State may for the purposes of this section treat the industry, as carried on by employers in that locality or of that class, as a separate industry.

Section 45.

(3) A Provisional Order made under this section shall be of no force whatever unless and until it is confirmed by Parliament, and if, while the Bill confirming any such Order is pending in either House of Parliament, a petition is presented against the Order, the Bill may be referred to a Select Committee, and the petitioner shall be allowed to appear and oppose as in the case of Private Bills, and any Act confirming any Provisional Order under this section may be repealed, altered or amended by a Provisional Order made and confirmed in like manner.

This section embraces sub-ss. 7 and 8 of sect. 8 of the old Act. Generally it gives the Home Secretary power, where a mutual insurance company exists for the purpose of insuring the employers of a particular trade, to insist by provisional order that all the employers insure in that company, subject to such conditions and exceptions as set out in the order. It has to be confirmed by an Act of Parliament.

46. Any expenses incurred by the Secretary of State in respect of any Order, Provisional Order, or confirming Bill under the foregoing provisions of this Part of this Act shall be defrayed out of moneys provided by Parliament.

Expenses of Secretary of State.

This section was formerly sub-s. 9 of sect. 8 of the old Act.

47.—(1) The Secretary of State may by scheme provide for the payment of compensation by the employers of workmen in any specified industry or process or group of industries or processes involving exposure to silica dust—

Power by scheme to apply Act to workmen suffering from silicosis.

(a) who are certified in such manner as may be prescribed by the scheme to have suffered death or total disablement from the disease known as fibroid phthisis or silicosis of the lungs (in this section referred to as silicosis) or from that disease accompanied by tuberculosis; or

(b) who, though not totally disabled, are found on medical examination to be suffering from silicosis, or from silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, to such a degree as to make it dangerous to continue work in the industry or process, and are for that reason suspended from employment:

(2) The scale of compensation fixed by the scheme in the case of death or total disablement due to silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis shall be that prescribed by this Act and in any other case shall be such as may be prescribed by the scheme.

(3) Provision may be made by the scheme—

(a) for the establishment of a general compensation fund, to be administered either through a mutual trade insurance company or society of employers, or in such other manner as may be provided by the scheme;

(b) for requiring employers to subscribe to the fund, and for the recovery of such subscriptions, and for the payment and recovery out of the fund of all compensation under the scheme, and of any expenses arising under the scheme which are directed by the scheme to be so paid, subject to such exceptions in special cases as may be made by the scheme ;

Section 47.

- (c) for the settlement of claims and other matters arising under the scheme by committees representative of both employers and workmen, with an independent chairman, and for the procedure to be adopted before such committees ;
- (d) for the appointment and remuneration of medical officers, medical boards and advisory medical bodies, and for their duties and powers in connection with the scheme ;
- (e) for requiring workmen to whom the scheme applies (i) to submit themselves to such periodical medical examination, and (ii) to furnish such information with respect to their previous employment in any industry specified in the scheme, as involving exposure to silica dust, as may be prescribed by the scheme, and for making the right of the workmen to compensation conditional on compliance with such requirements, and for the suspension from employment of workmen who are found at any time to be suffering from silicosis or tuberculosis, or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, or who, when first medically examined in pursuance of the scheme, are found unsuitable for work in the industry or process by reason of their failure to satisfy such requirements with respect to physique as may be prescribed by the scheme ; and
- (f) for the application with the necessary modifications of any of the provisions of this Act, or of any enactment relating to compensation thereunder, and for defining the industries or processes to which the scheme applies, and generally for such further or supplemental matters, including provisions as to the determination of disputes arising between employers and the authority administering the fund, as appear necessary for giving full effect to the scheme.

(4) Any scheme made under this section may be extended or varied by any subsequent scheme made in the like manner, and shall have effect as if enacted in this Act, but any scheme made under this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament forthwith, and, if an address is presented to His Majesty by either House of Parliament within the next subsequent twenty-one days on which that House sits next after any such scheme is laid before it praying that the scheme may be annulled, His Majesty in Council may annul the scheme, and it shall thenceforward be void, but without prejudice to the validity of anything done thereunder.

(5) Section one of the Rules Publication Act, 1893, shall not apply to any scheme made under this section. Section 47.

This section embraces the whole of the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation (Silicosis) Acts of 1918 and 1924, both of which Acts are now repealed by Schedule IV. to this Act. Workmen suffering from silicosis are suffering generally from the inhalation of silicon dioxide dust which escapes in the treatment of stones, quartz or sand which contain silicon dioxide, and which is especially injurious to the lungs. A scheme has been made under the Acts of 1918 and 1924 which will apply until a new scheme is promulgated under the present section (see sect. 50 (2), post). This scheme will be found post, pp. 1387 et seq. Under para. 3 the expressions "employer," "workman," and "dependants" have the same meanings as in this section. 56 & 57 Vict.
c. 66.

The industries or processes to which this section applies are specified in Schedule I. of the scheme.

In the case of Williams v. Guest, Keen and Nettlefolds, Ltd., (1926) 1 K. B. 497; 95 L. J. K. B. 676, a miner was suffering from silicosis gradually brought on by his having breathed in particles of silica dust which occasionally came from the boring operations on which he was engaged. Silicosis, not being a scheduled disease for miners, he could only recover compensation on the ground that he was suffering from an injury by accident within sect. 1 (1) of the Act. But the Court of Appeal held in this case that the gradual inhalation of silica throughout a long period did not amount in any ordinary sense to an accident or series of accidents, and that consequently he was not entitled to compensation. See, further, notes to sect. 1 (1) ("accident").

PART III.

GENERAL.

48.—(1) In this Act unless the context otherwise requires— Interpretation.
"Ship," "vessel," "seaman," and "port" have the same meanings as in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894;

See sect. 35 (4) and notes as to persons not seamen engaged on a ship being entitled to compensation.

"Manager," in relation to a ship, means the ship's husband or other person to whom the management of the ship is entrusted by or on behalf of the owner;

"Police force" means a police force to which the Police Act, 1890, or the Police (Scotland) Act, 1890, applies, and the City of London Police Force; 53 & 54 Vict.
c. 45.
53 & 54 Vict.
c. 67.

This includes a police officer who, as a statutory duty, acts as a fireman (Sudell v. Blackburn Corporation, 3 B. 227).

"Outworker" means a person to whom articles or materials are given out to be made up, cleaned, washed, altered, ornamented, finished, or repaired, or adapted for sale in his own home or on other premises not under the control or management of the person who gave out the materials or articles;

"United Kingdom" means Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

(2) The exercise and performance of the powers and duties of a Section 48. local or other public authority shall, for the purposes of this Act, be treated as the trade or business of the authority.

Exercise and Performance.—By virtue of this definition in Mulrooney v. Todd and Bradford Corporation, (1909) 1 K. B. 165, the corporation were made liable under sect. 4 (now sect. 6) as principals making a contract for work undertaken by them.

(3) Any reference to a workman who has been injured shall, where the workman is dead, include a reference to his legal personal representative, or to his dependants, or other person to whom or for whose benefit compensation is payable.

Any Reference to a Workman, etc.—A dependant's right is independent, not derivative, and an award terminating the rights of the workman is no bar to the claim by the dependants (Jobson v. Cory, 4 B. 284). See Tucker v. Oldbury Urban Council, (1912) 81 L. J. K. B. 668, followed in Harper v. Dick, Kerr & Co., (1921) 90 L. J. K. B. 1313. Whether these words go this length is doubtful. The Act is clear that if a man dies when in receipt of a weekly payment it intends his dependants to then step into his shoes and receive a lump sum less what has been paid him (sect. 8). But does it intend more? does it intend conflicting rights? for it is clear an injured workman must settle for less for himself if he cannot bar the rights of his dependants. This is the result of an unsatisfactory series of cases commencing with an obiter in O'Keefe v. Lovatt, 4 W. C. C. 109, where the precise meaning was not material, and in all of which were other reasons for the decisions. Hitherto, this has been of little moment, but new developments have now made the question one of importance.

See also notes to sect. 4.

Application to Scotland.
7 Edw. 7,
c. 51.

49.—(1) Any application to the sheriff as arbitrator shall be heard, tried, and determined summarily in the manner provided by section fifty of the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907, save only that parties may be represented by any person authorised in writing to appear for them and subject to the declaration that it shall be competent to either party within the time and in accordance with the conditions prescribed by act of sederunt to require the sheriff to state a case on any question of law determined by him, and his decision thereon in such case may be submitted to either division of the Court of Session, who may hear and determine the same and remit to the sheriff with instruction as to the judgment to be pronounced, and an appeal shall lie from either of such divisions to the House of Lords.

(2) In this Act the expressions "county court," "judge of the county court," "registrar of the county court," "county court judgment," "plaintiff," "contract of bailment," and "rules of court," as respects Scotland, mean respectively sheriff court, sheriff, sheriff clerk, recorded decree arbitral, pursuer, contract of letting to hire, and act of sederunt.

Commencement, repeal and extent.

50.—(1) This Act shall come into operation on the first day of May, nineteen hundred and twenty-six, but shall not apply in any case where the accident happened before the first day of January, nineteen hundred and twenty-four.

It is important to remember that though this Act came into operation on May 1st, 1926, it does not apply to any case where the accident happened before January 1st, 1924. The old statute as amended by the Act of 1923 will therefore apply to such cases.

Section 50.

(2) The enactments mentioned in the Fourth Schedule to this Act are so far as they relate to England and Wales and Scotland hereby repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column of that Schedule, but shall continue to apply to cases where the accident happened before the first day of January, nineteen hundred and twenty-four, and to which they apply at the commencement of this Act :

Provided that nothing in this repeal shall affect any scheme, order, rule, regulation, agreement or award, or other instrument certified, issued or made, or any other thing done under the enactments so repealed and in force at the commencement of this Act, but any such scheme, order, rule, regulation, agreement, or award, or other instrument, or other thing, shall continue in force and have effect as if certified, issued, made or done under this Act.

(3) The repeal of subsection (2) of section sixteen of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, shall not affect the application of the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1897 and 1900, to cases to which by virtue of that subsection they are to continue to apply. 6 Edw. 7, c. 53*.

Note.—This sub-section means that if there are any cases still existing under the Acts of 1897 and 1900 (which probably there are not), those Acts shall continue to apply to such cases.

(4) This Act shall not, except as otherwise expressly provided, extend to Northern Ireland.

51. This Act may be cited as the Workmen's Compensation Short title. Act, 1925.

* This is an error in the official copy of the Act. It should read 6 Edw. 7, c. 58.

SCHEDULES.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

Section 21.

ARBITRATION, &c.

1. For the purpose of settling any matter which under this Act is to be settled by arbitration, if any committee, representative of an employer and his workmen, exists with power to settle matters under this Act in the case of the employer and workmen, the matter shall, unless either party objects by notice in writing sent to the other party before the committee meet to consider the matter, be settled by the arbitration of such committee, or be referred by them in their discretion to arbitration as hereinafter provided.

2. If either party so objects, or there is no such committee, or the committee so refers the matter or fails to settle the matter within six months from the date of the claim, the matter shall be settled by a single arbitrator agreed on by the parties, or in the absence of agreement by the judge of the county court, according to the procedure prescribed by rules of court.

3. In England the matter, instead of being settled by the judge of the county court, may, if the Lord Chancellor so authorises, be settled according 1st Schedule. to the like procedure, by a single arbitrator appointed by that judge, and the arbitrator so appointed shall, for the purposes of this Act, have all the powers of that judge.

52 & 53 Vict. c. 49. 4. The Arbitration Act, 1889, shall not apply to any arbitration under this Act; but a committee or an arbitrator may, if they or he think fit, submit any question of law for the decision of the judge of the county court, and the decision of the judge on any question of law, either on such submission, or in any case where he himself settles the matter under this Act, or where he gives any decision or makes any order under this Act, shall be final, unless within the time and in accordance with the conditions prescribed by rules of the Supreme Court either party appeals to the Court of Appeal; and the judge of the county court, or the arbitrator appointed by him, shall, for the purpose of proceedings under this Act, have the same powers of procuring the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents as if the proceedings were an action in the county court.

5. A judge of county courts may in any case, if he thinks fit, and shall, if any party in accordance with rules of court so requires and gives security for the payment of the prescribed fee, summon a medical referee to sit with him as assessor.

If a medical referee is so summoned on the application of any party, that party shall, subject to any directions as to costs, be liable to pay in respect of the attendance of the medical referee such fee as may be prescribed by the Secretary of State.

6. Rules of Court may make provision—

- (a) for the appearance in any arbitration under this Act of any party by some other person; and
- (b) for conferring on the judge or registrar of a county court in proceedings under this Act the like powers of making orders for the examination of witnesses and persons, and for discovery, interrogatories, inspection of documents, and further particulars, and of granting a new trial, as are exercisable as respects actions in county courts.

Note.—The important right to grant a new trial in a workman's compensation case is now provided for in clause (b) above.

It was first granted by the County Courts Act, 1919, which gave power to make rules for the purpose. The rules have been made and appear as Rule 29 of the County Court Rules.

7.—(1) The costs of and incidental to the arbitration and proceedings connected therewith shall be in the discretion of the committee, arbitrator, or judge of the county court, subject as respects such judge and an arbitrator appointed by him to rules of court.

Note.—Where applicant and respondent each partially succeed and partially fail the judge may award no costs to either (McArdle v. J. & R. Howie, Ltd., 20 B. W. C. C. 790).

Where an award existed and the matter subsequently by agreement went before the medical referee. Held by House of Lords that the arbitration was still existing, and costs of going before the medical referee were costs incidental to the arbitration (William Baird & Co., Ltd. v. Summers, 19 B. W. C. C. 17).

(2) The costs, whether before a committee or an arbitrator or in the county court, shall not exceed the limit prescribed by rules of court, and shall be taxed in manner prescribed by those rules and such taxation may be reviewed by the judge of the county court.

8. In the case of the death, or refusal or inability to act, of an arbitrator, the judge of the county court may, on the application of any party, appoint a new arbitrator.

9. Where a reference is made to a medical referee under section sixteen or section nineteen of this Act, or where on an application for the registration of a memorandum of agreement a report of a medical referee is required under this Act to be obtained, there shall, subject to any directions as to costs and to the provisions hereinafter contained, be payable by the applicant for the reference or for the registration of the memorandum such fee in respect of the remuneration and expenses of the medical referee as the Secretary of State may prescribe, and provision may be made by rules of court for the payment of such fees through the registrar of the county court. 1st Schedule.

All such references shall be made and reports obtained in accordance with regulations of the Secretary of State.

10. Any sum awarded as compensation shall, unless paid into court under this Act, be paid on the receipt of the person to whom it is payable under any agreement or award, and the solicitor or agent of a person claiming compensation under this Act shall not be entitled to recover from him any costs in respect of any proceedings in an arbitration under this Act, or to claim a lien in respect of such costs on, or deduct such costs from, the sum awarded or agreed as compensation, except such sum as may be awarded by the committee, the arbitrator, or the judge of the county court, on an application made either by the person claiming compensation, or by his solicitor or agent, to determine the amount of costs to be paid to the solicitor or agent, such sum to be awarded subject to taxation and to the scale of costs prescribed by rules of court.

11. Any committee, arbitrator, or judge may, subject to regulations made by the Secretary of State and the Treasury, submit to a medical referee for report any matter which seems material to any question arising in the arbitration.

12. No court fee shall be payable by a workman in respect of any proceedings in a court under this Act.

Note.—For court fees payable by an employer, see County Court Fees Order, 1925, sect. 3, ante.

13. Paragraphs 3, 4, 6 (b), and 8 of this Schedule shall not apply to Scotland, and in its application to Scotland this Schedule shall have effect as if for paragraph 12 the following paragraph were substituted:—

No court fee shall be payable by any party in respect of any proceedings by or against a workman under this Act in the court prior to the award, or for recording a memorandum of agreement under this Act.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

Section 26.

PROVISIONS AS TO PAYMENTS INTO COURT AND INVESTMENT.

1. Any sum paid into court under this Act shall, subject to rules of court and the provisions of this schedule, be invested, applied, or otherwise dealt with by the court in such manner as the court in its discretion thinks fit for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto under this Act, and the receipt of the registrar of the court shall be a sufficient discharge in respect of the amount paid in.

2. In the event of the death of any person entitled as a dependant to money paid into a county court under this Act, then, if no direction has been given as to the disposition thereof for the benefit of other dependants in the event of the death of the person entitled thereto, the court may, without probate or letters of administration, distribute the sum amongst such persons as appear to the court, upon such evidence as the court may deem satisfactory, to be entitled by law to receive the same, or if the dependant so dying is illegitimate and dies intestate, amongst the persons who in the opinion of the court would have been entitled thereto if the dependant had been legitimate; and, if there are no such persons, the court shall deal with the sum as the Treasury may direct:

Provided that, where the principal value of the estate of the dependant so dying exceeds one hundred pounds, any sum paid under this paragraph without probate or letters of administration shall be liable to estate duty as part of the amount on which that duty is charged, and the county court shall, before making any such payment, require a statutory declaration by the claimant, or by one of the claimants, that the principal value of the estate, including the sum in question, does not, after deduction of debts and funeral expenses, exceed the value of one hundred pounds, or the production of a 2nd Schedule. letter or certificate from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue stating either that all duties payable in respect of the sum in question have been paid, or that no duty thereon is payable.

This paragraph does not apply to Scotland.

Notes.—This useful provision was formerly sect. 26 of the County Courts Act, 1919. See Rule 64A.

In Ivey v. Ivey, (1912) 2 K. B. 118, money was in court for the benefit of a widow and four dependant children. On her death, such children asked that the unspent portion of her share might be appropriated for their benefit under this paragraph. This was opposed by other children, but without success. See now Rule 64A.

3. Rules of court may provide for the transfer of money paid into court under this Act from one court to another, whether or not the court from which it is to be transferred is in the same part of Great Britain as the court to which it is to be transferred, and for the transfer to a county court in Northern Ireland of money paid into court under this Act, and to a county court in Great Britain of money paid into court in Northern Ireland under any enactment for the time being in force in Northern Ireland relating to the compensation of workmen for injuries suffered in the course of their employment.

4. Any sum which under this schedule is ordered to be invested may be invested in whole or in part in the Post Office Savings Bank by the registrar of the county court in his name as registrar.

5. Any sum to be so invested may be invested in the purchase of an annuity from the National Debt Commissioners through the Post Office Savings Bank, or be accepted by the Postmaster-General as a deposit in the name of the registrar as such, and the provisions of any statute or regulations respecting the limits of deposits in savings banks, and the declaration to be made by a depositor, shall not apply to such sums.

6. No part of any money invested in the name of the registrar of any county court in the Post Office Savings Bank under this Act shall be paid out, except upon authority addressed to the Postmaster-General by the Treasury or, subject to regulations of the Treasury, by the judge or registrar of the county court.

7. Any person deriving any benefit from any moneys invested in a post office savings bank under the provisions of this Act, may, nevertheless, open an account in a post office savings bank or in any other savings bank in his own name without being liable to any penalties imposed by any statute or regulations in respect of the opening of accounts in two savings banks, or of two accounts in the same savings bank.

1. Title of Scheme.—This Scheme may be cited as "The Refractories Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1925."

2. Application of Scheme.—This Scheme shall apply to all workmen employed at or after the 1st February, 1919, in any of the refractories industries.

"Refractories Industries" (hereinafter referred to as the industries) means for the purposes of this Scheme the following processes carried on at mines, quarries, factories and workshops at which refractory material containing not less than 80 per cent. total silica (SiO_2) is got or manipulated with a view to manufacture or sale; namely—

All processes in or in connection with the getting, handling, moving, breaking, crushing, grinding and sieving of such material and all processes in the manipulation of such material in the manufacture of bricks or other articles containing not less than 80 per cent. total silica (SiO_2).

Provided that—

- (a) a mine or quarry in which refractory material is only occasionally worked or is only occasionally supplied for use in the Industries;
- (b) iron or steel works in which refractory material is crushed, ground or pugged for use only in the works; and
- (c) quarries at which the only refractory material worked is natural sand; shall not be deemed to be included.

If any question arises whether this Scheme applies to any particular process or works or as to the individual workers covered by the Scheme the question shall be referred for decision to the Secretary of State or if the parties prefer to a single arbitrator in accordance with the provisions contained in the Third Schedule to this Scheme and in any Rules made by the Secretary of State for the purpose. Such arbitrator shall be agreed to by the parties and approved by the Secretary of State, or failing agreement appointed by the Secretary of State, and his decision shall be final.

The Arbitration Act, 1889, shall not apply to any arbitration under this Scheme.

PART I.—PROVISIONS AS TO COMPENSATION.

4. Where the Medical Board certifies in pursuance of this Scheme :—

- (1) that the death of a workman has been caused by silicosis or by silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis ; or
- (2) that a workman is totally disabled for work in the industries from silicosis or from silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis ; or
- (3) that a workman, though not totally disabled for work in the industries, is suffering from silicosis or from silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis to such a degree as to make it dangerous for him to continue work in the industries, and is for that reason suspended from employment ;

the workman or his dependants shall be entitled to compensation under this Scheme.

Provided that no compensation shall be payable :—

- (a) if the Medical Board certifies that the silicosis cannot have been contracted in the industries owing to the shortness of the time during which the workman has been employed therein ;
- (b) in cases where the workman has left the industries, unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the Joint Committee that since his last employment therein he has not been employed in any of the occupations specified in the First Schedule to this Scheme.

5. Any certificate given by the Medical Board or by a duly appointed medical practitioner in pursuance of the provisions of this Scheme shall be conclusive evidence of the matters therein certified.

6. The question of the award of compensation and the amount and apportionment thereof shall in all cases be determined, subject to the provisions of this Scheme, by the Joint Committee, and no agreement in regard thereto between the representatives of the Fund and the workman shall relieve the Fund from any liability under this Scheme.

7. (1) In cases of death or total disablement due to silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, the amount of compensation shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of the Workmen’s Compensation

Acts, 1906 to 1924, as set out in the Second Schedule to this Scheme, for fixing the amount of compensation in cases of death or total incapacity.

Provided that in the case of a workman who has left the industries, the date on which he left the employment of his last employer in the industries shall for the purposes of those provisions be taken to be the date of the injury.

In all cases of total disablement the compensation shall be payable from the date certified by the Medical Board as the date on which such disablement commenced, or, if the Board is unable to certify such a date, the date on which the certificate is given.

(2) In cases of suspension due to silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, the workman, if he is unable immediately to obtain other suitable employment at a not less rate of remuneration, shall be entitled for a period of two weeks from the date of suspension to a weekly payment equal to the full amount of his wages; and thereafter

- (a) if the Medical Board certifies that his general physical capacity for employment is not impaired by reason of the disease, but he is still unable to obtain such employment as aforesaid, the Joint Committee shall have power to direct payment to him, while he remains out of employment, for a further period or periods not exceeding eleven weeks in all, of a weekly sum equal to 50 per cent. of his average weekly earnings computed in accordance with the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1906 to 1924, as set out in the Second Schedule to this Scheme;
- (b) if the Medical Board certifies that his general physical capacity for employment is impaired by reason of the disease, he shall be entitled, while impairment continues, to a weekly payment as for partial incapacity fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1906 to 1924, as set out in the Second Schedule to this Scheme.
- (c) If on suspension the workman is compelled, in order to obtain other suitable employment, to remove from the district, he shall be entitled to such sum not exceeding five pounds as the Joint Committee may consider reasonable in respect of the expenses of such removal.

8. Any weekly payment shall, if the Medical Board alters the previous certificate, and may at any time on application made on behalf of the Fund or the workman, be reviewed by the Joint Committee, and on such review may be ended, diminished, or increased as the Joint Committee may decide.

9. Where any weekly payment has been continued for not less than six months, the liability therefor may, if the Joint Committee so directs, be redeemed by the payment of a lump sum of such an amount as would, if invested in the purchase of an immediate life annuity from the National Debt Commissioners through the Post Office Savings Bank, purchase an annuity for the workman equal to seventy-five per cent. of the annual value of the weekly payment.

10. Any lump sum payable in pursuance of the foregoing provision or in the case of death shall be paid to the Public Trustee or to any other person nominated by the Secretary of State to hold moneys in trust under this Scheme, and shall, subject to any general or special directions of the Joint Committee, be held and applied by the Public Trustee or such other person as in his discretion he thinks best for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto under this Scheme.

Provided that where the sum payable is less than £50 it may be paid over to the worker or his dependants as the case may be in such weekly payments or otherwise as the Joint Committee may direct.

Provided further that in the case of death, if the workman leaves no dependants, payment shall be made by the Fund to his legal personal representative or, if he has no such representative, to the person to whom the expenses of medical attendance and burial are due.

11. Where it appears to the Joint Committee, on application by the Public Trustee or other person charged with the administration of the trust, that on account of the variation of the circumstances of the various dependants or for any other sufficient cause any order made by the Committee as to the apportionment amongst the several dependants, or any directions given as to the administration, of any sum paid as compensation ought to be varied, the Committee may vary such order or directions in such manner as in the circumstances of the case the Committee may think just.

12. Where a weekly payment is payable under this Scheme to a person under any legal disability, the Joint Committee may direct that the weekly payment shall be paid during the disability to any person nominated by the Committee for the purpose, or to the Public Trustee, to apply, subject to any directions of the Committee, as in his discretion he thinks best for the benefit of the person entitled thereto.

13. A weekly payment, or a sum paid by way of redemption thereof, shall not be capable of being assigned, charged, or attached, and shall not pass to any other person by operation of law, nor shall any claim be set off against the same.

14. The provisions of subsections 1 (a) and (b) and of subsections (2), (3), and (4) and, notwithstanding anything in paragraph 13 of this Scheme, subsection (5) of section sixteen of the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, shall apply to compensation under this Scheme in the same way as to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1906 to 1924.

Provided that in the application of subsection (3) of section sixteen as aforesaid a workman who would otherwise be eligible for compensation under this Scheme but refuses or wilfully neglects to take the steps as directed in the Scheme to obtain such compensation shall be deemed to have unreasonably refused or neglected to take proceedings within the meaning of the said subsection.

PART II.—GENERAL COMPENSATION FUND.

15. All compensation due under this Scheme and such other expenses as may be prescribed in the Scheme shall be paid out of a General Compensation Fund which shall be maintained by subscriptions paid by the employers engaged in the industries.

16. The Fund shall be administered by the company registered as "The Refractories Industries Compensation Fund, Ltd." (hereinafter referred to as the Company).

Any expenses incurred from time to time by the Company in the administration of the Fund or otherwise for the purposes of this Scheme may, with the approval of the Secretary of State, be charged to the Fund.

17. It shall be the duty of the Company, subject to and in compliance with any directions given by the Secretary of State in that behalf, to fix, levy and enforce all such subscriptions as are necessary to enable the Fund to meet all its liabilities under the Scheme, to invest or otherwise deal with all moneys received by the Fund, and to secure that no moneys or securities belonging to the Fund are applied directly or indirectly for any purposes other than those authorised under the Scheme. No alteration in the rate of levy shall take effect until approved by the Secretary of State.

The Secretary of State may require the Company to adopt different rates of levy for different risks.

18. Every employer engaged in the industries shall pay to the Fund such subscriptions (whether in the form of annual premiums or otherwise) and give any such guarantees as the Company may, with the approval of the Secretary of State, determine; and any sum due by an employer to the Fund under this Scheme may be recovered by the Company summarily as a civil debt.

Provided that the liability of the Fund to pay compensation in any particular case shall not be affected by any failure on the part of an employer to pay the sums due to the Fund, or by the employer ceasing to be engaged in the industries.

19. Every employer commencing to carry on any process to which this Scheme applies at any works at which any such process has not previously been carried on, shall forthwith notify the Company and the Medical Board accordingly.

20. Every employer shall keep in a proper wages book a correct record of the wages, salary or other remuneration paid to each workman to whom this Scheme applies, and shall allow the officers of the Company to inspect any such book, and shall, when required, furnish the Company with a correct account of such wages, salary or other remuneration for such period as the Company may specify.

21. In the case of the Company transacting other business, the accounts of the Fund shall be kept separate from the accounts of the other business.

22. The Company shall, when required by the Secretary of State, prepare in the prescribed forms a revenue account, balance sheet, and statement of cases dealt with in respect of any prescribed period, and shall cause an investigation of the estimated liabilities of the Fund to be made by an Actuary so far as may be necessary to enable the provisions of these forms to be complied with; and the account, balance sheet, and statement shall be printed, signed and deposited at the Home Office within six months after the close of the period to which the account, balance sheet or statement relates, together with any reports on the affairs of the Fund submitted to the members in respect of that period.

23. The Company shall cause the accounts of the Fund to be audited once at least in every year by a chartered accountant or accountants, and shall forward a copy of the report of the auditor or auditors to the Home Office.

PART III.—JOINT COMMITTEES.

24. There shall be established for the determination of all questions assigned to them under Part I. of this Scheme and for the discharge of any other duties which may be imposed on them by the Scheme or any rules made by the Secretary of State thereunder, Joint Committees, that is to say, Committees representative of both employers and workmen, presided over in each case by an independent chairman, which shall exercise jurisdiction within such areas and in accordance with such procedure as the Secretary of State may prescribe.

The determination by a Joint Committee of any question assigned to it shall be final; except that where either the Company or the workman is aggrieved by any determination of the Joint Committee on the ground that it is based on a misinterpretation of the provisions of the Scheme, and makes representation to the Secretary of State within fourteen days, the Secretary of State may, if he thinks fit, give a ruling on the point raised, and if the Joint Committee's determination is not in accordance with such ruling, the Joint Committee shall be authorised and required to revise their determination so as to bring it into conformity therewith.

Any question arising in an area for which no Joint Committee has been established may be assigned for settlement to such Joint Committee as the Secretary of State may select.

25. The Chairman and other members of the Joint Committees shall be appointed by the Secretary of State and shall hold office for such period as he may fix.

Each Committee shall include an equal number on either side of representatives of the employers and workmen, and before appointing such representatives, the Secretary of State shall take such steps, by consultation with any Employers' Associations and Trade Unions affected or otherwise, as he may think most suitable for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the employers and workmen concerned.

26. In the absence of the Chairman at any meeting the Chair may be occupied by any member of the Committee chosen by the Committee.

27. Any question arising at any meeting may be decided by a majority of the votes of those personally present at the meeting, excluding the independent Chairman, or, in the case of an equality of votes, by a casting vote of the independent Chairman.

28. Each Joint Committee shall have a Secretary who shall be appointed by the Committee, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, on such terms and at such remuneration, to be paid out of the Fund, as the Secretary of State may approve.

It shall be the duty of the Secretary to arrange for all necessary meetings of the Committee, to keep a correct record of the proceedings of the Committee, to notify the decisions of the Committee in the prescribed form to the workman or his dependants, as the case may be, and the Company, and to any others concerned, and to perform such other duties as may be assigned to him under the Scheme or any rules made thereunder.

29. The members of the Joint Committee shall be entitled to be reimbursed from the Fund such travelling expenses incurred for the purposes of attending meetings of the Committee as the Secretary of State may approve.

30. Any office or other expenses of the Joint Committees, and any fees or other charges payable in respect of the administration of any moneys held in trust under Part I. of this Scheme, which are certified by the Secretary of State to be necessary, shall be paid out of the Fund.

PART IV.—MEDICAL PROVISIONS.

Medical Board.

31. Two or more duly qualified medical practitioners shall be appointed by the Secretary of State to be a Medical Board for the purpose of making the examinations and giving the certificates required under this Scheme. The members thereof shall hold office on such terms as to remuneration and otherwise as the Secretary of State may approve.

The members of the Medical Board shall carry out their duties in accordance with such procedure as may be prescribed by the Secretary of State.

Periodic Examinations.

32. All workmen employed in the industries shall be examined by one or more officers of the Medical Board at the prescribed intervals, and if on such examination it appears to the Medical Board that the workman is suffering from silicosis or tuberculosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis to such a degree as to make it dangerous for him to continue work in the industries, the Board shall suspend the workman from further employment in the industries, and shall certify accordingly in the prescribed form.

Provided that the foregoing provision shall not apply to any workman employed at the 1st February, 1919, in the industries who had at that date been so employed for more than twenty years and has since then continued to be so employed, except on the written request of the workman.

In each case of suspension due to silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis the Medical Board shall certify to what degree, if any, the general physical capacity of the workman for employment is impaired by the silicosis or the silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis.

All such examinations shall, except where the Medical Board otherwise decides, be made at the works.

Initial Examination.

33. Any workman newly engaged by an employer and not excepted under the proviso in paragraph 32 shall, unless he has already been examined under this Scheme within the preceding twelve months, submit himself for examination by a member of the Medical Board or other duly appointed medical practitioner before the end of the first month of his employment, or in exceptional circumstances within such extended period as the Medical Board may authorise ; and if on such examination the workman is found to be unsuitable for work in the industries by reason of his failure to satisfy the requirements with respect to physique prescribed herein, the member of the Medical Board or duly appointed medical practitioner shall suspend the workman from further employment in the industries, and shall certify accordingly in the prescribed form.

For the purposes of this paragraph the requirements with respect to physique shall be as follows :—

- (i) The chest must be at least of average development with satisfactory expansion and there must be no deformity or obstruction of the upper air passages or elsewhere which interferes with respiration ;
- (ii) There must be no signs of present or past disease of the lungs or heart ; and
- (iii) There must be no signs of present or past tuberculosis of any region.

Examinations under Warrant.

34. Any workman discharged or temporarily suspended by his employer or who has voluntarily left the industries, and any workman employed in the industries who has not been examined under this Scheme within the previous six months, may, if he claims to be suffering from silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis to such a degree as to make it dangerous for him to continue work in the industries, apply to the Joint Committee for a warrant authorising him to be examined by the Medical Board, and on the production of such warrant the Medical Board shall examine the workman and deal with the case in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 32.

Provided that, where the workman is no longer employed in the industries, the application must be made within one month from the date on which he ceased to be so employed.

35. Any workman claiming compensation in respect of total disablement may apply to the Joint Committee for a warrant authorising him to be examined by the Medical Board, and on production of such warrant the Medical Board shall examine the workman and, if satisfied that he is totally disabled for work from silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, shall certify accordingly in the prescribed form.

36. Any workman suspended under paragraph 32 on account of tuberculosis, may within six months of the date of such suspension if he claims to be suffering from silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis apply to the Joint Committee for a warrant authorising him to be re-examined by the Medical Board and on production of such warrant the Medical Board shall re-examine the workman and, if it appears that he is suffering from silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, shall certify accordingly in the prescribed form.

37. The Joint Committee shall not be entitled to refuse an application made to them for a warrant in accordance with the provisions of paragraphs 34, 35 and 36, but before issuing a warrant they may require the applicant to produce a medical certificate (which shall state whether or not he is fit to travel) in support of his application ; and, if they consider the application a frivolous one, to deposit a prescribed fee to cover the cost of the examination. Any such fee shall, in the event of the Medical Board issuing a certificate, be returned to the applicant, but otherwise shall be paid over to the Fund. If the Joint Committee so desires, applications may be dealt with and warrants issued by the independent Chairman of the Joint Committee on their behalf.

Re-examinations.

38. Every workman receiving weekly payments under the Scheme shall be re-examined, at such intervals as may be specified in the certificate, by the Medical Board, and on such re-examination the Medical Board shall issue a fresh certificate confirming or amending the previous certificate.

Post-mortem Examinations.

39. In the case of death alleged to be due to silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, the Medical Board shall, on application made by or on behalf of the dependants and on production of the Certificate of Death, arrange for a post-mortem examination and, if satisfied after such examination that the death has been caused by silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, shall certify accordingly in the prescribed form.

Provided that, if the Medical Board considers the application a frivolous one, they may require the applicant to deposit a fee of such amount as will cover the cost of the examination. Any such fee shall, in the event of the Medical Board issuing a certificate, be returned to the applicant, but otherwise shall be paid over to the Fund.

Provided, further, that where the deceased was in receipt of weekly payments under this Scheme, but only in such cases, the Medical Board may, if satisfied that a post-mortem examination is unnecessary, give a certificate without such examination.

Radiographic Examinations.

40. The Medical Board shall have power in any case where they consider necessary to make or cause to be made a radiographic examination of the lungs of the workman and to obtain the opinion of a radiologist on the case.

41. The Medical Board shall forward every certificate to the Secretary to the Joint Committee, and shall also notify the Secretary to the Joint Committee of any refusal to issue a certificate in any case under paragraphs 34, 35, 36 or 39.

They shall keep a record of every examination made and certificate issued under this Scheme.

42. There shall be paid out of the Fund :—

- (1) The remuneration of the members of the Medical Board and any expenses necessarily incurred by them for the purposes of their duties under the Scheme.
- (2) Such remuneration of any duly appointed medical practitioner as the Secretary of State may approve and any expenses necessarily incurred by such medical practitioner for the purposes of his duties under the Scheme.
- (3) Any travelling or other expenses reasonably incurred by a workman (subject to any prescribed scale) in submitting himself for examination by the Medical Board or a duly appointed medical practitioner.

PART V.—DUTIES OF EMPLOYERS AND WORKMEN.

43. It shall be the duty of every employer—

- (a) to furnish facilities for the examinations made at the works under the provisions of paragraph 32, and to comply with any directions given by the Secretary of State for this purpose ;
- (b) to arrange for the examination of any workman newly engaged who requires to be examined under the provisions of paragraph 33 ;
- (c) not to engage or to continue to employ in the industries any workman who has been suspended under this Scheme from further employment therein, or has refused to submit himself to any examination required under this Scheme.

If an employer engages or continues to employ any workman who has been suspended under this Scheme he shall be liable to pay an additional subscription to the Fund of double the amount of the levy payable on the wages of the person or persons illegally engaged or retained in employment so long as such employment continues, subject, however, to a minimum of ten pounds.

If an employer fails to carry out any other duty expressly imposed on him by this Scheme, he shall be liable to pay such increased subscription to the Fund as may appear to the Secretary of State to be reasonable in the circumstances.

44. It shall be the duty of every workman :—

- (a) to submit himself to the periodic and other examinations provided for under the foregoing provisions, and for that purpose (unless certified by a duly qualified medical practitioner to be unfit to travel) to attend at the place and time specified by the Medical Board or duly appointed medical practitioner ;
- (b) to furnish true information to his present or any future employer as to his employment in the industries with any previous employer or in any of the occupations mentioned in the First Schedule to this Scheme ;
- (c) not to re-engage in the industries after having been suspended under this Scheme.

If a workman refuses or wilfully neglects to submit himself to any such examination or in any way obstructs the same, or if he fails to furnish true information as aforesaid, or if, after having been suspended, he re-engages in the industries, he shall forfeit any right to compensation under the Scheme.

Provided that if the Joint Committee are satisfied that the failure of the workman to comply with the foregoing requirements has been due to a bonâ-fide mistake on his part or to causes outside his control, and that the Fund will not thereby be prejudiced, it shall be in the discretion of the Committee to relax this provision on such conditions and to such extent as they may think fit.

45. Every workman (other than a workman casually employed) shall be supplied by his employer with a register in the prescribed form, which shall be renewed when necessary by the employer, and in which shall be entered :—

- (a) The date of commencement of his employment with that employer, and the name of the employer and address of the works (to be entered by the employer) ;
- (b) particulars as supplied by the workman of any previous employment in the industries or in any of the occupations mentioned in the First Schedule to this Scheme (to be entered by the employer and signed by the workman) ;
- (c) the date on which the workman enters any new employment in the industries and the name of the new employer and address of the works (to be entered by the new employer) ;
- (d) the date of any examination by the duly appointed medical practitioner or by the Medical Board in pursuance of this Scheme and result of the examination (to be entered by the person making the examination).

This register shall be kept by the workman and produced when required by the employer or by the duly appointed medical practitioner or Medical Board for the purpose of carrying out any of their duties under this Scheme, and a duplicate of it shall be kept by the employer and forwarded by him when the workman leaves the employment to the Medical Board.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACTS, 1906 TO 1924.

Scale and Conditions of Compensation.

1906, Sch. I.
(1).

1. The amount of compensation . . . shall be :—
(a) where death results from the injury—

(i) if the workman leaves any dependants wholly dependent upon his earnings, a sum equal to his earnings in the employment of the same employer during the three years next preceding the injury, or the sum of two hundred pounds, whichever of those sums is the larger, but not exceeding in any case three hundred pounds, provided that the amount of any weekly payments made under this Act, and any lump sum paid in redemption thereof, shall be deducted from such sum (see also para. (c) .), and, if the period of the workman's employment by the said employer has been less than the said three years then the amount of his earnings during the said three years shall be deemed to be one hundred and fifty-six times his average weekly earnings during the period of his actual employment under the said employer (see also para. (b) (i) .);

(ii) if the workman does not leave any such dependants, but leaves any dependants in part dependent upon his earnings, such sum, not exceeding in any case the amount payable under the foregoing provisions, as . . . may be determined, . . . to be reasonable and proportionate to the injury to the said dependants (see also para. (b) (ii) .); and

(iii) if he leaves no dependants, the reasonable expenses of his medical attendance and burial, not exceeding fifteen pounds;

1923, s. 2.

- (b) where a workman leaves a widow or other member of his family (not being a child under the age of fifteen) wholly or partially dependent upon his earnings, and, in addition, leaves one or more children under the age of fifteen so dependent, then—

(i) if both the widow or other member of the workman's family and such child or children as aforesaid were all wholly dependent on the workman's earnings, there shall, in respect of each such child, be added to and dealt with as part of the compensation payable under paragraph (a) . . . a sum equal to fifteen per cent of the amount arrived at by multiplying the average weekly earnings of the workman, or where such earnings are less than one pound, then by multiplying one pound, or where such earnings exceed two pounds then by multiplying two pounds, by the number of weeks in the period between the death of the workman and the date when the child will attain the age of fifteen, fractions of a week being disregarded; and

(ii) if the widow or other member of the workman's family or such child or children as aforesaid, or any of them, were partially dependent on the workman's earnings, there shall be paid as part of the compensation under the said paragraph such proportion of the sum which would have been payable under the foregoing paragraph . . . as may . . . be determined . . . to be reasonable.

Provided that the total amount of compensation payable to the dependants shall in no case exceed six hundred pounds.

- (c) no deduction shall be made under paragraph (a) (i), as amended 1923, s. 24 (2), by paragraph (b), in respect of the amount of any weekly payments, so as to reduce the sum payable in respect of the children of the workman under the said paragraph (b), nor so as to reduce the amount payable under the said paragraph (a) below two hundred pounds;
- (d) where total or partial incapacity for work results from the injury, 1906, Sch. I. a weekly payment during the incapacity not exceeding fifty per cent. of the average weekly earnings of the workman during the previous twelve months, if he has been so long employed, but if not then for any less period during which he has been in the employment of the same employer, such weekly payment not to exceed thirty shillings; 1923, s. 4 (1).
- (e) where the maximum weekly payment payable under paragraph (d) 1923, s. 4 (2). to a workman who is totally incapacitated is less than twenty-five shillings, the workman shall be entitled during such incapacity to a weekly addition equal to one-half of the difference between such maximum weekly payment and the sum of twenty-five shillings or his average weekly earnings, whichever is the less, and such addition shall, for all purposes . . . be treated as if it were part of the weekly payment.

2. (1) In the case of partial incapacity, the weekly payment shall, 1923, s. 4 (3). subject to the provisions of paragraph (4) of this Schedule, be of the following amount:—

- (a) if the maximum weekly payment, had the incapacity been total incapacity, would have amounted to twenty-five shillings a week or upwards, the weekly payment in case of partial incapacity shall be one-half the difference between the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident and the average weekly amount which he is earning or is able to earn in some suitable employment or business after the accident;
- (b) if the maximum weekly payment would, had the incapacity been total incapacity, have amounted with such addition, if any, as is provided by paragraph 1 (e) of this Schedule, to less than twenty-five shillings, the weekly payment in case of partial incapacity shall be a sum bearing the same proportion to the said difference as the said maximum weekly payment with such addition as aforesaid bears to the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident.

(2) . . . a person shall not be deemed to be a partial dependant of 1923, s. 22. another person unless he was dependent partially on contributions from that other person for the provision of the ordinary necessities of life suitable for persons in his class and position.

3. For the purposes of the provisions of this Schedule relating to “earn- 1906, Sch. I. ings” and “average weekly earnings” of a workman, the following rules (2). shall be observed:—

- (a) average weekly earnings shall be computed in such manner as is best calculated to give the rate per week at which the workman was being remunerated. Provided that where by reason of the shortness of the time during which the workman has been in the employment of his employer or the casual nature of the employment, or the terms of the employment, it is impracticable at the date of the accident to compute the rate of remuneration, regard may be had to the average weekly amount which, during the twelve months previous to the accident, was being earned by a person in the same grade employed at the same work by the same employer, or, if there is no person so employed, by a person in the same grade employed in the same class of employment and in the same district;

- (b) where the workman had entered into concurrent contracts of service with two or more employers under which he worked at one time for one such employer and at another time for another such employer, his average weekly earnings shall be computed as if his earnings under all such contracts were earnings in the employment of the employer for whom he was working at the time of the accident ;
- (c) employment by the same employer shall be taken to mean employment by the same employer in the grade in which the workman was employed at the time of the accident, uninterrupted by absence from work due to illness or any other unavoidable cause ;

- (b) in the manufacture of files where the grinding is done by mechanical means on an enclosed machine and the metal being ground is immersed in water ; or

PART I.—RIGHT TO COMPENSATION.

4.—(1) Where the Certifying Surgeon certifies in pursuance of this Scheme that a workman is totally disabled for work from silicosis or from silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis; or

(2) Where the death of a workman is certified by a Medical Referee, as hereinafter provided, to have been caused by silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis; and the disease is due to employment in the processes whether under one or more employers, compensation shall be payable to the workman during such disablement or to his dependants, as the case may be, as if the disease as aforesaid were a personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of that employment, as provided by the Act, but subject to the modifications hereinafter contained.

Provided that no compensation shall be payable if the workman has not been employed at any time in the processes within the three years previous to the date of total disablement as defined in paragraph 7 of this Scheme.

5. If the workman has been employed in the processes for a period or periods amounting to not less than five years, the disease shall be deemed to be due to employment in the processes unless the employer proves the contrary.

6. If an employer or workman is aggrieved by the action of a Certifying Surgeon in giving or refusing to give a certificate of total disablement for the purposes of this Scheme, the matter shall be referred, in accordance with the Regulations applicable to references under Section 43 (i.) (f) of the Act, to a Medical Referee, and such Regulations shall apply as if silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis were a disease included in the Third Schedule to the Act. Provided that the time within which application for a reference under this paragraph may be made, shall, if the applicant is an employer, be within ten days of the receipt of the notice of total disablement, or if a workman, within ten days of the receipt of the certificate of the Surgeon.

The decision of the Medical Referee in the matter referred to him shall be final.

7. For the purposes of this Scheme the date of total disablement shall be such date as the Certifying Surgeon certifies as the date on which the total disablement commenced, or, if he is unable to certify such a date, the date on which the certificate is given.

Provided that—

(a) Where the Medical Referee allows an appeal against a refusal by a Certifying Surgeon to give a certificate of total disablement, the date of total disablement shall be such date as the Medical Referee may determine;

(b) Where the workman dies without having obtained such certificate, it shall be the date of death.

8. Where a workman claims to be totally disabled for work from silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, the employer may agree with the workman that he is liable to pay compensation without requiring the workman to obtain the certificate of the Certifying Surgeon, and thereupon the workman shall be entitled to compensation as from the date of the agreement or from such other date as may be agreed.

Any such agreement may be recorded in the manner provided by sect. 23 of the Act, and shall be enforceable against the employer in like manner and subject to the same provisions as an agreement to pay compensation in case of an injury under the Act.

9. The compensation shall be claimed and recoverable from the employer who last employed the workman in the processes ; but any other employers who employed the workman in the processes during the five years preceding the date of total disablement shall, unless they had at the commencement of this Scheme ceased to carry on the said processes, be liable to make to the employer from whom compensation is recoverable, such contributions as, in default of agreement, may be determined by arbitration under this Scheme.

Provided that no employer shall be liable to make any such contribution in respect of any period of employment more than twelve months previous to the commencement of this Scheme.

PART II.—AMOUNT OF COMPENSATION.

10. The compensation payable under this Scheme shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions contained in the Act under the head Amount of Compensation (sects. 8 to 13 inclusive) for fixing the compensation in cases of death and total disablement and the said sections shall apply accordingly, except that the amount of compensation shall be calculated with reference to the earnings of the workman under the employer from whom compensation is recoverable under this Scheme.

PART III.—CONDITIONS OF COMPENSATION.

11. The provisions as to notice of accident and claim for compensation contained in section 14 of the Act shall apply in cases arising under this Scheme subject to the following modifications :—

- (a) the total disablement shall be treated as the happening of the accident ;
- (b) the employer to whom notice of the death or total disablement is to be given shall be the employer who last employed the workman in the processes ;
- (c) the notice may be given notwithstanding that the workman has voluntarily left his employment.

12. Sections 17, 18 and 19 of the Act (relating to submission to medical examination), and section 20 (relating to suspension of right to compensation), and any regulations and rules of court made thereunder, shall apply in the case of any workman claiming or in receipt of weekly payments of compensation under this Scheme, subject to the condition that no workman in receipt of such weekly payments shall be required to submit himself for examination by a medical practitioner under the said sections more frequently than once in every three months.

13. It shall be the duty of every workman claiming compensation under this Scheme to furnish to the employer from whom compensation is claimed, true information as to his employment with any previous employer who, within the five years preceding the date of total disablement, employed him in the processes or in any of the occupations mentioned in the First Schedule to this Scheme.

If a workman furnishes false information or withholds information as aforesaid, or if, after having been certified to be totally disabled under this Scheme, he re-engages in the processes or in any of the occupations mentioned in the said Schedule, he shall forfeit any right to compensation under the Scheme.

Provided that if the County Court Judge or other arbitrator under this Scheme is satisfied that the failure of the workman to comply with any of the requirements of this paragraph has been due to a bonâ fide mistake on his part or other reasonable cause, it shall be in his discretion to relax this provision on such conditions and to such extent as he may think fit.

14.—(1) Where application is made by or on behalf of the dependants of a deceased workman to a Medical Referee for a certificate that the death of the workman has been due to silicosis or silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, it shall be the duty of the Medical Referee, on payment to him by the applicant of the fees specified below and subject to any regulations of the Secretary of State, after a postmortem examination of the deceased workman, to certify in writing in the prescribed form whether or not the death of the workman has been so caused and to forward such certificate to the applicant. Any such certificate by the Medical Referee shall be conclusive.

Provided that where the deceased was in receipt of weekly payments under this Scheme, but only in such cases, the Medical Referee may, if satisfied that a postmortem examination is unnecessary, give a certificate without such examination.

The postmortem examination shall, if possible, be made by or under the personal supervision of the Medical Referee, but where the Medical Referee cannot himself undertake or be present at the examination, it shall be sufficient if the examination is made by another duly qualified medical practitioner, to the satisfaction of the Medical Referee.

The Medical Referee shall, on payment of a fee of 1s., furnish the employer with a copy of any certificate given by him under this paragraph.

(2) The fees to be paid to the Medical Referee for a report under this paragraph (including the cost of any postmortem examination) shall be three guineas, and where, in order to make the postmortem examination the Medical Referee, or other medical practitioner making such examination, is compelled to travel to a place distant more than two miles from his residence, there shall be paid in addition to the foregoing fee, 5s. for each mile beyond two and up to ten miles distant from such residence, and thereafter 1s. for each mile distant therefrom.

(3) The amount of any fees paid by or on behalf of the dependants under the provisions of this paragraph may, in the event of an award of compensation being made, be allowed as costs in the arbitration.

PART IV.—PROCEDURE FOR SETTLING QUESTIONS.

15. All claims to compensation and, except as otherwise provided in this Scheme, any questions arising under this Scheme shall be determined in accordance with the provisions contained in the Act under the head Procedure for determining Compensation and settling Questions (sections 21 to 28 inclusive) and the said provisions and any regulations and rules of court made in pursuance thereof shall apply accordingly.

The power of making rules of Court under the Act shall include a power to make such rules as may be necessary for the purpose of carrying this Scheme into effect.

PART V.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

16. The provisions of sub-section (1) (a) and (b) and of sub-sections (2), (3) and (4) and, notwithstanding anything in section 40 of the Act, sub-section (5) of section 16 of the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, shall apply to compensation under this Scheme in the same way as to compensation under the Act.

Provided that in the application of sub-section (3) of section sixteen as aforesaid a workman who would otherwise be eligible for compensation under this Scheme but refuses or wilfully neglects to take the steps to obtain compensation under this Scheme shall be deemed to have unreasonably refused or neglected to take proceedings within the meaning of the said sub-section.

17. The Regulations as to the duties and fees of Certifying Surgeons under sections 43 and 44 of the Act, with the additions, modifications and omissions set out in the Second Schedule hereto, shall apply to any examinations made and certificates given by a Certifying Surgeon under this Scheme.

18. The following provisions of the Act shall so far as applicable apply to any case under this Scheme in like manner as in cases under the Act :—

- (a) Section 6.—Liability in case of workmen employed by contractors.
- (b) Section 7.—Provision as to cases of bankruptcy of employer.
- (c) Section 16.—Conditions as to residence.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1923.

Section 1.

Note.—This Act is repealed by the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, Schedule IV., with the exception of the following sections.

AMENDMENT OF BENEFITS UNDER PRINCIPAL ACT.

1. The Workmen's Compensation (War Addition) Acts, 1917 and 1919, shall cease to have effect after the thirty-first day of December, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, and are hereby repealed :

Repeal of War Addition Acts.
7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 42.
9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 83.
6 Edw. 7, c. 58.

Provided that the addition provided for in the said Acts shall continue to apply to a weekly payment payable to a workman under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (hereinafter referred to as the principal Act), or under any enactment superseded by that Act, in respect of total incapacity arising from an accident which occurred on or before the said thirty-first day of December so long as the workman remains totally incapacitated, and the addition shall, for all purposes, be treated as if it were part of the weekly payment.

Note.—See Costello v. Brown, (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 220, in which it was held that under sect. 38, sub-s. 2 (b) (c) of the Interpretation Act, 1889, the coming into force on January 1st, 1924, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923, did not affect rights previously existing, and that consequently where an employer had previously filed his application under Sched. 1, para. 17 of the Act of 1906 (now sect. 13 of the present Act), to redeem an award of 1l. a week, that was the sum he was entitled to redeem and not that sum plus the war additions.

Held further, that the Interpretation Act operated in favour of the workman as well as the employer, and therefore the right of the totally incapacitated workman to receive his war additions still continued.

N.B.—It must be observed that in this case the workman was actually receiving weekly compensation under the Act of 1906 up to the very time the Act of 1923 came into force and consequently his rights were protected by the Interpretation Act. What would have happened if the compensation had been redeemed a considerable time before the Act of 1923 came into force appears still to be very arguable.

Where, before the repeal of the War Addition Acts a workman was totally incapacitated, but at the date of repeal he was suffering from partial incapacity only, but shortly afterwards again became totally incapacitated as the result of his injury, he was held entitled under the above proviso to the war addition (Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., Ltd. v. Dickson and Coltness Iron Co., Ltd. Dalgleish, reported together, (1925) A. C. (H. L.) 790 ; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 1).

6.—(1) If it appears to the Registrar of Friendly Societies that any scheme duly certified by him under sub-section (1) of section three of the principal Act no longer complies with the requirements of that section by reason of the foregoing provisions of this Act, he shall make such amendments of the scales of compensation provided by the scheme as may in his opinion be necessary to render them not less favourable to the workmen and their dependants than the corresponding scales contained in the principal Act as amended by this Act.

Provision with respect to certified schemes.

Section 6.

(2) Where the Registrar has amended scales of compensation provided by any such scheme as aforesaid, the scheme shall have effect as if when originally made it had provided for the substitution, as from the date of the commencement of this Act, of the amended scales for the scales originally contained therein, and the amended scales shall continue to apply until the expiry of the certificate in force at the commencement of this Act or of any renewal thereof given by the Registrar under the principal Act.

NOTIFICATION OF ACCIDENTS ; FIRST AID AND AMBULANCE.

6 Edw. 7,
c. 53.

28.—(1) Section four of the Notice of Accidents Act, 1906, shall have effect as if for sub-section (1) thereof the following sub-section were substituted :—

“ Where any accident occurs in a factory or workshop which either—

(a) causes loss of life to a person employed in the factory or workshop ; or

(b) disables any such person for more than three days from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed ; written notice of the accident, in such form and accompanied by such particulars as the Secretary of State may prescribe, shall forthwith be sent to the inspector of the district.”

(2) Section one of the Notice of Accidents Act, 1906, so far as it relates to metalliferous mines and quarries, shall have effect as if for the words “ and disabled for more than seven days any person employed in or about the mine or quarry from working at his ordinary work,” there were substituted the words “ and disabled for more than three days any person employed in or about the mine or quarry from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed.”

1 & 2 Geo. 5,
c. 50.

(3) Paragraph (b) of sub-section (1) of section eighteen of the Coal Mines Act, 1911, shall have effect as if for the words “ and disabled for more than seven days any person employed in or about the mine from working at his ordinary work,” there were substituted the words “ and disabled for more than three days any person employed in or about the mine from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed.”

and safety orders.

29.—(1) In every factory the following requirements shall have effect :—

(a) There shall be provided and maintained so as to be readily accessible a first-aid box or cupboard of the prescribed standard, and, where more than one hundred and fifty persons are employed, an additional box or cupboard for every additional one hundred and fifty persons. Section 29.

and, if in respect of any factory such requirements are not complied with, the factory shall be deemed not to be kept in conformity with the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901.

(2) The powers of the Secretary of State under section seven of 1 Edw. 7 the Police, Factories, &c. (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1916, to c. 22. make orders in relation to first aid and ambulance arrangements 6 & 7 Geo. 5, in factories and workshops, shall be exercisable as respects any c. 31. works or premises to which any of the provisions of the Factory and Workshops Acts, 1901 to 1920, apply, and such building and engineering operations as may be prescribed, in like manner as they are exercisable as respects factories and workshops.

(3) Where it appears to the Secretary of State that, in view of the number and nature of accidents occurring in any factory or class of factories, special provision ought to be made at that factory or at factories of that class to secure the safety of persons employed therein, he may by order require the occupier to make such reasonable provision by arrangements for special supervision in regard to safety, investigation of the circumstances and causes of accidents, and otherwise as may be specified in the order, and, if the occupier of any factory affected by any such order fails

Section 29. to comply with the requirements of the order or any of them, the factory shall be deemed not to be kept in conformity with the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901.

(4) This section, so far as it relates to factories and other places to which the Factory and Workshop Acts, 1901 to 1920, or any of them, apply, shall be construed as one with those Acts.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

(3) This Act shall not, except where otherwise expressly provided, extend to Northern Ireland.

(4) This Act shall come into operation on the first day of January, nineteen hundred and twenty-four.

(5) The enactments mentioned in the Second Schedule to this Act, except so far as they relate to Northern Ireland, are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of that schedule.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION (TRANSFER OF FUNDS) ACT, 1927.

[17 & 18 GEO. 5. CH. 15.]

Whereas at an Imperial Conference held in London in the year nineteen hundred and twenty-six, a resolution was adopted recommending that arrangements should be made between the different parts of the Empire whereby sums awarded under the law relating to workmen's compensation in one part of the Empire to beneficiaries resident or becoming resident in another part of the Empire may, at the request of the authority by which the award is made, be transferred to and administered by a competent authority in that part of the Empire in which such beneficiaries reside, and inviting the several Governments of the Empire to take such steps by way of legislation or otherwise as each may consider necessary and appropriate for the purpose of promoting such arrangements :

Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

1. For the purpose of giving effect to the said resolution, the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, shall be amended as follows :

Amendment of 15 & 16 Geo. 5, c. 84, as to powers of making rules of court.

Rules of court under the said Act may provide, in the event of any such arrangements as is mentioned in the said resolution being made between Great Britain and any other part of His Majesty's dominions—

(a) for the transfer, in such manner as may be provided by the arrangement, to the part of His Majesty's dominions with which the arrangement is made of any money paid into court under the said Act and rules made thereunder, as applicable for the benefit of any person resident in or about to reside in the part of His Majesty's dominions with which the arrangement has been made ;

(b) for the receipt and administration by a county court of any money which under any such arrangement has been transmitted from the part of His Majesty's dominions with which the arrangement has been made as money applicable for the benefit of any person resident or about to reside in Great Britain.

2.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Workmen's Compensation (Transfer of Funds) Act, 1927, and shall be construed as one with the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925.

Short title and construction.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, " His Majesty's dominions " includes territories under His Majesty's protection and such, if any, of the territories in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Majesty as His Majesty may by Order in Council direct shall be treated as if they were included in His Majesty's dominions for the purposes of this Act.

Rules.

PRELIMINARY.

1.—(1) The following rules shall have effect under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (in these rules referred to as the Act), with reference to any matter or proceeding for the regulation of which rules of court may be made under the Act, and generally for carrying the Act into effect so far as it affects

Effect, short title, commencement, and construction of Rules, 15 & 16 Geo.V

Rule 1. the county court or an arbitrator appointed by the judge of the county court, and proceedings in the county court or before any such arbitrator.

(2) These rules may be cited as the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, and shall come into operation on the first day of May, 1926. They shall not apply to any case where the accident happened before the first day of January, 1924; in any such case the existing rules shall continue to apply.

(3) Subject as aforesaid the existing Workmen's Compensation Rules, are hereby annulled.

(4) Expressions used in these rules shall have the same meaning as the same expressions used in the Act.

52 & 53 Vict.
c. 63.

(5) The Interpretation Act, 1889, shall apply for the purpose of the interpretation of these rules as it applies for the purpose of the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

(6) These rules shall also be read and construed with the County Court Rules, 1903, and the County Court Rules of subsequent date amending the same; and any order and rule referred to by number in these rules shall mean the order and rule so numbered in the County Court Rules, 1903, or in any County Court Rules of subsequent date, as the case may be.

PARTIES TO ARBITRATION BEFORE JUDGE OR ARBITRATOR APPOINTED BY JUDGE.

Parties to arbitration.

2.—(1) Where application is made for the settlement by the judge, or by an arbitrator appointed by the judge, of any matter which under the Act is to be settled by arbitration, the party making such application shall be called "the applicant"; and subject to these rules, all other persons whose presence at the arbitration may be necessary to enable the judge or arbitrator effectively and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved shall be made parties to the application, and shall be called "the respondents."

Order III.,
rule 2.

(2) In any case in which both the principal as defined by the Act and a contractor with him are alleged to be liable to pay compensation under the Act, Order III., rule 2, as to joinder of parties, shall apply.

Joinder of applicants.
Order III.,
rule 1.

3. More persons than one may be joined as applicants in one arbitration, in any case in which such persons might be joined in one action as plaintiffs under Order III., rule 1; and that rule, and rules 18 and 19 of Order XLIV., shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to any such arbitration.

Rule 3.

Order XLIV., rules 18, 19.
Application
by dependants.

4.—(1) An application on behalf of the dependants of a deceased workman for the settlement by arbitration of the amount payable as compensation to such dependants may be made by the legal personal representative, if any, of the deceased workman on behalf of such dependants, or by the dependants themselves; and in either case the particulars to be filed as hereinafter mentioned shall contain particulars as to the dependants on whose behalf the application is made.

(2) Provided, that if there is any conflict of interest between the dependants themselves, or if any dependants neglect or refuse to join in an application, the application may be made by or on behalf of some only of such dependants, the other dependants in either case being named as respondents.

There may be circumstances when others cannot be joined, as where a father was either dead or had deserted his wife, who claimed as dependent on a son (Bevan v. Crawshaw, (1902) 1 K. B. 25).

(3) In the construction of this rule the term "dependants" shall include persons who claim or may be entitled to claim to be dependants, but as to whose claim to rank as dependants any question arises.

5.—(1) In any case in which the amount payable as compensation to the dependants of a deceased workman has been agreed upon or ascertained, but any question arises as to who are dependants, or as to the amount payable to each dependant, an application for the settlement of such question by arbitration may be made either by the legal personal representative, if any, of the deceased workman on behalf of the dependants or any of them, or by such dependants or any of them, against the other dependants, and the persons claiming or who may be entitled to claim to be dependants, but as to whose claim to rank as such a question arises; or such application may be made by the persons claiming to be dependants, but as to whose claim to rank as such a question arises, or any of them, against the legal personal representative, if any, of the deceased workman, and the dependants, and such of the persons claiming or who may be entitled to claim to be dependants as are not applicants.

Application
by dependants under Act, s. 21 (2) where amount of compensation agreed or ascertained.

(2) In any such case, if the employer has paid the agreed or ascertained amount of compensation, it shall not be necessary to Rule 5. — make him a respondent, but if such compensation or any part thereof is still in his hands he shall be made a respondent.

(3) The employer, if made a respondent, may pay the amount of compensation in his hands into court, to be dealt with as the judge or arbitrator shall direct, and thereupon further proceedings against him shall be stayed.

This obviates the necessity for letters of administration (Clatworthy v. Green, 4 W. C. C. 152).

(4) The registrar shall within twenty-four hours from the time of payment made pursuant to the last preceding paragraph send notice thereof to the applicant and to the other respondents (if any), and the employer shall not be liable to any costs otherwise than in accordance with paragraph 6 (c) of rule 19.

Parties to arbitration as to sum payable for medical attendance and burial. Act, s. 8 (2) (v.)

6.—(1) An application for the settlement by arbitration of the sum payable in respect of medical attendance on and the burial of a deceased workman who leaves no dependants shall be made by the legal personal representative, if any, of the deceased workman. If there is no such legal personal representative, the application may be made by any person to whom any such expenses are due. In the latter case any other person known to the applicant as a person to whom any such expenses are due shall be joined in the application either as applicant or respondent.

Apportionment of such sum.

(2) In any case in which application is made for the settlement by arbitration of such amount, the amount awarded, if insufficient for the payment of such expenses in full, shall be apportioned between the persons to whom such expenses are due in such manner as the judge or arbitrator shall direct.

Parties under disability and partners; representation of parties having the same interest.

7.—(1) The provisions of rules 7 and 8 of Order III., as to parties suing or defending on behalf of other persons having the same interest, and the provisions of the County Court Rules as to persons under disability and partners suing and being sued, shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to proceedings by way of arbitration under the Act.

Judge may direct infant to appear as if he were of full age.

(2) Provided that the judge may at any time direct that an infant shall appear either as applicant or respondent in the same manner as if he were of full age.

As to appearing by next friend, see Order V. r. 16 and Form 15.

APPLICATION FOR ARBITRATION.

Request for arbitration.

8.—(1) An application for the settlement of any matter by arbitration shall not be made unless and until some question has arisen between the parties, and such question has not been settled by agreement.

Rule 8.

This rule gives effect to the decision in Field v. Longden, (1902) 1 K. B. 47, that arbitration is not to be requested unless a question has arisen, and requires the question to be stated in the request. The question must be a real question (Jones v. Great Central Rail., 4 W. C. C. 23), and an employer must be given a fair opportunity of admitting or disputing liability (Caledon, etc. Co. v. Kennedy, (1906) 43 S. L. R. 430, 637). The arbitrator has no power under this rule to strike out a request for arbitration merely on the ground that he thinks further time should be allowed for a settlement to be arrived at, although it is in his discretion to do so, if he be of opinion that the proceedings are premature and unreasonable (Rooney v. Hurlock, (1918) W. C. & I. 200). NOTE.—This rule does not apply on proceedings for review (Tyne Tees Co. v. Whitlock, (1913) 3 K. B. 642).

(2) Where any question has arisen and has not been settled by agreement, an application for the settlement of the matter by arbitration shall be made by the applicant filing with the registrar a request for arbitration, intituled in the matter of the Act and in the matter of the arbitration, which request shall state concisely the question which has arisen, and shall, with the subsequent proceedings thereon, be recorded in the special register hereinafter mentioned.

The question thus stated is the only question which an arbitrator may consider. Nor should he amend the particulars at the hearing so as to substantially raise a new issue (Proprietors of Hay's Wharf v. Brown, 3 B. W. C. C. 84).

(3) Particulars shall be appended or annexed to the request, Particulars.
containing—

- (a) a concise statement of the circumstances under which the application is made, and the relief or order which the applicant claims ;
- (b) the date of service of notice of the accident on the employer, or, if such notice has not been served, the reason for such omission ; and
- (c) the full names and addresses of the respondents and of the applicant, and of his solicitor, if the proceedings are commenced through a solicitor.

9.—(1) The request and particulars shall be according to such one of the forms in the Appendix as shall be applicable to the case, with such modifications as the nature of the case may require. Forms of request and particulars. Forms 1 to 11.

If not complete, fuller and better ones may be demanded (Hay's Wharf v. Brown, 3 B. 92).

Rule 9.

(2) A copy of the notice of the accident shall be appended or annexed to the particulars. If this rule cannot be complied with, the reason for the omission shall be stated in the particulars.

Application
by employer.

10.—(1) Where an employer on whom a claim for compensation has been made desires to make an application for the settlement of any matter by arbitration, he shall file a request for arbitration in accordance with rule 8, to which the workman, or the legal personal representative, if any, and the persons claiming or who may be entitled to claim to be dependants of a deceased workman, or the other persons (as the case may be) on whose behalf the claim was made, shall be respondents.

(2) Particulars shall be appended or annexed to the request, containing—

- (a) a concise statement of the circumstances under which the application is made ;
- (b) a statement whether the applicant admits his liability to pay compensation, or denies such liability, wholly or partially, with (in the latter case) a statement of the grounds on and extent to which he denies liability ;
- (c) a statement of the matters which the applicant desires to have settled by arbitration ; and
- (d) the full names and addresses of the respondents and of the applicant, and of his solicitor, if the proceedings are commenced through a solicitor.

Copies for judge and respondents.

11. The applicant shall deliver to the registrar with the request and particulars a copy thereof for the judge or arbitrator, and a copy for each respondent to be served.

Where applicant is illiterate.

12. Where the applicant is illiterate and unable to furnish the required information in writing, the request and particulars and copies shall be filled up by the registrar's clerk.

County Court Rules
as to security for costs not to apply.

13. Order V., rules 10 and 11, and Order XII., rule 9, of the County Court Rules, as to security for costs, shall not apply to proceedings under the Act and these Rules.

PROCEEDINGS ON ARBITRATION BEFORE JUDGE.

Fixing Day and Place for Arbitration.

Fixing day and place for arbitration.

14.—(1) On the filing of a request for arbitration, the registrar shall transmit a copy of the request and particulars to the judge, who shall as soon as conveniently may be (if he decides to settle the matter himself) appoint a day and hour for proceeding with the arbitration. Such day shall, subject to the provisions of rule 28, be so fixed as to allow the copies of the request and particulars to be served on the respondents at least twenty clear days before the day so fixed.

Rule 14.

(2) The arbitration shall, subject as hereinafter mentioned, be held at the place at which the court is held.

(3) Provided, that the judge may direct that the arbitration shall be held at any other place within the district of the court, on application in that behalf made by any party to the arbitration, and on such party filing an undertaking to provide at his own expense a place to the satisfaction of the judge in which the arbitration may be held, and to pay the necessary expenses of the judge and officers of the court attending at such place.

(4) If such direction is given before the notices mentioned in the next following rule are issued, the registrar shall insert in such notices the place at which the arbitration has been so directed to be held.

(5) If such direction is given after such notices have been issued, the registrar shall forthwith send notice by post to the parties of the place at which the arbitration has been so directed to be held.

Notice of Day Fixed.

15.—(1) On the day for proceeding with an arbitration being fixed, the registrar shall give or send by post notice in writing to the applicant, stating the place at which and the day and hour on and at which the arbitration will be proceeded with, and shall issue the copies of the request and particulars, under the seal of the court, for service on the respondents, together with notices under the seal of the court, stating the place at which and the day and hour on and at which the arbitration will be proceeded with, and that if the respondents do not attend in person or by their solicitors such order will be made and proceedings taken as the judge may think just and expedient.

Notice to parties.

Forms 12, 13.

(2) Where the request is filed by an employer, the notices to be served on the respondents shall be modified by the omission of the words therein relating to the denial or admission of liability to pay compensation.

Notice where employer is applicant.
Form 13.

Service on Respondents.

16.—(1) The copies and notices mentioned in the last preceding rule shall, subject to the provisions of rule 28, be served on the respondents at least twenty clear days before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration.

Service on respondents.

This is to allow sufficient time for proceedings between service and hearing, especially third party proceedings.

Rule 16. (2) The copies and notices mentioned in the last preceding rule may be served—

- (a) By a bailiff of a court ; or, at the request of the applicant or his solicitor,
- (b) By the applicant, or some clerk or servant in his permanent and exclusive employ ; or
- (c) By the applicant's solicitor, or a solicitor acting as agent for such solicitor, or some person in the employ of either of them, or some person employed by either of them to serve such copies and notices, who might be so employed to serve a writ in an action in the High Court.

(3) Service may be effected either in accordance with the rules as to service of default summonses (a), or by registered post in accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 3 and 4 of section 14 of the Act with reference to service of notice in respect of an injury, and the provisions of those sub-sections shall apply to such service.

(a) Order VII. rr. 30—34.

Where service effected otherwise than by bailiff.

(4) Where service is effected otherwise than by a bailiff, a copy of the document served, with the date and mode of service indorsed thereon, shall within three clear days next after the date of service, or such further time as may be allowed by the registrar of the court issuing such document, be delivered or transmitted to such registrar by the applicant. The applicant shall also (unless the respondent files an answer) after the time limited for filing an answer, deliver or transmit to the registrar an affidavit of the service of such document, according to Form 37 in the Appendix to the County Court Rules, with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require.

Service by post.

(5) Where a document is served by post it shall, unless the contrary be proved, be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would have been delivered in the ordinary course of post, and in proving the service of such document it shall be sufficient to prove that the same was properly addressed and registered.

Service on respondent in Scotland or Ireland.

(6) Where the accident occurred in England, and any respondent resides in Scotland or Ireland, service on such respondent may be effected in accordance with this rule, and service so effected shall be deemed to be sufficient.

Par. 6 has been framed on the lines of the decision in Rex v. Owen, (1902) 2 K. B. 436. It was there held that where an accident occurs in England, but the employer resides in Scotland or Ireland, proceedings may be taken in the county court in England ; and in reply to the argument that there were no provisions for the service out of the jurisdiction, the court held that the rule as to service by registered post met the difficulty. Channell, J., pointed out that this was probably by accident, and that the words were not intended to meet such a case; but it was held that they did in fact meet it. It is now effected by this rule in express terms.

Further, the Court of Appeal has recently held that service by registered post on an employer resident abroad is good service where the claim arises out of a contract of employment made in the United Kingdom (Hunter v. Stadtsche, &c., Co., (1925) 2 K. B. 493; (1926) 95 L. J. K. B. 300; (1925) 133 L. T. 488).

Stay of Proceedings.

17. Where several requests for arbitration are filed by different applicants against the same respondent in the same court in respect of matters arising out of the same circumstances, the respondent may, on filing an undertaking to be bound, so far as his liability to pay compensation is concerned, by the award in such one of the said arbitrations as may be selected by the judge, apply to the judge under Order VIII., rule 2, for an order to stay proceedings in the arbitrations other than the one so selected until an award is made in such selected arbitration; and rules 2 to 6 of Order VIII. shall, with the necessary modifications, apply accordingly.

Stay of proceedings in other arbitrations to abide decision as to liability in selected arbitration. Order VIII., rules 2—6.

Answer by Respondent.

18.—(1) If any respondent desires to disclaim any interest in the subject matter of an arbitration, or considers that the applicant's particulars are in any respect inaccurate or incomplete, or desires to bring any fact or document to the notice of the judge, or intends to rely on the fact that notice of the accident, or of death, disablement, or suspension, was not given as required by the Act, or that the claim for compensation was not made within the time limited by the Act, or intends to deny (wholly or partially) his liability to pay compensation under the Act, he shall, ten clear days at least before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration, or if the time is abridged pursuant to rule 28, then within the time fixed by the order, file with the registrar an answer, stating his name and address, and the name and address of his solicitor (if any), and stating that he disclaims any interest in the subject matter of the arbitration, or stating in what respect the applicant's particulars are inaccurate or incomplete, or stating concisely any fact or document which he desires to bring to the notice of the judge, or on which he intends to rely, or the grounds on and extent to which he denies liability

Answer by respondent.

Form 14.

(2) The respondent shall with such answer file copies thereof for the applicant and the judge, and one copy for each of the other respondents; and the registrar shall within twenty-four hours after receiving such copies transmit the same by post to the applicant and the judge and the other respondents respectively.

Rule 18.

(3) Subject to any answer so filed, and to the provisions of the next following paragraph, the applicant's particulars, and, in the case of a claim for compensation, the liability to pay compensation under the Act, shall be taken to be admitted.

(4) Provided, that in case of non-compliance with this rule, and of the applicant's not consenting at the arbitration to permit a respondent to avail himself of any matter of which he should pursuant to this rule have given notice by filing an answer, the judge may, on such terms as he shall think fit, either proceed with the arbitration and allow the respondent to avail himself of such matter, or adjourn the arbitration to enable the respondent to file such answer.

The arbitrator's discretion on such matters is very great (Silvester v. Cude, 1 W. C. C. 120); but he should not allow new matter to be sprung on either party without adjourning as a rule, though he has jurisdiction to admit fresh oral evidence even at the third hearing of the case. See Leivers v. Barber, Walker & Co., (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. 933.

The arbitrator has jurisdiction to consider an application to terminate a suspensory award which is made by the answer (Paulizky v. Wandsworth, Wimbledon & Epsom Gas Co., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 127).

Answer where employer is applicant.

(5) The provisions of this rule shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to a case in which a request for arbitration is filed by an employer; but a respondent who fails to file an answer shall not be taken to admit the truth of any statement in the applicant's particulars in which he denies, wholly or partially, his liability to pay compensation.

Submission to Award or Payment into Court by Respondent.

Submission

of liability.
Form 15.

19.—(1) A respondent who admits liability may at any time before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration,

(a) Where the application is made by an injured workman,

(i.) file with the registrar a notice that he submits to an award for the payment of a weekly sum, to be specified in such notice; or

(ii.) file with the registrar a notice that he submits to an award for the payment of a lump sum, to be specified in the notice, which he considers to be sufficient to cover his liability in the circumstances of the case, and pay such sum into court; or

This rule is probably ultra vires if it is intended to allow a lump sum covering future liability, and not merely arrears of compensation, to be paid into court.

(b) Where the application is made on behalf of the dependants of a deceased workman, or for the settlement of the sum payable in respect of medical attendance on and the burial of a deceased workman who leaves no dependants, file with the registrar a notice that he admits liability, and pay into court such sum of money as he considers sufficient to cover his liability in the circumstances of the case.

Rule 19.

In any such case the respondent shall file as many copies of the notice as there are parties to whom notice of submission to an award or of payment into court is to be sent.

(2) A respondent who denies liability may at any time before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration file a notice of submission to an award or pay money into court in accordance with this rule, accompanied by a notice stating his name and address, and further stating that notwithstanding such submission or payment he denies his liability, together with as many copies of such notice as there are parties to whom notice of such submission or payment is to be sent.

Submission to award or payment into court with denial of liability.

Form 15.

(3) The registrar shall within twenty-four hours from the time of any notice filed or payment made pursuant to either of the two last preceding paragraphs send notice thereof (with a copy of the notice filed by the respondent) to the applicant, and to the other respondents (if any).

Forms 16, 17.

(4) If the applicant is a workman, and elects to accept in satisfaction of his claim the weekly payment or the lump sum specified in the respondent's notice, he shall send to the registrar and to the respondent by post, or leave at the registrar's office and at the residence or place of business of the respondent, a written notice according to the form in the Appendix, stating such acceptance, within such reasonable time before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration as the time of filing of notice of submission by the respondent has permitted.

Acceptance of weekly payment or lump sum by workman.

Form 18.

(5) If the application for arbitration is made on behalf of the dependants of a deceased workman, or for the settlement of the sum payable in respect of medical attendance and burial as aforesaid, and the applicant is willing to accept the sum paid into court in satisfaction of the compensation payable to the dependants, or in respect of such medical attendance and burial (as the case may be), he shall send to the registrar and to the respondent by post, or leave at the registrar's office and at the residence or place of business of the respondent, a written notice of such willingness, according to the form in the Appendix, within such reasonable time before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration as the time of payment into court by the respondent has permitted.

Acceptance by dependants of sum paid into court.

Form 18.

If there are any other respondents, the applicant shall in like manner give notice of such willingness to such respondents; and if any of such respondents are willing to accept the sum paid into court in satisfaction of such compensation as aforesaid, they shall in like manner give notice of such willingness to the registrar and to the applicant and the other respondents.

Rule 19.

Procedure if weekly payment offered or sum paid in is accepted.

(6) If the applicant is a workman, and elects to accept in satisfaction of his claim the weekly payment submitted to or the lump sum paid into court by the respondent, or if in any other case the applicant and all the respondents give notice of their willingness to accept the sum paid into court, the following provisions shall apply :—

(a) Where the applicant is a workman and accepts the weekly payment submitted to or the lump sum paid into court by the respondent, the judge in his discretion may, on application made to him in or out of court, forthwith make an award directing payment of such weekly sum accordingly, or directing payment of such lump sum to or applying the same for the benefit of the workman ;

(b) Where in the case of death the respondent has paid money into court, the judge may in his discretion, on application in that behalf, made to him in or out of court, award that further proceedings against such respondent be stayed, except as hereinafter mentioned and subject to payment of the prescribed fee on the award ; and

(i.) If the applicant and the other respondents agree as to the apportionment and application of such sum, the judge may in his discretion, on application made to him in or out of court on behalf of or with the consent of all such parties, forthwith make an award for such apportionment and application ;

(ii.) In any other case the arbitration may proceed as between the applicant and the other respondents.

Costs payable by respondent.

(c) In any such case the judge may, in his discretion, by his award order the respondent filing notice of submission to an award or paying money into court to pay such costs as the applicant and the other respondents, or any of them, may have properly incurred before the receipt of notice of submission to an award or payment into court, and his or their costs properly incurred in relation to the notice of submission to an award or payment into court, and to the notice of acceptance, including, if the judge on consideration of the facts of the case shall so order, any items which might have been allowed by order of the judge at the hearing of the arbitration.

Form 18.

(d) If the applicant or any respondent intends to apply for any such costs, he shall give notice of his intention in his notice of acceptance, according to the form in the Appendix ; or where the time of filing notice of submission to an award or the time of payment into court by the respondent does not permit of notice of acceptance being given, the applicant or any respondent may apply for such costs without giving such notice.

Rule 19.

(7) Where any party has not given notice of acceptance in accordance with this rule, he may nevertheless accept the weekly payment which the respondent has submitted to pay, or the sum paid into court, at any time before the arbitration is called on and opened, subject to the payment of any costs which may have been reasonably incurred by the respondent since the date of filing notice of submission or the date of payment into court, and which may be allowed by the judge; and the judge may order any costs so allowed to be paid by the party so accepting, and may order such costs to be set off against any costs payable to such party, or to be deducted from any weekly payment or compensation awarded to such party.

Acceptance at any time before arbitration opened. Costs.

(8) In default of notice of acceptance by the applicant and all the respondents, the arbitration may proceed; but if no greater weekly payment or compensation is awarded than that which the respondent has submitted to pay or has paid into court, such respondent shall not be liable to pay any further costs than such as he might have been ordered to pay if the weekly payment offered or sum paid into court had been accepted; and the judge may order any costs incurred by such respondent after notice of submission to an award or payment into court to be paid by any party who has not given notice of acceptance of such weekly payment or sum, and may order such costs to be set off against any costs payable to such party, or to be deducted from any weekly payment or compensation awarded to such party. The judge may also order any costs incurred after notice of payment into court by any party who has given notice of acceptance to be paid by any other party who has not given such notice, and to be deducted from any compensation awarded to such last-mentioned party.

Procedure and costs if weekly sum offered or sum paid in is not accepted.

See Kempley v. H. H. Poole & Co., (1923) 1 K. B. 195; 92 L. J. K. B. 247, where the respondents denied liability, but in their answer said they were willing to submit to an award for a small sum in respect of past payments. The judge held this sum was sufficient, but ordered respondents to pay the costs of the arbitration. Held that this was wrong, Sterndale, M.R., expressing doubt as to whether rule allowing a respondent to submit to an award or pay money into court whilst denying liability was ultra vires.

(9) The provisions of this rule shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to a case in which an employer has filed a request for arbitration.

Submission to award or payment into court where employer is applicant.

This rule is rearranged and modified to provide for payment into court with a denial of liability.

Rule 20.

Notice to Parties against whom Indemnity claimed under section 6.

Notice of claim to indemnity under Act, sect. 6.

Form 23.

20. Where a respondent claims to be entitled under section 4 of the Act to indemnity against any person not a party to the arbitration, he shall, ten clear days at least before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration, or if the time is abridged pursuant to rule 28, then within the time fixed by the order, file a notice of his claim according to the form in the Appendix ; and the registrar shall seal such notice and deliver it to the respondent, who shall serve the same, together with a copy of the applicant's request and particulars, and of the notice served on the respondent under rules 15 and 16, upon the person against whom such claim is made ; and the provisions of paragraphs 2 to 6 of rule 16 shall apply to such service.

Sect. 6 of the Act definitely requires questions arising under such section to be settled by arbitration, and not by action. This rule, and Rules 21—24, apply the county court procedure to such cases. So also Rule 28 gives the court discretion as to time of service.

Appearance by third party.

21. If any person served with a notice under the last preceding rule (hereinafter called the third party) desires to dispute the applicant's claim in the arbitration as against the respondent on whose behalf the notice has been given, or his own liability to such respondent, he must appear before the judge on the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration, or on any day to which he may have received notice from the registrar that the arbitration has been adjourned or postponed ; and in default of his so doing he shall be deemed to admit the validity of any award made against such respondent as to any matter which the judge has jurisdiction to decide in the arbitration as between the applicant and the respondent, whether such award is made by consent or otherwise, and his own liability to indemnify the respondent to the extent claimed in the notice served on him by the respondent.

Where notice not served in due time.

Provided, that if it appears to the judge before or at the arbitration that the notice of claim has not been served on the third party in time to enable him to appear on the day hereinbefore mentioned, or that for any other sufficient cause the third party is unable to appear on such day, the judge may adjourn the proceedings in the arbitration on such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as may be just.

Order XI. r. 2.

Proceedings on default of appearance by third party.

22. If the third party fails to appear on the day mentioned in rule 21, or, if the proceedings are adjourned under that rule, on the day to which the proceedings are adjourned, then if the arbitration results in an award in favour of the applicant, or the arbitration is finally decided in favour of the applicant otherwise than by an award, the judge may on the application of the respondent make such award as the nature of the case may require in favour of the respondent against the third party: but execution thereon shall not issue without leave of the judge until after satisfaction by the respondent of the award against him, or the amount recovered against him.

Provided, that the judge may set aside or vary any award made against the third party under this rule upon such terms as may be just.

Order XI. r. 3.

23. The third party or the respondent may apply before or at the arbitration to the judge for directions: and the judge, upon the hearing of the application, may, if satisfied that there is a question proper to be determined as to the liability of the third party to make the indemnity claimed, in whole or in part, order the question of such liability as between the third party and the respondent giving the notice to be determined at or after the arbitration, and if not so satisfied may make such award as the nature of the case may require in favour of the respondent giving the notice against the third party: or the judge may, if it appears desirable so to do, give the third party leave to resist the claim of the applicant against the respondent upon such terms as may be just, or to appear at the arbitration and take such part therein as may be just, and generally may give such directions as he may think proper for having the question most conveniently determined, and as to the mode or extent in or to which the third party shall be bound or made liable by the award in the arbitration.

Order XI. r. 4.

24. The judge may decide all questions of costs as between a third party and the other parties to the arbitration, and may order any one or more to pay the costs of any other or others, or give such directions as to costs as the justice of the case may require.

Order XI. r. 5.

Notice to Parties against whom Indemnity claimed under section 30, or otherwise.

25.—(1) Where a respondent claims that if compensation is recovered against him he will be entitled under section 30 of the Act, or otherwise than under section 6, to indemnity against any person not a party to the arbitration, he may, if he desires that such person shall be bound by the proceedings in the arbitration to the extent in this rule provided, file and serve a notice of his claim in accordance with rule 20.

Notice of claim to indemnity under s. 30, or otherwise than under sect. 6.
Form 23.

Rule 25.

If person served make default in appearing, is to be deemed to admit validity of award against respondent.

(2) If any person served with a notice under the last preceding paragraph (hereinafter called the third party) desires to dispute the applicant's claim in the arbitration as against the respondent on whose behalf the notice has been given, he must appear before the judge on the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration, or on any day to which he may have received notice from the registrar that the arbitration has been adjourned or postponed; and in default of his so doing he shall be deemed to admit the validity of any award made against such respondent as to any matter which the judge has jurisdiction to decide in the arbitration as between the applicant and the respondent, whether such award is made by consent or otherwise.

Where notice not served in due time.

Provided, that if it appears to the judge before or at the arbitration that the notice of claim has not been served on the third party in time to enable him to appear on the day hereinbefore mentioned, or that for any other sufficient cause the third party is unable to appear on such day, the judge may adjourn the proceedings in the arbitration on such terms, as to costs or otherwise, as may be just.

This rule has been slightly modified to bring it into accord with Nettleingham v. Powell, (1913) W. C. Rep. 22 (see under sect. 6). In G. N. Rail. v. Whitehead, 18 T. L. R. 816, the plaintiff recovered 78*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*, the amount of the award, and 10*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.* for costs paid to the applicant. The rule precisely states the law and the extent to which such third party is liable.

Application to judge for directions as to conduct of arbitration.

(3) The third party or the respondent may apply before or at the arbitration to the judge for directions; and the judge, upon the hearing of the application, may, if it appears desirable so to do, give the third party leave to resist the claim of the applicant against the respondent upon such terms as may be just, or to appear at the arbitration and take such part therein as may be just, and generally may give such directions as he shall think proper.

Costs.

(4) If the third party obtains leave to resist the claim of the applicant against the respondent, the provisions of rule 24 as to costs shall apply.

Judge how far empowered to decide questions as to liability of third party.

(5) Nothing in this rule shall empower the judge to decide (otherwise than by consent) any question as to the liability of the third party to indemnify the respondent, or to make any award in favour of the respondent against the third party, or to make any further or other order than that the third party shall not be entitled in any future proceedings between the respondent and such third party to dispute the validity of the award as to any matter which the judge has jurisdiction to decide in the arbitration as between the applicant and the respondent.

(6) Provided, that with the consent of the respondent and the third party,

(a) If the arbitration results in an award in favour of the applicant, or is finally decided in favour of the applicant otherwise than by an award, and the third party admits his liability to indemnify the respondent, the judge may, on application made to him at or after the hearing of the arbitration or the final decision thereof, make such award as the nature of the case may require in favour of the respondent against the third party; but execution thereon shall not issue without leave of the judge until after satisfaction by the respondent of the award against him, or the amount recovered against him; or

Rule 25.

- (b) The judge may, on an application for directions, order any question as to the liability of the third party to make the indemnity claimed to be settled, as between the respondent and the third party, by arbitration after the arbitration between the applicant and the respondent, and may on such subsequent arbitration make such award as the nature of the case may require in favour of either party against the other.
- (c) In any such case the judge may decide all questions of costs as between the respondent and the third party, and may order either of such parties to pay the costs of the other (including any costs payable by such party to any other party to the arbitration), or give such directions as to such costs as the justice of the case may require.

Third Party Procedure where Employer is Applicant.

26. The provisions of rules 20 to 25 shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to a case in which an employer who has filed a request for arbitration claims to be entitled to indemnity against any person not a party to the arbitration.

Third party procedure where employer is applicant.

Claim to Indemnity as between Respondents.

27.—(1) Where a respondent claims to be entitled to indemnity against any other respondent, a like notice shall be issued and the like procedure shall thereupon be adopted for the determination of questions between the respondents as might be issued and adopted against such other respondent if such last-mentioned respondent were a third party.

Claim to indemnity as between respondents.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall prejudice the rights of the applicant against any respondent.

When indemnity is claimed by one respondent against another, he must give notice (Appleby v. Horseley and Lovett, (1899) 2 Q. B. 521).

Abridgment of Time for Service, &c.

28. The judge or registrar may for good cause shown abridge the time for service of a request for arbitration on any respondent, Abridgment of time for service, answer, &c.

Rule 28. — or the time for filing an answer or serving a third party notice under these rules ; and if an order is made to that effect a copy of the order shall be annexed to and served with the notice to be served on the respondent.

Procedure on Arbitration.

Procedure on arbitration. 29.—(1) Subject to the special provisions of these rules, the procedure in an arbitration shall be the same as the procedure in an action commenced in the county court by plaint and summons in the ordinary way, and determined by the judge without a jury, in so far as such procedure is applicable to proceedings by way of arbitration ; and the statutory provisions and rules for the time being in force relating to such actions shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to such arbitration accordingly.

Act, Sched. I., par. 6. (2) In particular, the statutory provisions and rules for the time being in force as to—

- (a) further particulars ;
- (b) interrogatories, and discovery and inspection of documents ;
- (c) examination of witnesses and persons ; and
- (d) granting a new trial (with the exception of rule 2 of Order XXXI.), in an action in the county court shall, with the necessary modifications, apply to any such arbitration.

(3) In the application of such provisions and rules the applicant's request for arbitration shall be deemed to be a summons with particulars annexed, the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration shall be deemed to be the return day, the day on which the arbitration is held shall be deemed to be the day of trial, and the applicant and respondents shall be deemed to be plaintiff and defendants respectively.

Burden of proof of facts not admitted. (4) Provided, that the burden of proof of any facts which are not admitted shall be the same, whoever the party may be by whom the request for arbitration is filed.

Where termination or diminution is asked for the court has power to make an order for further particulars of the diminution claimed. This power should be used sparingly (Vickers, Ltd. v. Miners, (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 490 ; 20 B.W.C.C. 269).

Although a judge may grant a new trial in a workmen's compensation case, he must do it on the same principles as have been approved generally by the House of Lords for granting new trials, in Dean v. Brown, (1910) A. C. 373 ; 79 L. J. K. B. (H. L.) 690. In Guest v. Ibbotson, (1922) 91 L. J. K. B. 558, a county court judge had granted a new trial in a workmen's compensation case almost entirely on the statement of counsel that two new witnesses would be produced. The Court of Appeal reversed his decision and held that three conditions are necessary before a new trial should be granted : (1) That there is fresh evidence available ; (2) That that evidence is so material that its absence will cause, or has caused, a miscarriage of justice ; and (3) that it could not with reasonable care and diligence have been brought forward at the first trial, per Scrutton, L.J.

See also Golden v. Swift, of Coventry, Ltd., (1924) 93 L. J. K. B. 488 (H. L.).

Rule 29
Notes.

In this case a workman was alleged to have died in consequence of an injury received four months previously. Medical evidence was called on behalf of the employers that it was impossible that the injury could have caused the death, and the judge found as a fact that the accident was not the cause of death.

The House of Lords, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, refused to grant the applicant a new trial on the ground that she had been taken by surprise by the evidence called on behalf of the respondents, and had had no opportunity of calling rebutting evidence.

Award.

Award.

Form 24.
Order
rule 7.

30.—(1) The award of the judge on any arbitration shall be prepared and settled by the registrar, and shall be signed by the judge, and shall be sealed and filed, and sealed copies thereof shall be served on all persons affected thereby in accordance with rule 7 of Order XXIII.; and such award shall be enforceable in the same manner as a judgment or order of the court.

(2) The judge shall have power at any time to correct any clerical mistake or error in such award arising from any accidental slip or omission.

Save as thus provided, an award once signed cannot be altered. Up to signing, it can (Moulem v. Dunne, (1912) 2 K. B. 136; Brown v. Whitehead, (1920) W. C. & I. 3).

PROCEEDINGS BEFORE ARBITRATOR APPOINTED BY JUDGE.

Appointment of Arbitrator by Judge.

31. With respect to the appointment of an arbitrator by the judge, the following provisions shall apply:—

Appointment of arbitrator
by judge.

(a) If with respect to any court the Lord Chancellor, by general order, authorises the settlement by an arbitrator appointed by the judge of matters which, in default of such authorisation, would be settled by the judge, the judge may from time to time, on an application being made for the settlement of any matter, either settle the same himself, or he may, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor, appoint, by writing under his hand, and filed in the court, an arbitrator to settle such matter.

(b) If with respect to any court the Lord Chancellor makes no such general order as aforesaid, then, on an application being made for the settlement of any matter, the judge may (if from the state of business in the court, or for any other reason, he is unable to settle such matter within a reasonable time) apply to the Lord Chancellor to authorise the settlement of such matter by an arbitrator appointed by the judge.

(c) If the Lord Chancellor does not grant such authority, the judge shall proceed to settle the matter in accordance with the Act and these rules.

(d) If the Lord Chancellor grants such authority, the judge may, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor, appoint, by writing under his hand, and filed in the court, an arbitrator to settle such matter.

Rule 31.

- (e) In case of the death or refusal or inability to act of an arbitrator appointed under this rule, the judge may, on the application of any party, appoint a new arbitrator in accordance with this rule.

Fixing Day for Arbitration.

Fixing day
and place for proceedings
arbitrator.

32. Where any matter is to be settled by an arbitrator, the judge shall return the copy of the request for arbitration to the registrar, with the appointment of such arbitrator, to be transmitted to the arbitrator; and the registrar shall transmit the copy of the request and a copy of the appointment to the arbitrator, who shall, as soon as conveniently may be, appoint a day and hour for proceeding with the arbitration, in accordance with rule 14, and the provisions of that rule as to the place where an arbitration shall be held shall apply. Provided, that where the arbitration is to be held at the place where the court is held, the day appointed for the arbitration shall, if possible, be one on which the court or other suitable accommodation in the court-house will be available for the arbitration.

Procedure before Arbitrator.

Procedure
before
arbitrator.

33.—(1) On the day for proceeding with an arbitration being fixed the registrar shall proceed according to rule 15, and thenceforward the arbitration shall proceed in the same manner as an arbitration before the judge; and these rules shall apply and the officers of the court shall act accordingly, with the substitution of the arbitrator for the judge.

(2) Provided that—

- (a) In any case coming within the provisions of paragraph 6 (a) or paragraph 6 (b) (i.) of rule 19, or in any other case in which, after an arbitrator has been appointed, but before the day fixed for proceeding with the arbitration, the parties agree upon an award, the judge may, on application made to him in or out of court on behalf of or with the consent of all parties, settle the matter himself; and thereupon the functions of the arbitrator as to such matter shall cease, and the registrar shall forthwith inform him that the matter has been settled; and
- (b) Any application for the enforcement of or for staying proceedings on an award, which would in the case of an award made by the judge be required to be made to the judge, shall, in the case of an award made by an arbitrator, be in like manner made to the judge.

Submission of Question of Law by Committee or Arbitrator to Judge.

Rule 34.

Submission of question of law by committee or arbitrator to judge.
Act,
Sched. I.,
par. 4.
Statement of case.

34.—(1) Where a committee or an arbitrator (whether agreed on by the parties or appointed by the judge) submits any question of law for the decision of the judge under paragraph 4 of the second schedule to the Act, such submission shall be in the form of a special case.

(2) The case shall be intituled in the matter of the Act and of the arbitration, and shall be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively, and shall state concisely such facts and documents as may be necessary to enable the judge to decide the questions of law raised thereby. Upon the argument of the case the judge and the parties shall be at liberty to refer to the whole contents of such documents, and the judge shall be at liberty to draw from the facts and documents stated in the case any inference, whether of fact or of law, which might have been drawn therefrom if proved at the hearing of an arbitration.

(3) The case shall be signed by the chairman and secretary of the committee or by the arbitrator, and sent to the registrar, who shall transmit the same to the judge, and the judge shall as soon as conveniently may be appoint a day and hour for hearing the case, and instruct the registrar to give notice thereof forthwith to the parties. The day shall be so fixed as to allow notice to be given ten days at least before the day fixed for the hearing, unless the judge shall, with the consent of all parties, fix an earlier day.

Fixing day for hearing.
Form 25.

(4) The registrar shall, on the application and at the cost of any party, furnish him with a copy of the case.

Copies of case.

(5) On the hearing of the case the judge may, after deciding the question submitted to him, remit the case with a memorandum of his decision to the committee or arbitrator, for them or him to proceed thereon in accordance with the decision; or if the decision of the judge on the question submitted to him disposes of the whole matter, he may himself make an award in the arbitration in accordance with such decision.

Power of judge on hearing of case.

(6) The judge may remit the case to the committee or arbitrator for re-statement or further statement.

Re-statement.

(7) The judge shall have the same power over the costs of a special case as he has over the costs of an arbitration, or he may direct that such costs shall be dealt with as costs attending the arbitration; and the provisions of the Act and these rules as to such costs shall apply accordingly.

Costs of special case.

Rule 35.

Appearance of parties.

APPEARANCE OF PARTIES IN ARBITRATION.

35.—(1) A party to any arbitration under the Act, whether before a committee or an agreed arbitrator, or before a judge or an arbitrator appointed by a judge, may appear—

(a) In person :

(b) By any solicitor who would be entitled to appear for such party in an action in the county court :

N.B.—It is within the discretion of the county court judge to refuse to hear an admitted solicitor who is managing clerk to the solicitor on the record (Rogers v. Metropolitan Borough of Holborn, (1914) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 262).

(c) By counsel :

Or, by leave of the committee, agreed arbitrator, judge or arbitrator, a party may appear—

(d) By a member of his family :

(e) By a person in the permanent and exclusive employment of such party :

(f) In the case of a company or corporation, by any director of the company or corporation, or by the secretary or any other officer or any person in the permanent and exclusive employment of the company or corporation :

(g) By any officer or member of any society or other body of persons of which such party is a member or with which he is connected, or, where death results from the injury, by any officer or member of any society or other body of persons of which the deceased workman was a member or with which he was connected ; or

(h) Under special circumstances, by any other person.

(2) No person other than a solicitor who appears or acts on behalf of any party in any arbitration under the Act shall be entitled to have or recover any fee or reward for so appearing or acting, other than such travelling expenses and (in the case of a workman or a member of his family) allowance for time (if any) as may be allowed by the committee, agreed arbitrator, judge or arbitrator : Provided that nothing in these rules contained shall affect the right of counsel to appear or act in any arbitration, or the right of any solicitor to recover costs in respect of his employment of counsel to appear or act as aforesaid.

DUTY OF JUDGE AS TO TAKING NOTES.

Note to be taken of question of law raised, &c., and copy
furnished.

36. At the hearing of any arbitration or special case the judge shall make a note of any question of law raised, and of the facts in evidence in relation thereto, and of his decision thereon, and of his decision in the arbitration or on the hearing of the case :

Rule 36.

and he shall, at the expense of any party to such arbitration or case, furnish a copy of the note so taken to or allow a copy of the same to be taken by or on behalf of such party, and shall sign such copy, whether a notice of motion by way of appeal has been served or not.

The county court judge ought to take a note, for the assistance of the Court of Appeal, of every point which in any reasonable aspect of the case can come before the Court of Appeal, even though his attention is not called by the representatives of either side to the necessity of so doing. The parties ought not to have the burden of taking shorthand notes, the use of which on appeal is discouraged (Practice Note, Times Newspaper, Dec. 18th, 1908). But a shorthand writer's note, if certified by the arbitrator, may be substituted for the arbitrator's note. Earwicker v. London Graving Dock Co., Ltd., (1916) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 137. See also Brine v. Corry, (1905) 7 W. C. C. 130; Rayman v. Fields (No. 1), (1910) 102 L. T. 154; Wright v. Sneyd Collieries, Ltd., (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 354.

A point appealed upon in the Court of Appeal is, of course, all important in such court. Before the arbitrator it may have been one of many, and perhaps the least important. Unless then definitely formulated, it is impossible for the note to be as full and as clear as is desirable when it has to be argued. Hence the innumerable difficulties on appeal as to what the facts material to a decision really are. A defective note may result in a re-hearing being necessary (Griffiths v. Wynnstay Coll., (1909) 2 B. 450; Gellyceidrim Colliery v. Rogers, 3 B. 62). On the other hand the mere fact that the note is unsatisfactory will not result in a new trial if there appears to be evidence to support the finding. See Creighton v. Lowry, (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 69. In Leeds and Liverpool Canal Co. v. Hesketh, (1910) 3 B. 301, the Court of Appeal permitted an affidavit of a doctor and of the solicitor engaged in the arbitration proceedings to be read for the purpose of supplementing the county court judge's notes; and see Slater v. Machonochie Bros., Ltd., (1920) 89 L. J. K. B. 1238.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST INSURERS UNDER SECTION 7.

37.—(1) Where under section 7 of the Act the rights of an employer against any insurers under a contract entered into by the employer with the insurers in respect of any liability under the Act to any workman are transferred to and vest in the workman, the following provisions shall have effect.

MEMORANDUM UNDER SECTIONS 23, 24 AND 44.

- Memorandum to be sent to registrar. Act, ss. 23, 24, 44. Form 36. 43.—(1) The memorandum as to any matter decided by a committee or by an arbitrator or by agreement, which is required to be sent, or may be sent to the registrar, under sections 23, 24 or 44 of the Act, shall be according to such one of the forms in the Appendix as is applicable to the circumstances of the case, and shall be left at the office of the registrar, or sent by post by registered letter addressed to the registrar at his office, as soon as may be after the matter has been decided.

(2) Where the matter is decided after a medical referee has been appointed to report on any matter under paragraph 11 of the first schedule to the Act, a copy of the report of the referee shall be annexed to the memorandum and recorded therewith; and if the referee attended any proceeding in the arbitration, it shall be so stated in the memorandum.

(3) In the case of an agreement as to any matter referred to in paragraph 1 of rule 51, a separate statement as required by that paragraph together (in the case where the workman is an insured person) with a copy thereof for the Approved Society or Committee shall be left or sent with the memorandum of the agreement. Rule 43.
Form 37.

This rule, in conjunction with Rule 51, has been the subject of considerable amendment. By the Rules 1908 (No. 2) it ran :—“(3) Where the matter is decided by agreement, there shall be added to the memorandum a paragraph according to the Form 36A in the Appendix, containing a statement of such of the particulars mentioned in that form as are applicable to the circumstances of the case.”

Owing to its wording in this form, the question was raised whether the information required to be supplied by it, and under Form (then) 36A, were to be taken as part of the memorandum, and if not at once challenged, if wrong, to be held binding. This was not intended, but only that the information required by the registrar to enable him to decide whether it should be registered or referred to the judge under Schedule II. par. 9, proviso (d), should be furnished. Hence the further amendment. The origin of the original rule, and the necessity for the present one, was the difficulty experienced by registrars to whom agreements were forwarded for registration under Schedule II. par. 9, in obtaining information to enable them to judge whether such agreements should properly be recorded; and they provide that the memorandum of an agreement shall contain such information.

44.—(1) If the matter is decided by a committee or an arbitrator, the memorandum shall be authenticated by the signatures of the chairman and secretary of the committee, or by the signature of the arbitrator; and it shall be the duty of the committee or arbitrator, as soon as may be after the decision, to draw up such memorandum and to sign the same or cause it to be signed as aforesaid, and to leave or send the same as aforesaid, or to deliver the same to some party interested, to be by him so left or sent. (2) If the matter is decided by agreement, the memorandum shall be authenticated by the signatures or signature of the parties to the agreement or one of them, or, in the case of employers, by the signature of some official or other person in their employ duly authorised to sign on their behalf, or of an agent duly authorised to sign on their behalf, or, in the case of persons under disability, by the signature of their next friend on their behalf. Authentica-

This paragraph is in this form—

(a) Because the Master of the Rolls in Rhodes v. Soothill Colliery Co., Ltd., (1909) 1 K. B. 191, at p. 195, observed that in his opinion it was improper that agreements should be signed by solicitors for dependants; and

(b) To provide for the authentication of memoranda by the signatures of duly authorised officials on behalf of employers, or of next friends on behalf of persons under disability. See Ware v. Whitlock, (1923) 2 K. B. 418; (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 763.

(3) A memorandum of an agreement may be left with or sent to the registrar by insurers on behalf of the parties interested. Memorandum may be lodged by insurers.

Rule 44.

Copies.

(4) There shall be left or sent with the memorandum a copy thereof for every party interested. In the case of an agreement for the payment of a lump sum, the approved society or committee referred to in sub-section (4) of section 12 of the Act shall be deemed to be a party interested for the purposes of this Rule and of Rules 45 to 51 inclusive.

This par. 4 is framed so that a memorandum may be recorded of a verbal or even an implied agreement (Mercer v. Hilton, 3 B. 6).

Production of original agreement.

(5) Where the matter is decided by agreement, the registrar may, if the original agreement is in writing, and is not left or sent to be recorded, require such original agreement to be produced ; but he shall not be entitled to retain the same where a memorandum thereof is left or sent to be recorded.

Agreement on behalf of person under disability.

(6) An agreement made by or on behalf of any person under any legal disability shall be conditional only unless and until a memorandum thereof has been recorded in accordance with the Act and these rules.

The meaning of rule 44, par. 6, is that in the case of an infant workman the registrar must consider all those matters which a court has to consider when dealing with the validity of an infant's contract. It does not mean that an infant's contract under the Act is to be of no validity unless and until recorded, or that his death before registration would preclude his representatives from demanding that it should be registered, provided that it satisfies the conditions of a valid infant's contract (Rex v. Registrar of Bury County Court, Ex parte Prestwick, (1918) W. C. & I. 315).

These rules are intended to secure uniformity of practice. Some registrars require the original agreement to be produced when a memorandum is filed, and claim to retain it, a practice to which insurance companies object, as the original agreements are often required as vouchers for payment or for purposes of audit ; and to settle the question whether a memorandum of agreement may be lodged by insurers.

The Act only requires a memorandum of an agreement, and not the original agreement, to be recorded, though no doubt the original agreement, which is the best evidence, may be filed. The rule provides that where a memorandum is filed, the registrar may require the original to be produced, to satisfy himself that it has been duly executed ; but that where a memorandum is filed, the registrar shall not be entitled to retain the original agreement. It further provides that memoranda of agreements, which are generally entered into by insurers on behalf of the employers, may be filed by insurers on behalf of the parties interested.

45. On the receipt of the memorandum and copies the registrar shall send one of the copies to every party interested, together (in the case of a party other than the approved society or committee) with a notice according to the form in the Appendix, requesting such party to inform him within ten days from the date of the notice whether the memorandum is genuine, or whether he disputes its genuineness, and, if so, on what grounds, and together (in the case of such society or committee, if a party interested) with a copy of the separate statement referred to in paragraph (3) of Rule 43 and paragraph (1) of Rule 51 and a notice according to the form in the Appendix requesting to be informed whether the registration of the memorandum is objected to, and if so, on what grounds.

Rule 45.

Formerly the only question the registrar could inquire into was the memorandum of a genuine agreement. If so, it had to be registered, even though at the time the workman was not entitled to payment of the stipulated compensation (Blake v. M. R., (1904) 1 K. B. 503), or even if the agreement were at the time determined (Keeling v. Eastwood, 116 L. T. J. 595). It was no objection to the registration that the agreement was implied or verbal only (Webster v. L. & N. W. Rail., L. T., June 29th, 1901). Now a spent agreement cannot be registered (see Schedule II., par. 9). This rule was altered in consequence of the extended meaning given to the word "genuineness" in Popple v. Frodingham Iron Co., (1912) 2 K. B. 14, and Goodsell v. Owners of Barge Lloyds, (1912) W. N. 302.

The approved society, where there is one, has now to be given notice. Sect. 12 (4) of 1923 Act (now sec. 23 (6)) makes them "parties interested."

46. If no notice to dispute the genuineness of the memorandum or to object to its being recorded is received within such period of ten days, the registrar shall, subject to sub-section (a) of section 25 of the Act, as extended by section 16, sub-section 1 (c), of the National Health Insurance Act, 1924, and to Rules 49A and 51, record the memorandum without further proof.

Recording of memorandum, if genuineness not disputed, 14 & 15 Geo. 5, c. 38, s. 16 (1) (c).

47 (a) If any party interested disputes the genuineness of the memorandum (for example, by alleging in the case of a memorandum of an agreement that no such agreement has in fact been entered into, or that the terms of the agreement are not correctly stated in the memorandum, or that the agreement is no longer subsisting or enforceable, or that it is not enforceable by reason of its having been entered into under a mutual mistake, or obtained by fraud or undue influence or other improper means); or

(b) if the society or committee objects on any other ground under sub-section (6) of section 23 of the Act to the registration of the agreement; or

Or objection made by society. Act, s. 23 (6).

Or objection made by employer. Act, s. 23 (1) proviso (b).

The party so disputing or objecting shall within ten days from the date of the notice mentioned in Rule 45 file with the registrar a notice according to the form in the Appendix stating the grounds on which the genuineness of the memorandum is disputed or the recording thereof is objected to, and shall with such notice file a copy thereof for each of the other parties interested.

Separate Statement.—In the event of the statement containing an error, the proper order to make is that it be returned to the party who sent it in for correction; but the judge has no jurisdiction to order the statement to be altered, or to order the memorandum recorded to be altered so as to show a rectification of the mistake in the statement (Edge v. Green, (1918) W. C. & I. 330).

In Roberts v. Blow, Richards & Co., (1920) W. C. & I. 29, where the registrar omitted to send out notices as required by this rule, and made a verbal report and not a written one as required by (3), infra, and it was objected when the case came before the judge that he had no jurisdiction owing to these irregularities, and the judge did not go into the merits but refused to record the agreement; on appeal the case was remitted to the judge to determine it after the irregularities had been corrected.

(3) Where notice disputing the genuineness of the memorandum is not filed pursuant to Rule 47, but it appears to the registrar on any information which he considers sufficient, that the memorandum ought not to be recorded for any reason mentioned in the said proviso as so extended, or mentioned in sub-section (3) or (4) of section 23 of the Act, he shall make a report to the judge in writing, stating the information he has obtained, and the grounds on which it appears to him that the memorandum ought not to be recorded.

(4) If on consideration of the registrar's report it appears to the judge that the memorandum may properly be recorded, he may so direct, and it shall be recorded accordingly.

(5) If on consideration of the registrar's report it appears to the judge that the memorandum should not be recorded without further inquiry, the registrar shall send notice to the parties interested according to the form in the Appendix, informing them that he has referred the matter to the judge, and requiring them to attend on a day to be named in the notice, when the matter will be heard and inquired into by the judge. Form 42.

(6) The notices shall be sent to the parties interested or their solicitors ten clear days at least before the day fixed for the inquiry, unless the judge directs shorter notice to be given.

(7) At the hearing witnesses may be orally examined in the same manner as on the hearing of an action. The judge may also at or for the purpose of the hearing give such directions as he may think just, and in particular he may in the case of a lump sum agreement exercise the powers conferred upon him by sub-section (3) of section 23 of the Act, whether the same have already been exercised by the registrar or not.

(8) The judge may at or after the hearing either direct the memorandum to be recorded or confirm the refusal of the registrar to record it or make such other order as he may under the circumstances think just.

(10) Further in the event of the parties or either of them failing to comply with any requirement of the registrar under sub-section (3) of section 23 of the Act the registrar may in accordance with such sub-section refuse to record the memorandum and refer the matter to the judge who shall have power to make such order as he may in the circumstances think just.

Rule 51.

(11) The costs to be allowed under sub-section (5) of section 23 of the Act on taxation of the solicitor's bill to be submitted to the registrar if directed by him shall be such costs as shall be considered reasonable according to such scale as he may direct or the scale applicable to the amount of the compensation and the amount of any reduction from the bill shall be applied and dealt with by the judge as provided by that sub-section.

(12) If any party interested desires to receive notice by post of the fact and date when a memorandum of agreement is recorded, he may send to the registrar a prepaid postcard addressed to himself and containing on the back the name of the Court, the name and number of the matter, and the words 'The above matter sent for registration was duly recorded on the

' a blank being left for the date and the Registrar's signature; and if he does so, the registrar shall fill in the date of registration and sign and post the postcard as soon as may be after the memorandum has been recorded.

(13) Every order for the investment or application of money paid into court shall reserve liberty to the parties interested to apply to the court as they may be advised.

(14) Where any sum allotted to any person under the second schedule to the Act or this rule is ordered to be paid out to or applied for the benefit of the person entitled thereto by weekly or other periodical payments, such payments may be made to the person entitled to receive the same either at the office of the registrar, or, on the written request of such person, by crossed cheque or postal order addressed to such person and forwarded by registered post letter, payment by post being in all cases at the cost and risk of the person requesting the same.

Form 55.

(3) On the payment of money into court under this rule the registrar shall make such inquiries and obtain such information as he may think necessary to satisfy himself whether the amount paid in is adequate in the circumstances of the case; and it shall be the duty of the employer and of the persons interested in the money paid in to answer such inquiries and give such information accordingly.

(4) Where it appears to the registrar that the amount paid in is adequate, he shall forthwith send by post to each of the persons appearing by the præcipe to be interested in such money a notice of the said payment according to the form in the Appendix. Form 53 (ii.). Provided that in the case of infant dependants residing with their mother or guardian it shall be sufficient to send such notice to the mother or guardian only.

(5) Where it appears to the registrar that the amount paid in Rule 61. is inadequate, he shall make a report to the judge in writing, stating the information he has obtained and the grounds on which it appears to him that the amount paid in is inadequate.

(6) If on consideration of the registrar's report it appears to the judge that the amount paid in is adequate, he may direct the registrar to send to the parties interested notice of payment in accordance with paragraph 4 of this rule.

(7) If on consideration of the registrar's report it appears to the judge that further inquiry should be made, the registrar shall send notice to the employer and to the parties appearing by the præcipe to be interested in the money paid into court, according to the form in the Appendix, informing them that he has referred the matter to the judge, and requiring them to attend on a day to be named in the notice, when the matter will be inquired into by the judge. On such inquiry the judge may make such order (including an order as to the money paid into court) as under the circumstances he may think just; and paragraphs 7, 8, and 10 of rule 51 shall apply.

Form 57.

(8) Where notice of payment into court is sent in accordance with paragraph 4 or paragraph 6 of this rule, then—

(a) If any question arises as to the adequacy of the amount paid into court, the question as to the amount payable as compensation, and all questions as to who are dependants and the amount payable to each dependant, shall be settled by arbitration in accordance with the Act and these rules; and the amount allotted to each dependant shall be invested, applied, or otherwise dealt with by the court for the benefit of the person entitled thereto in accordance with paragraph 1 of the second schedule to the Act and paragraphs 9 to 11, 13 and 14 of the last preceding rule.

(b) If no question arises as to the adequacy of the amount paid into court, the amount paid into court shall be allotted, invested, applied, or otherwise dealt with by the court in accordance with paragraphs 8 to 11, 13 and 14 of the last preceding rule.

(9) An employer paying money into court under this rule shall not (except under paragraph 10 of rule 51, or where a question arises as to the adequacy of the amount paid in, and such question is decided adversely to the employer by arbitration under paragraph 8 of this rule), be liable to any costs incurred by any person interested in such money after receipt of notice of payment into court; but the judge may, in his discretion, order such employer to pay the costs of any such person properly incurred before the receipt of such notice.

These rules provide that where the employer admits his liability to pay compensation, but the amount payable has not been ascertained, he may pay into court the amount which he admits to be payable by him, and so avoid the delay and expense of arbitration.

Where this is done, the procedure will be as follows:—

- (a) The employer will pay into court the amount which he admits to be payable by him.
- (b) It will then be the duty of the registrar to make inquiries, which inquiry does not authorise him to see the doctor's evidence obtained by the employer, it being clearly privileged (Johnson v. Oceanic S. N. Co., 5 B. 322), in order to satisfy himself that the amount paid in is adequate. If he thinks that it is, notice of payment into court will be given to the dependants. If he is not satisfied as to the adequacy of the amount, he will refer the matter to the judge, who, if he thinks the amount is adequate, will direct notice of payment to be given to the dependants, or if he thinks that further inquiry should be made, will give directions for such further inquiry in accordance with Rule 51.
- (c) Where notice of payment into court is given to the dependants, then, if they are not satisfied with the amount so paid, they will be entitled to have the amount payable settled by arbitration.
- (d) If they are satisfied with the amount paid in, they will be able to apply to the court in a summary manner for the apportionment and investment, etc., of the amount paid in.
- (e) The employer will not be liable to costs after notice of the payment into court, otherwise than on an inquiry into the adequacy of the amount (Rule 51, par. 9), or unless the question as to the adequacy of the amount paid into court is decided adversely to him by arbitration.

This rule was introduced and Rule 60 amended in consequence of the decision of the Court of Appeal in Rhodes v. The Soothill Colliery Co., Ltd., (1909) 1 K. B. 191.

Here the Master of the Rolls said that though in the case of a person under disability there could be no absolute agreement, there might be, according to the familiar practice in Chancery, a so-called conditional agreement, which was not operative unless and until it was approved by the court on behalf of the infants. An analogous procedure was provided for under the Workmen's Compensation Act, it being the duty of the registrar to look into the matter on behalf of the infants. If he did not express dissent, he must be taken to be satisfied with the fairness of the agreement, and the only event in which it could be reviewed not having happened, it became binding.

62.—(1) Where a claim for compensation has been made by or on behalf of dependants, and the employer denies liability, but is willing to pay an amount in settlement of the claim, and such of the dependants as are not under disability are willing to accept such amount in settlement, the employer may pay such amount into the court to which, if an agreement had been come to in the matter, a memorandum of such agreement would be sent to be recorded.

(2) Where money is to be paid into court under this rule, the employer shall lodge with the registrar a præcipe in duplicate according to the form in the Appendix, containing a statement of the particulars mentioned in that form. The employer shall annex to one copy of the præcipe a form of receipt according to the said form, and the registrar on receipt of the sum paid in shall sign the receipt and return the same to the employer; and the employer shall forthwith give notice to the persons interested in the sum paid in of such payment having been made.

(3) On the payment of money into court under this rule, the registrar shall proceed according to paragraph 3 of the last preceding rule, and the provisions of that rule shall apply to proceedings subsequent to such payment.

SETTING ASIDE AWARD OR ORDER IMPROPERLY OBTAINED.

85.—(1) An application for a new trial may be made and a new trial may be granted in an arbitration in accordance with the provisions of rule 29.

Application for new trial in arbitration.

The power to make rules authorising the judge to grant a new trial in a workmen's compensation arbitration is derived from the County Courts Act, 1919, s. 25 (now schedule I. (6) of the Act of 1925).

(2) Where the judge is satisfied—

- (a) that any award, or any order as to the application of any amount awarded or agreed upon as compensation, made by the judge or by an arbitrator appointed by him, has been obtained by fraud or other improper means; or
- (b) that any person has been included in any award or order as a dependant who is not in fact a dependant as defined by the Act; or

When award or order may be set aside or varied.

- (c) that any person who is in fact a dependant as defined by the Act has been omitted from any award or order, the judge may set aside or vary the award or order, and may make such order (including an order as to any sum already paid under the award or order) as under the circumstances he may think just.

A county court judge has no power under the above sub-section to set aside or vary any award, except one made by himself or by an arbitrator appointed by him. He cannot set aside or vary an award made by a committee (Blakey v. Samuelson & Co., Ltd., (1920) 3 K. B. 505).

(3) An application to set aside or vary an award or order under this rule shall be made in court on notice in writing, and the provisions of rule 50 shall apply to the proceedings on such application.

Rule 85.

(4) An application to set aside or vary an award or order under this rule shall not be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the award or order, except by leave of the judge; and such leave shall not be granted unless the judge is satisfied that the failure to make the application within such period was occasioned by mistake, absence from the United Kingdom, or other reasonable cause.

APPEALS.

Appeals.
Act, Sched. I.
par. 4.

86. Appeals under paragraph 4 of the first schedule to the Act shall be had in accordance with the provisions of the Rules of the Supreme Court relating thereto.

Order LVIII.
rule 20.

The High Court Rules, Order LVIII. r. 20, governing such appeals, are as follows:—

The following provisions shall apply to appeals to the Court of Appeal from decisions of judges of the county courts on questions of law under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906:—

- (a) Every such appeal shall be by notice of motion in accordance with Order LIX. Rule 10; and such notice of motion shall be served, and the appeal set down under Order LVIII. Rule 8, within the time limited by Order LIX. Rule 12.
- (b) It shall be the duty of the party appealing to apply to the judge of the county court for a signed copy of the note made by him of any question of law raised before him, and of the facts in evidence in relation thereto and of his decision thereon, and of his decision on the question or matter submitted to him, and to furnish such copy for the use of the Court of Appeal; and such copy shall be used and received at the hearing of the appeal. If such notes are not produced, the Court of Appeal shall have power to hear and determine the appeal upon any other evidence or statement of what occurred before the judge of the county court, which the Court of Appeal may deem sufficient.
- (c) Order LIX. Rules 14 and 16, shall apply to any such appeal, with substitution of the Court of Appeal for the High Court.
- (d) Subject to the foregoing provisions, the rules for the time being in force with respect to appeals from the High Court to the Court of Appeal, shall, so far as practicable, apply to and govern appeals under the said Act to the Court of Appeal.

Parties should note there are three judges in the court, each of whom needs a copy of all material documents (Birks v. Stafford Coal and Iron Co., (1913) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 755).

The obtaining and filing of a copy of the judge's note is not a condition precedent to the entering of an appeal (Aston Coal Co., Ltd. v. Stancil (No. 1), (1927) 96 L. J. K. B. 254; 20 B. W. C. C. 198).

rule 10.

Every such appeal shall be by notice of motion, and no rule nisi or order to show cause shall be necessary. The notice of motion shall state the grounds of the appeal, and whether all or part only of the judgment, order, or finding is complained of. The notice of motion shall be an eight days' notice, and shall be served on every party directly affected by the appeal entered.

Order LVIII.
rule 8.

The party appealing from a judgment or order shall produce to the proper officer of the Court of Appeal the judgment or order or an office copy thereof, and shall leave with him a copy of the notice of appeal to be filed, and such officer shall thereupon set down the appeal by entering the same in the proper list of appeals, and it shall come on to be heard according to its order in such list, unless the Court of Appeal or a judge thereof shall otherwise direct, but so as not to come into the paper for hearing before the day named in the notice of appeal.

Rule 83
Notes.

The notice of motion shall be served, and the appeal entered within twenty-one days from the date of the judgment, order, or finding complained of: such period shall be calculated from the time at which the judgment or order is signed, entered, or otherwise perfected, or from the time at which the finding or any refusal is made or given. And in case of appeals under the Act from the actual signing of the award (Clayton v Jones, (1908) W. N. 253). Where there were two sets of proceedings really in the same matter employers were held entitled to appeal against both, being within twenty-one days of the later decision (Fox v. Battersea, etc., 4 B. 261).

Order LIX.
rule 12.

The appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under the decision appealed from unless the inferior court shall so order, or unless within ten days after the decision a deposit shall be made of or security given to the satisfaction of such inferior court for a sum to be fixed by the said court, not exceeding the amount of the money or the value of the property affected by the judgment, order, or finding appealed from.

Order LIX.
rule 14.

Order LIX.
rule 16.

The High Court shall have power to extend the time for appealing, or to amend the grounds of appeal, or to make any other order, on such terms as the court shall think just, to ensure the determination on the merits of the real questions in controversy between the parties.

The fee on entering an appeal is 2*l*.

The general rule of the High Court declared in Order XIX. r. 7 that the judgment of an inferior court is not set aside unless substantial wrong or miscarriage resulted applies to compensation appeals (Walthew v. Muirhead, 19 B. W. C. C. 25).

87.—(1) When the Court of Appeal has given judgment on any appeal the successful party in such appeal shall deposit the order of the Court of Appeal, or an office copy thereof, with the registrar: and the registrar shall file such order or copy, and shall transmit a copy thereof to the judge: and such order shall have the same effect as if it had been a decision of the judge.

thereon.

(2) If such order has the effect of an award, decision, or order in the matter in favour of any party, such order shall be served and recorded, and may be proceeded on, in the same manner as if it had been an award, decision, or order of the judge.

(3) If such order be to the effect that an award be made or a decision given or order made in favour of any party, the judge shall make such award or give such decision or make such order accordingly.

(4) If such order directs or involves a re-hearing or further hearing of an arbitration or special case or other matter, the judge shall as soon as conveniently may be appoint a day and hour for such re-hearing or further hearing, and shall instruct the registrar to give notice thereof forthwith to the parties.

(5) Generally the judge shall make such award or give such decision or make such order and give such directions and take or direct to be taken such proceedings in the matter, as may be necessary to give effect to the order of the Court of Appeal.

(a) No sickness benefit or disablement benefit shall be paid to the insured person in respect of that injury or disease in any case where any weekly sum or the weekly value of any lump sum paid or payable by way of compensation or damages is equal to or greater than the benefit otherwise payable to that person unless and except so far as such weekly or lump sum is irrecoverable, and where any such weekly sum or the weekly value of any such lump sum is less than the benefit in question, such part only of the benefit shall be paid as, together with the weekly sum or the weekly value of the lump sum if and so far as such weekly or lump sum is recoverable, will be equal to the benefit:

(b) The weekly value of any such lump sum as aforesaid may, subject to the provisions of this Act relating to the decision of disputes between insured persons and approved societies or insurance committees, be determined by the society or committee by which the sickness and disablement benefits payable to the insured person are administered :

(c) Repealed by National Health Insurance Act, 1928.

Payments taken into account in computing benefit.

(2) Where an insured person has recovered compensation in respect of any injury or disease and in fixing the amount of the weekly payment regard was had to any such payment, allowance or benefit as is mentioned in paragraph (3) of the First Schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (b), or where an insured person who is entitled to receive or recover, but has not received or recovered, any such compensation is in receipt of any such payment, allowance or benefit, as aforesaid, the weekly value of that payment, allowance or benefit, as determined by the society or committee, or in the case of a dispute as determined in manner provided by this Act, shall, in computing under the foregoing subsection of this section what part of the benefit is to be paid to the insured person, be added to the weekly sum payable by way of compensation or be treated as being a weekly sum payable by way of compensation, as the case may be, and taken into account accordingly :

Provided that no account shall be taken of any such payment, allowance or benefit so far as the weekly value thereof together with the weekly sum, if any, or the weekly value of the lump sum, if any, paid or payable by way of compensation, exceeds the amount of the weekly payment which the insured person would, if there had been no such payment, allowance or benefit, have been entitled to receive or recover by way of compensation under the said Act.

Consequences of neglect to enforce claim.

(3) Where an insured person appears to be entitled to any such compensation or damages as aforesaid and unreasonably refuses or neglects to take proceedings to enforce his claim, it shall be lawful for the society or committee concerned, either—

(a) at its own expense, to take such proceedings in the name and on behalf of the insured person, in which case any compensation or damages recovered shall be held by the society or committee as trustee for the insured person ; or

(b) to withhold payment of any benefit to which but for this section the insured person would be entitled.

In the event of the society or committee concerned taking proceedings as aforesaid and failing in the proceedings, it shall be responsible for the costs of the proceedings as if it were claiming on its own account.

(4) Nothing in this section shall prevent the society or committee from paying benefit to an insured person by way of advance pending the settlement of his claim for compensation or damages, and any advance so made shall, without prejudice to any other method of recovery, be recoverable by deductions from or suspension of any benefits which may subsequently become payable to the insured person.

Section 16.

Benefit payable in advance.

(5) Where any society or committee in pursuance of the last preceding subsection has made or intends to make advances to an insured person the society or committee may give notice thereof in the prescribed form to the person liable to pay the Compensation or damages, and if such notice is given the person so liable shall, notwithstanding anything in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c), on demand and on being furnished with the prescribed proof of the amount of the advances made, repay to the society or committee, up to the amount which he is liable to pay as compensation or damages, less such part, if any, of that amount as he has already duly paid at the time of receiving the notice aforesaid, the amount advanced, and the receipt of the society or committee shall up to the amount of the repayment, be a full and valid discharge to him in respect of the compensation or damages payable by him to the insured person :

Repayment by person liable for compensation.

Provided that, if the person so liable to pay compensation or damages gives to the society or committee by which such notice as aforesaid is given notice in the prescribed form that he intends to pay or that he has paid compensation or damages, he shall not be under any obligation to make any repayment in respect of any advance made after the date of the payment of the compensation or damages or after the time at which the notice so given by him is received by the society or committee, whichever is the later.

For the purposes of this subsection a person against whom a claim for damages or compensation has been made shall be deemed to be a person liable to pay compensation or damages if he has agreed to pay a sum in composition of the claim, notwithstanding that he does not admit liability, and the sum payable under the agreement shall be deemed to be compensation or damages.

1. In these regulations—
 - (i.) "Act" means the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.
 - (ii.) "Workman" means a workman as defined in section 13 of the Act.
 - (iii.) "Certifying surgeon" means either the certifying surgeon mentioned in sub-section (1) (i.) of section 8 of the Act, or a medical practitioner appointed by the Secretary of State under sub-section (5) of section 8 to have the powers and duties of a certifying surgeon under the said section.
 - (iv.) "Appointed surgeon" means a surgeon having power, in pursuance of any special rules or regulations made under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, to suspend a workman from employment in the process or processes specified in such rules or regulations.

by the Secretary of State to act as medical referee for the purposes of section 8 of the Act.

- (vi.) The words "disease to which the Act applies" mean a disease mentioned in the third schedule to the Act or a disease or injury (not being an injury by accident) to which the provisions of section 8 of the Act have been extended by an Order made by the Secretary of State under sub-section (6) of that section.

2. Where a workman applies to a certifying surgeon for a certificate (hereinafter called "a certificate of disablement") that he is suffering from a disease to which the Act applies, and is thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed, the certifying surgeon, on payment of the prescribed fee, and after obtaining the particulars specified in the schedule to these regulations and such further information, if any, respecting the case as in the particular circumstances he may deem necessary, shall either proceed at once, if the application is made by the workman in person, to make a medical examination of the workman, or shall appoint forthwith a time and place for making such examination, and give notice thereof to the workman. Such notice, if given in writing, shall follow, as closely as may be, the form prescribed in the schedule. Form 1.

3. After personally examining the workman, the certifying surgeon shall either give the workman a certificate of disablement or shall certify that he is not satisfied that the workman is entitled to such certificate, and shall in either case deliver his certificate to the workman. The certificate given shall be in the form prescribed in the schedule to these regulations. Forms 3 and 5.

Not satisfied: See notes to section 8, ante.

4. Where, in pursuance of any special rules or regulations made under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, the certifying or appointed surgeon, after having personally examined a workman, suspends him from his usual employment on account of his having contracted any disease to which the Act applies, or where in the case of a workman applying to be suspended on account of his having contracted any such disease, the surgeon as aforesaid, after having personally examined such workman, refuses to order his suspension, he shall, on the application either of the employer or of the workman, and on payment of the prescribed fee, certify such suspension or refusal to suspend in accordance with the form prescribed in the schedule to these regulations, and shall deliver such certificate to the applicant. Forms 6 and 8.

5. Where a certificate of disablement is given or a workman is suspended, and the case is one in which, under the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 8 of the Act as extended by any order of the Secretary of State made under sub-section (6) of the said section, the disease contracted by the workman will be deemed, unless the employer proves, or the certifying surgeon certifies, to the contrary, to have been due to the nature of the employment in the process in which at or immediately before the date of the disablement or suspension the workman was employed, the certifying surgeon, if he is of opinion that the disease contracted by the workman was not due to the nature of such employment,

and 7.

shall certify accordingly. Such certificate shall, where possible, be given simultaneously with, and included in, the certificate of disablement or the certificate (if any) of suspension, but may also be given separately on application by the employer and on payment of the prescribed fee; and in either case shall follow the form prescribed in the schedule to these regulations.

For the purposes of this regulation an appointed surgeon shall have the same powers and duties as a certifying surgeon.

6. A copy of any certificate given by a certifying or appointed surgeon under the foregoing regulations shall, together with any other documents relating to the case, be retained and kept by the surgeon; and copies of any such certificate shall, on payment of the prescribed fee, be supplied by the surgeon to the employer and the workman.

7. The fees which the certifying and appointed surgeons shall be entitled to charge in respect of duties performed under section 8 of the Act shall be as follows:—

(a) in cases where the medical examination of the workman is made by the surgeon in the performance of his duties under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, a fee of 1s.;

(b) In all other cases, a fee of 5s., and where the workman is unable to present himself for examination at the residence of, or other nearer place fixed by, the certifying surgeon, for every mile or portion thereof which the certifying surgeon is required to travel therefrom for the purpose of examining the workman, an additional fee of 1s.

(ii.) For any certificate of suspension or refusal to suspend, under regulation 4, when the medical examination of the workman is made in pursuance of any special rules or regulations under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, a fee of 1s.

(iii.) For a copy of any certificate obtained under regulation 6, a fee of 1s.

REFERENCES TO MEDICAL REFEREES.

8. Where the employer or workman is aggrieved by the action of a certifying or appointed surgeon in giving or refusing to give a certificate of disablement or in suspending or refusing to suspend a workman, he may—

- (a) if he is an employer, within ten (a) days of the receipt of the notice of disablement or suspension required to be given under the Act, or, in a case of disablement, if the notice is not accompanied by the certificate of the surgeon, or a copy thereof, and the employer forthwith requires the workman to furnish him with a copy, within ten (a) days of the receipt of such copy, or
- (b) if he is a workman, within ten (a) days of the date on which the surgeon has refused to give him a certificate of disablement or suspension, apply to the registrar of the county court for the district in which the workman was employed at the time of his examination by the surgeon, for the matter to be referred to a medical referee; provided that it shall be within the discretion of the registrar, on good cause shown, to extend in any case by not more than seven days the period within which an application is required to be made.

See Turton v. East Barnsley Colliery, Ltd., (1921) 1 K. B. 369.

9.—(a) Any application under the foregoing regulation shall be made in writing, and shall state the grounds on which the reference is asked for, in accordance with the form prescribed in the schedule to these regulations, or as near thereto as may be. Forms 9 and 10.

(b) The application shall be accompanied by the certificate or a copy of the certificate obtained from the surgeon by whose action the applicant is aggrieved, and by any available report or reports of any medical practitioner by whom the workman has been examined; and if the applicant is an employer, by the notice of disablement or suspension served on him by the workman, and by an undertaking to pay any reasonable travelling expenses incurred by the workman in attending for examination by the medical referee.

(c) The applicant shall also file with the registrar such copies of the application and other documents as aforesaid as may be necessary for the use of the medical referee and of the employer or workman, as the case may be, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, who together with the applicant is directly interested in the application.

(d) In the event of any dispute as to the amount of the travelling expenses payable to the workman by the employer, the matter may be referred to the registrar, whose decision shall be final.

10. It shall be the duty of the registrar on receiving an application to satisfy himself that it is duly made in accordance with the foregoing regulations, and if it is not, to return it for amendment. If and when the application is in accordance with the regulations, he shall refer the matter forthwith to a medical referee, and shall forward to such medical referee by registered post one of the copies of the application and the other documents filed therewith, with an order of reference according to the form prescribed in the schedule. Form 11.

11. The registrar shall also make an order directing the workman to submit himself for examination by the medical referee. Before making such order the registrar shall inquire whether the workman is in a fit condition to travel for the purpose of examination, and if satisfied that he is in a fit condition shall by the order direct him to attend at such place as the referee may fix, and if satisfied that he is not in a fit condition to travel, shall so state in the order of reference; and it shall be the duty of the workman, on being served with the order, to submit himself for examination accordingly.

12. The registrar shall deliver or send by registered post to both parties a copy of the order of reference, and shall also send to the respondent copies of the other documents forwarded to the medical referee, and shall send to the workman a copy of the order directing him to submit himself for examination.

13. In the case of any reference under these Regulations the medical referee shall, except as hereinafter provided, be one of those appointed by the Secretary of State for the district in which the case arises. Provided that—

- (a) if a medical referee has been specially appointed by the Secretary of State for the purpose of deciding in any specified case or class of cases arising in the district in which a reference may be made under these Regulations, the reference in any such case shall be made to the medical referee so appointed;
- (b) the judge may, in any particular case where for special reasons he thinks fit, direct that the reference shall be sent to any referee appointed for any other district within the county court circuit whom he may select;
- (c) if the surgeon by whose action the applicant is aggrieved has been appointed a medical referee, the reference shall not be made to him but to such other medical referee as may be authorised to act. [1923, Reg. 2.]

14. The medical referee shall, on receipt of an order of reference duly signed by the registrar of a county court, together with copies of the documents required to be sent therewith, fix a time and a place for a personal examination of the workman, and shall send notice to the employer and workman accordingly. It shall be the duty of the workman, and, if the employer is the applicant, of the employer or a person duly authorised by him, to attend at the time and place fixed by the medical referee, and in the event of failure on the part of the workman or employer or both to appear as required by this regulation, the medical referee shall decide on the matter referred to him forthwith upon such information as shall be available and with or without a personal examination. Provided that where the absence of the employer or his representative or of the workman is shown to the satisfaction of the medical referee to be unavoidable, or where the medical referee considers it necessary to apply for expert assistance as hereinafter provided, it shall be open to him to adjourn the inquiry on the reference and to resume it at such time and place as he may fix, after giving due notice to all parties concerned.

See Chuter v. Ford & Sons, (1915) 2 K. B. 113; 8 B. W. C. C. 160.

15. Except as otherwise provided by regulation 14, the medical referee shall, before deciding on the matter referred to him, make a personal examination of the workman, and shall consider any statements made or submitted by either party.

16. The medical referee shall, in such one of the forms prescribed in the schedule hereto as may be appropriate, notify in writing his decision to the registrar of the county court, to the applicant, and to the respondent, and give a certificate (as required by section 11 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923) as to the condition of the workman at the time of his examination.
17. The medical referee shall send to the Home Office at the end of each quarter a statement (accompanied by any vouchers necessary) in the form prescribed in the schedule to these regulations, of the fees due to him for the quarter under these regulations. Form 16.
18. The following fees and allowances are authorised to be paid to medical referees under these regulations:—
- (i.) For deciding the matter referred to him in any reference and for all duties performed in connection therewith, 2 guineas.
 - (ii.) Where in order to examine the workman the medical referee is compelled to travel to a place distant more than 2 miles from his residence or such other centre as may be prescribed by the Secretary of State, in addition to the above fee, 5s. for each mile beyond two, and up to ten, miles distant from such residence or centre, and thereafter 1s. for each mile distant therefrom.
 - (iii.) In cases involving special difficulty the medical referee may apply for special expert assistance which may be granted by the Secretary of State if he thinks fit, on such terms as to remuneration or otherwise as he may with the sanction of the Treasury determine.
19. In cases where a claim is made under regulation 18 (ii.) in respect of an examination of a workman, the medical referee, in submitting his quarterly statement under regulation 17, shall certify the distance of the place where the examination was made from his residence or other prescribed centre.
20. The registrar of a county court shall keep a record, in the form prescribed in the schedule, of all references made by him under these regulations, and shall send the same to the Secretary of State at the end of each quarter. Form 17.
21. These regulations shall come into force on the 1st day of July, 1907, and shall apply to England and Wales.

2. A workman in receipt of weekly payments shall not be required, after a period of one month has elapsed from the date on which the first payment of compensation was made, or if the first payment is made in obedience to the award of a committee or arbitrator, from the date of the award, to submit himself, against his will, for examination by a medical practitioner provided by the employer except at the following intervals: Once a week during the second, and once a month during the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth months, after the date of the first payment or the award, as the case may be, and thereafter once in every two months.

ORDER IN COUNCIL GIVING EFFECT TO THE CONVENTION BETWEEN HIS MAJESTY AND THE PRESIDENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC BY MODIFYING THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1906 (6 EDW. VII., c. 58), IN ITS APPLICATION TO WORKMEN WHO ARE FRENCH CITIZENS.

(Dated November 22nd, 1909.)

Note.—A general power to make Orders in Council for giving effect to conventions with foreign States is now given by sect. 37 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925. As a result of this power the Workmen's Compensation (Anglo-French Convention) Act, 1909, became useless and was repealed by Sched. IV. of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, but the Order in Council made thereunder is still in force (see sect. 50 (2)).

A convention between the United Kingdom and Denmark has been concluded, and has been given effect by an Order in Council under sect. 37.

The text of the Convention and the Order in Council are set out in Appendix FF.

Whereas His Majesty the King and the President of the French Republic have concluded a Convention, to the effect that their respective subjects and citizens shall enjoy reciprocally the benefits of the legislation in force in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and France respectively, in regard to compensation for accidents arising out of their employment:

And whereas by section 1 of the Workmen's Compensation (Anglo-French Convention) Act, 1909, it is provided that His Majesty may, by Order in Council, make such modifications in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in its application to workmen who are French citizens, as appear to Him to be necessary to give effect to the said Convention:

Now, therefore, in pursuance of the powers vested in Him by the above-mentioned provisions of the Workmen's Compensation (Anglo-French Convention) Act, 1909, His Majesty is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order and prescribe as follows :—

The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, hereinafter referred to as the Act, shall in the case of workmen who are French citizens apply subject to the following modifications :—

(1) An employer having his principal place of business in France shall not be liable to pay compensation under the Act for injury to a workman who is a French citizen by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment—

- (i.) if the workman has been temporarily detached for employment in the United Kingdom, and such employment has at the time of the accident lasted less than six months ;
- (ii.) if the workman is engaged in transport service and is employed at intervals whether regular or not in the United Kingdom.

(2) In all cases the question as to the liability to pay compensation under the Act to a French citizen and as to the amount or duration of such compensation, including the question of the redemption of weekly payments, and in cases of death the question as to who is a dependant and as to the amount payable to each dependant, shall be settled by the judge of the county court and in no other manner.

(3) Where a weekly payment payable to a French citizen has been redeemed by the payment of a lump sum of such amount as would, if invested in the purchase of an immediate life annuity from the National Debt Commissioners through the Post Office Savings Bank, purchase an annuity for the workman of upwards of four pounds, the lump sum shall be paid into the county court and invested in the purchase of an annuity for the benefit of the workman.

(4) Where a lump sum payable either in the redemption of a weekly payment or as compensation to the dependants of a deceased workman has been paid into the county court, then :—

- (a) if the workman returns to reside in France ; or
- (b) if the dependants resided in France at the time of the death of the workman, or subsequently return to reside in France, the total sum due to the injured workman or his dependants shall be transferred to the "Caisse Nationale Française des Retraites pour la Vieillesse."

(5) Where a workman receiving a weekly payment returns to reside in France, the amount due by way of weekly payments shall, notwithstanding anything in paragraph 18 of the first schedule to the Act, be remitted to him through the county court at such intervals and in such manner as may be agreed upon between the Secretary of State and such persons as the President of the French Republic may authorise for the purpose.

(6) No court fee or other charge shall be payable in the case of a workman who is a French citizen in respect of any proceedings under the Act in the county court, whether under paragraph (15) of the first schedule to that Act, or subsequent to the award, or otherwise.

(7) The registrar of every county court shall, not later than the 31st January in each year, send to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, in a form prescribed by him, a record of all judicial decisions given in the course of the preceding year under the Act in the case of French citizens, and the said Secretary of State shall cause such record to be communicated to the "Département du Travail et de la Prévoyance Sociale."

(8) The power of making rules under the Act shall include a power to make such rules as may be necessary for the purpose of carrying this Order into effect.

(9) In Scotland references to the sheriff court shall be substituted for references to the county court, reference to the sheriff for reference to the judge of the county court, and reference to the sheriff clerk for reference to the registrar of the county court.

(10) This Order shall apply to all accidents happening on and after the date on which the Convention takes effect, and shall cease to have effect on the expiration of one year from the date on which the Convention shall have been denounced by one or other of the two contracting parties.

See W. C. Rules framed to give effect to this Convention, rules 68—75.

APPENDIX FF.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED KINGDOM AND DENMARK RESPECTING COMPENSATION TO WORKMEN FOR ACCIDENTS ARISING OUT OF THEIR EMPLOYMENT.

(Signed at London, November 18, 1925, and ratified April 5, 1927.)

1. Workmen being British subjects who meet with accidents arising out of their employment in Denmark, and any persons, being British subjects who are entitled to claim through or have rights derivable from such workmen, shall enjoy the benefits of the compensation and guarantees secured to Danish subjects by the legislation in force in Denmark in regard to the liability of employers and their insurers in respect of such accidents, supplemented as specified in article 4.

Reciprocally, workmen being Danish subjects who meet with accidents arising out of their employment in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, and any persons being Danish subjects who are entitled to claim through or have rights derivable from such workmen, shall enjoy the benefits of the compensation and guarantees secured to British subjects by the legislation in force in Great Britain and Northern Ireland in regard to compensation for such accidents, supplemented as specified in article 4.

2. The British and Danish authorities will reciprocally lend their good offices to facilitate the administration of their respective laws as aforesaid.

3. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at London as soon as possible.

It shall be applicable in Denmark and in Great Britain and Northern Ireland to all accidents happening after one month from the time of its publication in the two countries in the manner prescribed by their respective laws, and it shall remain binding until the expiration of one year from the date on which it shall have been denounced by one or other of the two contracting parties.

4. Nevertheless, the ratification mentioned in the preceding article shall not take place till the legislation at present in force in Great Britain and Northern Ireland in regard to workmen's compensation has been supplemented, so far as concerns accidents to Danish subjects arising out of their employment as workmen, by arrangements to the following effect :—

- (a) That the compensation payable shall in every case be fixed by an award of the county court.
- (b) That the county courts shall, for the purpose of proceedings by or on behalf of dependants of Danish workmen under "The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906," and amending Acts, such dependants being resident in Denmark, have power to issue letters of request for the examination of witnesses resident in Denmark, and that the statements of such witnesses made and authenticated as hereinafter provided in answer to any such letter of request shall be admissible in evidence in lieu of oral testimony by such witnesses.
- (c) That the county courts shall, for the purposes of claims to compensation by the dependants of British workmen under the Danish Accident Insurance Law, have power to examine on oath witnesses within the jurisdiction of such courts and to reduce to writing and duly authenticate for transmission to Denmark the statements of witnesses so examined.
- (d) That in respect of acts done by the county court in pursuance of the legislation in regard to workmen's compensation as well as the execution of the present convention, workmen who are Danish subjects, or their dependants, shall be exempt from court fees in respect of all proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Acts by way of arbitration or otherwise in connection with the settlement of any claim or other matter arising under those Acts.
- (e) That at the beginning of each year His Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department will send to the Ministry of Social Affairs in Denmark a record of all judicial decisions given in the course of the preceding year under the legislation in regard to workmen's compensation in the case of Danish subjects injured by accident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland.

And reciprocally, before such ratification as aforesaid, the Danish Government will, so far as concerns accidents to British subjects within the Danish Accident Insurance Law, make all such arrangements as are necessary to ensure :

- (f) That in proceedings for compensation under the Danish Accident Insurance Law by or on behalf of dependants of British workmen, such dependants being resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, statements of witnesses resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland made on oath and reduced to writing in the county court shall in Denmark be admissible as evidence of the facts therein contained.
- (g) That letters of request issued by a county court in Great Britain or Northern Ireland shall be received by the Danish Workers' Insurance Council and by them transmitted to the appropriate court of first instance, by which tribunal the necessary examination of witnesses will be made on oath, and the statements of such witnesses will be authenticated for transmission to the county court by which the letter of request was issued.
- (h) That in respect of all acts done by the Danish Workers' Insurance Council in pursuance of the legislation in regard to accident insurance, as well as in the execution of the present convention, workmen who are British subjects, or their dependants, shall be exempt from fees in respect of the examination of cases by the aforesaid council and the submission of any such cases to the Ministry of Social Affairs.
- (i) That at the beginning of each year the Danish Government will cause to be sent to His Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department a record of all cases dealt with during the course of the preceding year, under the legislation in regard to accident insurance in the case of British subjects injured by accident in Denmark.

5. The present convention shall not be applicable in respect of laws that are, or may at any future time be, in force in Great Britain and Northern Ireland and Denmark, relating to increased compensation for seamen in cases of accidents resulting from a state of war.

ORDER IN COUNCIL UNDER SECTION 37 OF THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1925 (15 & 16 GEO. 5, C. 84.)

(Dated June 1st, 1926.)

Whereas His Majesty the King and His Majesty the King of Denmark and Iceland have concluded a convention to provide for and facilitate the reciprocal enjoyment by their respective subjects and citizens of the benefits of the legislation in force in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and in Denmark respectively, in regard to compensation for accidents rising out of their employment :

And whereas effect cannot be given to the said convention unless and until certain arrangements have been made by His Majesty's Government and by the Danish Government, which arrangements involve certain modifications of the law at present in force in Great Britain and Northern Ireland in regard to workmen's compensation :

And whereas it is provided by sect. 37 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, that for the purpose of giving effect to any convention with a foreign State providing for reciprocity in matters relating to compensation to workmen for injuries by accident, His Majesty may, by Order in Council, make provision—

- (a) for modifying that Act, and the enactments regulating the payment of compensation to workmen for injuries by accident for the time being in force in Northern Ireland, in their application to cases affected by the said convention, so, however, as not to alter the amount of compensation in any case to which those Acts may apply ;
- (b) for determining, in cases where rights to compensation accrue both under the Acts referred to in paragraph (a) hereof and under the law of the State with which the convention is made, under the law of which country the workman shall be entitled to recover compensation ;
- (c) for conferring on county courts powers for the admission of evidence taken abroad and the procuring and taking of evidence for use abroad, or otherwise for the purpose of facilitating proceedings for the recovery of compensation under the respective laws of the two countries.

Now, therefore, in pursuance of the powers vested in him by the above-mentioned provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, and of any other powers vested in him in that behalf, His Majesty is pleased, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, to order and prescribe as follows :—

1. The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, and the enactments regulating the payment of compensation to workmen for injuries by accident at present in force in Northern Ireland, hereinafter referred to as the Acts, shall in the case of workmen who are Danish subjects apply subject to the following modifications :—

- (i.) In all cases any question as to liability to pay compensation under the Acts to a Danish subject or as to the amount or duration of such compensation, including any question as to the amount payable in respect of the redemption of weekly payments, and in cases of death the amount payable to each dependant, shall be settled by an award of the county court and in no other manner.
- (ii.) No court fee shall be payable by a workman who is a Danish subject or by the dependants of such workman in respect of any proceedings under the Acts in the county court by way of arbitration or otherwise in connection with the settlement of any claim or other matter arising under the Acts.

- (iii.) The registrar of every county court shall, not later than the 31st January in each year, send to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, in a form prescribed by him, a record of all judicial decisions given in the course of the preceding year under the Acts in the case of Danish subjects and the said Secretary of State shall cause such record to be communicated to the Ministry of Social Affairs in Denmark.
- (iv.) The power of making rules under the Acts shall include a power to make such rules as may be necessary for the purpose of carrying the said convention or this Order into effect. Such rules may include provisions authorising a county court (a) to order the transfer to the appropriate Danish authority of any compensation due under the Acts for the benefit of any British or Danish workman or dependants of such workman resident in Denmark, and (b) to receive and administer any compensation awarded under the Danish Accident Insurance Law for the benefit of any British or Danish workman or dependants of such workman resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland.

2. For the purpose of proceedings under the Acts by or on behalf of dependants of Danish workmen, such dependants being resident in Denmark, county courts shall, notwithstanding anything in sect. 17 of the County Courts Act, 1919, have power to issue letters of request for the examination of witnesses resident in Denmark and the duly authenticated statements of such witnesses in answer to any such letter of request shall be admissible in evidence in lieu of oral testimony by such witnesses.

3. For the purpose of claims to compensation by the dependants of workmen who are British subjects under the Danish Accident Insurance Law, county courts shall have power to examine on oath witnesses within the jurisdiction of such courts and to reduce to writing and duly authenticate for transmission to Denmark the statements of witnesses so examined.

4. In the application of this Order to Scotland "county court" shall mean "sheriff court," and "registrar of the county court" shall mean "sheriff clerk," and "rules" shall mean "Act of sederunt."

PART V.

JURISDICTION UNDER STATUTES.

INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ON THE SPECIAL JURISDICTION GIVEN TO THE COUNTY COURT BY SPECIAL STATUTES.

NUMEROUS statutes, other than those which deal exclusively with county courts or their jurisdiction, have from time to time been passed since 1846 which confer some jurisdiction, or impose some duty, on county courts or their judges or their registrars. These jurisdictions and duties have been conferred without regard to any recognised system, hence it is most difficult to classify or arrange the Acts which confer them in any satisfactory manner. The obligations created or dealt with by these special statutes are of a most varied kind, giving to county courts a jurisdiction sometimes limited and sometimes unlimited, sometimes exclusive of and sometimes concurrent with the High Court. In previous years the attempt was made to set out all, or almost all, of these statutes in full, but they have increased during late years, both in number and bulk, to such a degree that this is no longer possible within the limits of a single volume.

Since the edition of 1923 a number of the Acts formerly set out in full have been curtailed, and some which were obsolete, or very rarely used, have been omitted, or their title and county court sections referred to by name only.

On the other hand, there are now in this volume some statutes of general application, such as the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, which are referred to daily in county courts, and the inclusion of which it is hoped will render the volume of still greater use to the practitioner. The Emergency Statutes, so far as they now exist, will be found in Part VI.

In editions of the practice prior to that of 1914 it had been considered that a question of first importance for a practitioner was to know the nature and extent of the jurisdiction; consequently, so far as any classification could be attempted, jurisdiction was made the basis of that classification. But this classification, though instructive to the student who desired to make himself master of the subject of county court jurisdiction, was found not to be convenient for those practitioners who in the press of business desired to ascertain as quickly as possible the jurisdiction and practice of the county court on any one particular statute.

It was therefore decided in all future editions to alter the arrangement of the practice and to deal with each subject in alphabetical order, bringing the notes, the Acts and the rules as far as possible together, setting out in notes to each statute the limit (if any) to the jurisdiction given to the county court, in which court proceedings ought to be brought, and whether these proceedings should be by action or petition, whether an appeal lay to the High Court, and how that appeal ought to be presented. As the classification of the statutes according to the jurisdiction they respectively confer is interesting and instructive, a list of the statutes thus classified is added at the end of these observations.

Appeal.]—The question of whether an appeal could be prosecuted was at one time a matter of considerable difficulty, but is much simplified since The Delano (C. A.), (1895) P. 40 ; 64 L. J. P. 8, in which case the Court of Appeal decided that wherever the words of sect. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, were wide enough to include a case under a special Act, the right of appeal was given by that section in every action or matter which could come before a county court. As, by sect. 186 of the County Courts Act, 1888, “action” includes suit and means every proceeding which may be commenced by plaint, and “matter” means every proceeding which may be commenced otherwise than by plaint, it will be at once realised how wide a field is covered by the Delano decision (see Williams v. Wallis & Cox, (1914) 2 K. B. 478 ; 83 L. J. K. B. 1296). Where the special Act does give an appeal it is now settled that the appeal must be by motion (Kirkheaton Local Board v. Ainley (C. A.), (1892) 2 Q. B. 274 ; 61 L. J. Q. B. 812).

Prohibition.]—The general power which the High Court possesses to restrain all inferior courts from exceeding their jurisdiction no doubt enables it to restrain by prohibition any excess of jurisdiction under any special Act, whether the jurisdiction be concurrent or exclusive (Hull v. McFarlane, (1857) 2 C. B. N. S. 796 ; 27 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 41, where it seems to have been assumed that prohibition may be ordered in the mode prescribed by sect. 128 of the County Courts Act, 1888, instead of in the more cumbrous method still prevailing for other cases ; Smith v. Pryse, (1857) 7 E. & B. 339 ; 26 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 95).

Order in lieu of Mandamus.]—Whether a judge can be compelled by order in lieu of by mandamus to do an act to the performance of which a suitor is entitled is not clear, but it seems to have been so considered in a case under the Bills of Exchange Act (Holborow v. Jones, (1868) L. R. 4 C. P. 14 ; 38 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 22) ; whilst where a county court judge refused to hear disputes which he was bound to hear under the terms of a local Act, it was held that mandamus and not an order was the proper remedy (Re Brighton Sewers Act, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 723).

In what Court Proceedings commenced.]—Where the special Act is silent as to the court in which proceedings under it may be brought, the safest course is to proceed under sect. 74 of the County Courts Act, 1888, in the court of the district in which the defendant dwells or carries on business. In The Hero, (1891) P. 294 ; 60 L. J. P. 99, it was held that the general provisions of the said sect. 74 gave jurisdiction in admiralty to the court in which the defendant carried on business, although the Admiralty Jurisdiction Acts contain express provisions inconsistent with such general provisions.

When by Action and when by Petition.]—The general practice of the court prescribed by the rules applies to all proceedings authorised by any Act to be commenced or taken in a county court, except in so far as such practice may be inconsistent with the provisions of any such Act or of any particular rules made as to the procedure under any such Act (Order L. r. 36). It is also provided that where by any Act, for which particular rules have not been prescribed, proceedings are authorised or directed to be taken in a county court, the proceedings must be commenced by action where the object of the proceedings is to obtain relief against any person, or to compel any person to do or abstain from doing any act. Where there is no person against whom an action can be brought, proceedings must be taken either by petition or in accordance with the rules for the time being in force as to interlocutory applications, and must be supported by affidavit ; the judge has power, in any case in which an interlocutory application is made, to direct an application to be filed (Order L. r. 35).

The Act and rules help one step further by providing that the word “action” means every proceeding which may be commenced by plaint (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43, s. 186). It may therefore shortly be said that wherever there is any one who can be made defendant the proceeding should be by action commenced by plaint in the ordinary way. Where there is no such person then the proceeding should be as provided by Order L. r. 35 (above).

Classification.]—The following is a list of the statutes giving special jurisdiction to county courts or those with which they are often called upon to deal:—

ADOPTION OF CHILDREN ACT, 1926.

[16 & 17 GEO. 5. CH. 29.]

Jurisdiction.—The county court within the district of which either the applicant or the infant resides is given jurisdiction, concurrent with the High Court and courts of summary jurisdiction, to make adoption orders under the Act.

The court must appoint some person or body to act as guardian ad litem of the infant, with the duty of safeguarding the interests of the infant before the court. The Act contemplates the appointment of a local authority in suitable cases as such guardian, subject to the consent of the authority, and empowers the court to authorise the authority to incur the necessary expenditure (sect. 8 (3)). The Secretary of State for the Home Department has suggested that in most instances the local authority for elementary education is likely to be the most suitable local authority to undertake the work.

Procedure.—For Rules and Forms, see post, pp. 1664–1667.

Court Fees.—A fee of 10s. is payable on filing the petition, and the hearing fee is 10s. (C. C. Fees Order, 1925, Fees No. 2 and 20).

AN ACT TO MAKE PROVISION FOR THE ADOPTION OF INFANTS.
4TH AUGUST, 1926.

1.—(1) Upon an application in the prescribed manner by any person desirous of being authorised to adopt an infant who has never been married, the Court may, subject to the provisions of this Act, make an order (in this Act referred to as “an adoption order”) authorising the applicant to adopt that infant.

Power to make adoption orders.

(2) A person so authorised to adopt the infant and an infant authorised to be adopted are in this Act referred to as an “adopter” and an “adopted child” respectively, and “infant” means a person under the age of twenty-one.

(3) Where an application for an adoption order is made by two spouses jointly, the Court may make the order authorising the two spouses jointly to adopt, but save as aforesaid no adoption order shall be made authorising more than one person to adopt an infant.

2.—(1) An adoption order shall not be made in any case where—

(a) the applicant is under the age of twenty-five years, or

(b) the applicant is less than twenty-one years older than the infant in respect of whom the application is made :

Restrictions on making adoption orders.

Provided that, where the applicant and the infant are within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity, it shall be lawful for the court, if it thinks fit, to make the order notwithstanding that the applicant is less than twenty-one years older than the infant.

(2) An adoption order shall not be made in any case where the sole applicant is a male and the infant in respect of whom the application is made is a female unless the Court is satisfied that there are special circumstances which justify as an exceptional measure the making of an adoption order.

(3) An adoption order shall not be made except with the consent of every person or body who is a parent or guardian of the infant in respect of whom the application is made or who has the actual custody of the infant or who is liable to contribute to the support of the infant :

Provided that the Court may dispense with any consent required by this subsection if satisfied that the person whose consent is to be dispensed with has abandoned or deserted the infant or cannot be found or is incapable of giving such consent or, being a person liable to contribute to the support of the infant, either has persistently neglected or refused to contribute to such support or is a person whose consent ought, in the opinion of the court and in all the circumstances of the case, to be dispensed with.

Section 2.

(4) An adoption order shall not be made upon the application of one of two spouses without the consent of the other of them :

Provided that the court may dispense with any consent required by this subsection if satisfied that the person whose consent is to be dispensed with cannot be found or is incapable of giving such consent or that the spouses have separated and are living apart and that the separation is likely to be permanent.

(5) An adoption order shall not be made in favour of any applicant who is not resident and domiciled in England or Wales or in respect of any infant who is not a British subject and so resident.

Matters with respect to which Court to be satisfied.

3. The Court before making an adoption order shall be satisfied—

(a) that every person whose consent is necessary under this Act and whose consent is not dispensed with has consented to and understands the nature and effect of the adoption order for which application is made, and in particular in the case of any parent understands that the effect of the adoption order will be permanently to deprive him or her of his or her parental rights ; and

(b) that the order if made will be for the welfare of the infant, due consideration being for this purpose given to the wishes of the infant, having regard to the age and understanding of the infant ; and

(c) that the applicant has not received or agreed to receive, and that no person has made or given, or agreed to make or give to the applicant, any payment or other reward in consideration of the adoption except such as the court may sanction.

Terms and conditions of order.

4. The Court in an adoption order may impose such terms and conditions as the Court may think fit and in particular may require the adopter by bond or otherwise to make for the adopted child such provision (if any) as in the opinion of the Court is just and expedient.

Effect of
order.

5.—(1) Upon an adoption order being made, all rights, duties, obligations and liabilities of the parent or parents, guardian or guardians of the adopted child, in relation to the future custody, maintenance and education of the adopted child, including all rights to appoint a guardian or to consent or give notice of dissent to marriage shall be extinguished, and all such rights, duties, obligations and liabilities shall vest in and be exercisable by and enforceable against the adopter as though the adopted child was a child born to the adopter in lawful wedlock, and in respect of the same matters and in respect of the liability of a child to maintain its parents the adopted child shall stand to the adopter exclusively in the position of a child born to the adopter in lawful wedlock :

Provided that, in any case where two spouses are the adopters, such spouses shall in respect of the matters aforesaid and for the purpose of the jurisdiction of any court to make orders as to the custody and maintenance of and right of access to children stand to each other and to the adopted child in the same relation as they would have stood if they had been the lawful father and mother of the adopted child, and the adopted child shall stand to them respectively in the same relation as a child would have stood to a lawful father and mother respectively.

(2) An adoption order shall not deprive the adopted child of any right to or interest in property to which, but for the order, the child would have been entitled under any intestacy or disposition, whether occurring or made before or after the making of the adoption order, or confer on the adopted child any right to or interest in property as a child of the adopter, and the expressions "child," "children" and "issue" where used in any disposition whether made before or after the making of an adoption order, shall not, unless the contrary intention appears, include an adopted child or children or the issue of an adopted child.

(3) Where an adopted child or the spouse or issue of an adopted child takes any interest in real or personal property under a disposition by the adopter, or where an adopter takes any interest in real or personal property under a disposition by an adopted child or the spouse or issue of an adopted child, any succession, legacy or other duty which becomes leviable in respect thereof shall be payable at the same rate as if the adopted child had been a child born to the adopter in lawful wedlock.

(4) For the purposes of this section "disposition" means an assurance of any interest in property by any instrument whether inter vivos or by will including codicil.

(5) For the purposes of the enactments relating to friendly societies, collecting societies and industrial assurance companies, which enable such societies and companies to insure money to be paid for funeral expenses, and which restrict the persons to whom money may be paid on the death of a child under the age of ten, the adopter shall be deemed to be the parent of the child ; and where before the adoption order was made any such insurance had been effected by the natural parent of the child, the rights and liabilities under the policy shall by virtue of the adoption order be transferred to the adopter, and the adopter shall, for the purposes of the said enactments, be treated as the person who took out the policy.

Section 5.

Power to make interim
orders.

6.—(1) Upon any application for an adoption order, the Court may postpone the determination of the application and may make an interim order (which shall not be an adoption order for the purposes of this Act) giving the custody of the infant to the applicant for a period not exceeding two years by way of a probationary period upon such terms as regards provision for the maintenance and education and supervision of the welfare of the infant and otherwise as the Court may think fit.

(2) All such consents as are required to an adoption order shall be necessary to an interim order but subject to a like power on the part of the Court to dispense with any such consent.

Power to make subsequent order in respect of infant already subject to an order.
Jurisdiction and procedure.

7. An adoption order or an interim order may be made in respect of an infant who has already been the subject of an adoption order, and, upon any application for such further adoption order, the adopter or adopters under the adoption order last previously made shall, if living, be deemed to be the parent or parents of the infant for all the purposes of this Act.

8.—(1) The Court having jurisdiction to make adoption orders under this Act shall be the High Court or, at the option of the applicant, but subject to any rules under this section, any county court or any Court of summary jurisdiction within the jurisdiction of which either the applicant or the infant resides at the date of the application for the adoption order.

(2) Rules in regard to any matter to be prescribed under this Act and directing the manner in which applications to the Court are to be made and dealing generally with all matters of procedure and incidental matters arising out of this Act and for carrying this Act into effect shall be made by the Lord Chancellor.

Such rules may provide for applications for adoption orders being heard and determined otherwise than in open Court, and where the application is made to a court of summary jurisdiction, for the hearing and determination thereof in a juvenile court as defined by the Children Act, 1908.

8 Edw. 7,
c. 67.

(3) For the purpose of any application under this Act and subject to any rules under this section, the Court shall appoint some person or body to act as guardian ad litem of the infant upon the hearing of the application with the duty of safeguarding the interests of the infant before the Court, and where the body so appointed is a local authority the Court may authorise the authority to incur any necessary expenditure, and may direct out of which fund or rate such expenditure is to be defrayed, but nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise the Court to appoint a local authority to act as guardian ad litem of an infant except with the consent of that authority.

Section 8.

9. It shall not be lawful for any adopter or for any parent or guardian except with the sanction of the Court to receive any payment or other reward in consideration of the adoption of any infant under this Act or for any person to make or give or agree to make or give to any adopter or to any parent or guardian any such payment or reward.

Restriction on payments.

10. Where at the date of the commencement of this Act any infant is in the custody of, and being brought up, maintained and educated by any person or two spouses jointly as his, her or their own child under any de facto adoption, and has for a period of not less than two years before such commencement been in such custody, and been so brought up, maintained and educated, the Court may, upon the application of such person or spouses, and notwithstanding that the applicant is a male and the infant a female, make an adoption order authorising him, her or them to adopt the infant without requiring the consent of any parent or guardian of the infant to be obtained, upon being satisfied that in all the circumstances of the case it is just and equitable and for the welfare of the infant that no such consent should be required and that an adoption order should be made.

Provisions
as to existing de facto adoptions.

11.—(1) The Registrar-General shall establish and maintain at the General Register Office a register to be called the Adopted Children Register, in which shall be made such entries as may be directed to be made therein by adoption orders, but no other entries.

Adopted
register.

(2) Every adoption order shall contain a direction to the Registrar-General to make in the Adopted Children Register an entry recording the adoption in the form set out in the Schedule hereto.

(3) If upon any application for an adoption order there is proved to the satisfaction of the Court—

(b) the identity of the infant with a child to which any entry or entries in the Registers of Births relates;

the adoption order shall contain a further direction to the Registrar-General to cause such birth, entry or entries in the Registers of Birth, to be marked with the word "Adopted," and to include in the entry in the adoption register recording the adoption the date stated in the order of the adopted child's birth in the manner indicated in the Schedule hereto.

Section 11.

(4) The prescribed officer of the Court shall cause every adoption order to be communicated in the prescribed manner to the Registrar-General, and upon receipt of such communication the Registrar-General shall cause compliance to be made with the directions contained in such order in regard both to marking any entry in the Registers of Birth with the word "Adopted," and in regard to making the appropriate entry in the Adopted Children Register.

(5) A certified copy of any entry in the Adopted Children Register if purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the General Register Office shall, without any further or other proof of such entry—

(a) where the entry does not contain any record of the date of the birth of the adopted child be received as evidence of the adoption to which the same relates; and

(b) where the entry contains a record of the date of the birth of the adopted child shall be received not only as evidence of the adoption to which the same relates but also as evidence of the date of the birth of the adopted child to which the same relates in all respects as though the same were a certified copy of an entry in the Registers of Births.

(6) The Registrar-General shall cause an index of the Adopted Children Register to be made and kept in the General Register Office, and every person shall be entitled to search such index and to have a certified copy of any entry in the Adopted Children Register in all respects upon, and subject to the same terms, conditions and regulations as to payment of fees and otherwise as are applicable under the Births and Deaths Registration Acts, 1836 to 1901, in respect of searches in other indexes kept in the General Register Office, and in respect of the supply from such office of certified copies of entries in the certified copies of the Registers of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

(7) The Registrar-General shall, in addition to the Adopted Children Register and the index thereof, keep such other registers and books, and make such entries therein as may be necessary, to record and make traceable the connexion between any entry in the register of births which has been marked "Adopted" pursuant to this Act and any corresponding entry in the Adopted Children Register, but such last-mentioned registers and books shall not be nor shall any index thereof be open to public inspection or search, nor, except under an order of a court of competent jurisdiction, shall the Registrar-General furnish any person with any information contained in or with any copy or extract from any such registers or books. Section 11.

(8) Regulations made by the Registrar-General under the Births and Deaths Registration Acts, 1836 to 1901, may make provision as to the duties to be performed by Superintendent Registrars and Registrars of Births and Deaths in the execution of this Act.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS.

The whole of the Agricultural Holdings Acts for England have been consolidated in the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (13 & 14 Geo. V. c. 9). This Act, with a small Amendment Act (13 & 14 Geo. V. c. 25), noted on p. 1700, and incorporated in the principal Act, now contains the whole law on this important subject.

Jurisdiction.]—The cases in which the county court has jurisdiction may be classed under the following heads :—

A. As to arbitrations and awards, in deciding points of law submitted by the arbitrator in the form of a special case (sect. 16 (4) of Act); in the removal of an arbitrator who has misconducted himself (Schedule II. (7) of Act); in directing an arbitrator on the application of either party to state a special case on any question of law arising in an arbitration (Schedule II. (10) of Act); in setting aside an award when an arbitrator has misconducted himself or when an arbitration or award has been improperly procured (Schedule II. (7) of Act); and in the taxation by the registrar, subject to review by the judge, of the costs of and incidental to an arbitration or award (Schedule II. (15) of Act).

B. In enforcing payment of compensation or costs awarded, in the same manner as money ordered by a county court under its ordinary jurisdiction to be paid is recoverable (sect. 19 of Act). See Order XL., r. 7.

C. In deciding disputes as to distresses. These may also be determined by a court of summary jurisdiction (sect. 36 of Act).

D. To appoint, for purposes of the Act where necessary, a guardian of an infant or person of unsound mind (sect. 38 of Act); and to take separate examinations of married women under the Act (sect. 39 of Act).

Practice.]—For the practice in county court, see Order XL., p. 1711, viz. for—Appointment or change of guardian (see Rule 1).

Application for order to state a special case and the statement and hearing thereof (see Rules 2, 3, and Forms 415, 416, 417).

Application for removal of arbitrator or to set aside an award (see Rule 4, Forms 418 419, 420).

Application for taxation or review of costs of arbitration (Rules 5, 6).

Application for the recovery of money, awarded or agreed to be paid (Rules 7, 8, Forms 421, 422).

Appeal from county court judge on case stated by an arbitrator is to the Court of Appeal whose decision is final (sect. 13 (3)) (see procedure in such appeal, R. S. C. Order 58, r. 20, ante p. 263), in other cases to Divisional Court; see Williams v. Wallis & Cox, (1914) 2 K. B. 478; 83 L. J. K. B. 1296.

Costs in proceedings in county court are in discretion of the court. The order of the county court cannot be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any superior court (sect. 51 of Act).

of tenancy was made on or after the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one, then whether the improvement was or was not an improvement which he was required to make by the terms of his tenancy, be entitled, at the termination of the tenancy, on quitting his holding to obtain from the landlord as compensation for the improvement such sum as fairly represents the value of the improvement to an incoming tenant.

See In re Lancaster and Macnamara, (1918) 87 L. J. K. B. 1250.

The date of the contract of tenancy is all important, see Huckell v. Sainty, (1923) 1 K. B. 154; 92 L. J. K. B. 313.

(2) In the ascertainment of the amount of the compensation payable to a tenant under this section there shall be taken into account—

- (a) any benefit which the landlord has given or allowed to the tenant in consideration of the tenant executing the improvement, whether expressly stated in the contract of tenancy to be so given or allowed or not; and
- (b) as respects manuring as defined by this Act, the value of the manure required by the contract of tenancy or by custom to be returned to the holding in respect of any crops grown on and sold off or removed from the holding within the last two years of the tenancy or other less time for which the tenancy has endured, not exceeding the value of the manure which would have been produced by the consumption on the holding of the crops so sold off or removed.

(3) Nothing in this section shall prejudice the right of a tenant to claim any compensation to which he may be entitled under custom, agreement, or otherwise, in lieu of any compensation provided by this section.

Compensation under this Act shall not be payable in respect of any improvement comprised in Part I. of the First Schedule to this Act, unless the landlord of the holding has, previously to the execution of the improvement, consented in writing to the making of the improvement, and any such consent may be given by the landlord unconditionally, or upon such terms as to compensation or otherwise, as may be agreed upon between the landlord and the tenant, and, if any such agreement is made, any compensation payable under the agreement shall be substituted for compensation under this Act.

A consent in writing given under the terms of a lease (and semble, a similar consent under the Agricultural Holdings Act) by a landlord to a tenant making improvements during his tenancy, for which improvements, being made with such consent, he becomes entitled to compensation, is a term of the tenancy within a condition of sale affecting purchasers with notice of the terms of all existing tenancies ; and if any claim for compensation for such improvements arises after the date fixed for completion of the sale, it must be borne by the purchaser. Derby (Earl of) and Fergusson's Contract, In re, (1912) 1 Ch. 479 ; (1911) 81 L. J. Ch. 567.

3.—(1) Compensation under this Act shall not be payable in respect of any improvement comprised in Part II. of the First Schedule to this Act, unless the tenant of the holding has, not more than three nor less than two months before beginning to execute the improvement, given to the landlord notice in writing of his intention so to do, and of the manner in which he proposes to do the intended work, and, upon such notice being given, the landlord and the tenant may agree on the terms as to compensation or otherwise on which the improvement is to be executed.

(2) If any such agreement is made, any compensation payable under the agreement shall be substituted for compensation under this Act.

(3) In default of any such agreement the landlord may, unless the notice of the tenant is previously withdrawn, execute the improvement in any reasonable and proper manner which he thinks fit, and recover from the tenant as rent a sum not exceeding five per cent. per annum on the outlay incurred, or not exceeding such annual sum payable for a period of twenty-five years as will repay that outlay in that period, with interest at the rate of three per cent. per annum :

Provided that, if the landlord fails to execute the improvement within a reasonable time, the tenant may execute the improvement, and shall in respect thereof be entitled to compensation under this Act.

The Minister may by regulation substitute such percentages or period as he thinks fit for the percentages and period mentioned in this sub-section, having due regard to the current rates of interest.

(4) The landlord and the tenant may by the contract of tenancy or otherwise agree to dispense with any notice under this section, and any such agreement may provide for anything for which an agreement after notice under this section may provide, and in such case shall be of the same validity and effect as such last-mentioned agreement.

4. Where any agreement in writing entered into before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one secures to the tenant of a holding for any improvement comprised in Part III. of the First Schedule to this Act fair and reasonable compensation, having regard to the circumstances existing at the time of making the agreement, the compensation so secured shall as respects that improvement be substituted for compensation under this Act.

Section 5.

Determination of claims to compensation for improvements.

1908, s. 6.

5. If the tenant of a holding claims to be entitled to compensation, whether under this Act, or under custom or agreement, or otherwise, in respect of any improvement comprised in the First Schedule to this Act, and if the landlord and tenant fail to agree as to the amount and time and mode of payment of the compensation, the difference shall be settled by arbitration.

This section extends the subject matter of a claim; Holmes and Formby, In re, (1895) 1 Q. B. 174; 64 L. J. Q. B. 391 (where it was held that a landlord could not avail himself of a cross claim for waste and breach of covenant further than as a defence against a claim by the tenant) is no longer law. Under the Act of 1883 it was held that a claim for compensation which had not been assessed by arbitration under the Act could not be set up by way of set-off or counter-claim in an action by the landlord (Gas Light Co. v. Holloway, (1885) 52 L. T. 434).

Right of tenant who has paid compensation to outgoing tenant.

1908, s. 7.

6. Where an incoming tenant of a holding has, with the consent in writing of his landlord, paid to an outgoing tenant any compensation payable under or in pursuance of this Act in respect of the whole or part of any improvement, the incoming tenant shall be entitled on quitting the holding to claim compensation in respect of the improvement or part in like manner, if at all, as the outgoing tenant would have been entitled if he had remained tenant of the holding, and quitted it at the time at which the incoming tenant quits it.

Provision as to change of tenancy.

1908, s. 8.

7. A tenant who has remained in his holding during two or more tenancies shall not, on quitting his holding, be deprived of his right to claim compensation under this Act in respect of improvements by reason only that the improvements were not made during the tenancy on the termination of which he quits the holding.

Restriction in respect of improvements by tenant about to quit.

1908, s. 9.

8. A tenant of a holding shall not be entitled to compensation under this Act in respect of any improvements, other than manuring as defined by this Act, begun by him—

(a) in the case of a tenant from year to year, within one year before he quits the holding (a), or at any time after he has given or received notice to quit which results in his quitting the holding; and

(b) in any other case, within one year before the termination of the tenancy;

Provided that this section shall not apply in the case of any improvement—

(i.) where the tenant, previously to beginning the improvement, has served notice on his landlord of his intention to begin it, and the landlord has either assented or has failed for a month after the receipt of the notice to object to the making of the improvement; or

- (ii.) in the case of a tenant from year to year, where the tenant has begun the improvement during the last year of his tenancy, and, in pursuance of a notice to quit thereafter given by the landlord, quits his holding at the expiration of that year.

Section 8.

(a) See where by custom of the country the holding is surrendered at different times the case of Swinburne v. Andrews, (1923) 2 K. B. 483; 92 L. J. K. B. 889.

COMPENSATION IN RESPECT OF INCREASED OR DIMINISHED VALUE OF HOLDING.

9.—(1) Where a tenant on quitting a holding proves to the satisfaction of an arbitrator appointed under this Act that the value of the holding to an incoming tenant has been increased during the tenancy by the continuous adoption of a standard of farming or a system of farming which has been more beneficial to the holding than the standard or system (if any) required by the contract of tenancy, the arbitrator shall award to the tenant such compensation as in his opinion represents the value to an incoming tenant of the adoption of that standard or system :

Compensation for continuous adoption of special standard or system of farming.
1920, s. 16.

Provided that—

- (a) this section shall not apply in any case unless a record of the condition of the holding has been made under this Act or any enactment repealed by this Act, or in respect of any matter arising before the date of the record so made ; and
- (b) compensation shall not be payable under this section unless the tenant has, before the termination of the tenancy, given notice in writing to the landlord of his intention to claim such compensation ; and
- (c) the arbitrator in assessing the value to an incoming tenant shall make due allowance for any compensation agreed or awarded to be paid to the tenant for any improvement specified in the First Schedule to this Act which has caused or contributed to the benefit.
- (2) Nothing in this section shall entitle a tenant to recover in respect of an improvement specified in the First Schedule or the Third Schedule to this Act any compensation which he would not have been entitled to recover if this section had not been passed.
- (3) The continuous adoption of such a beneficial standard or system of farming as aforesaid shall be treated as an improvement for the purposes of the provisions of this Act relating to the determination of the rent properly payable in respect of a holding.

Section 10.

Compensation to landlord for deterioration of holding.
1920, s. 19.

10. Where a landlord proves, to the satisfaction of an arbitrator appointed under this Act, on the termination of the tenancy of a holding, that the value of the holding has been deteriorated during the tenancy by the failure of the tenant to cultivate the holding according to the rules of good husbandry or the terms of the contract of tenancy, the arbitrator shall award to the landlord such compensation as in his opinion represents the deterioration of the holding due to such failure :

Provided that,—

- (a) compensation shall not be payable under this section unless the landlord has, before the termination of the tenancy, given notice in writing to the tenant of his intention to claim such compensation ; and
- (b) nothing in this section shall prevent a landlord from claiming compensation for dilapidations or for the deterioration of the holding under the contract of tenancy.

See Arden v. Rutter, (1923) 2 K. B. 865 ; 92 L. J. K. B. 894.

COMPENSATION FOR DAMAGE BY GAME.

11.—(1) Where a tenant of a holding has sustained damage to his crops from game the right to kill and take which is vested neither in him nor in any one claiming under him other than the landlord, and which the tenant has not permission in writing to kill, he shall subject as hereinafter mentioned be entitled to compensation from his landlord for such damage if it exceeds in amount the sum of one shilling per acre of the area over which the damage extends.

(2) The amount of compensation payable under this section shall, in default of agreement made after the damage has been suffered, be determined by arbitration, but no compensation shall be recoverable under this section unless notice in writing is given to the landlord as soon as may be after the damage was first observed by the tenant and a reasonable opportunity is given to the landlord to inspect the damage—

- (a) in the case of damage to a growing crop, before the crop is begun to be reaped, raised, or consumed ; and
- (b) in the case of damage to a crop reaped or raised, before the crop is begun to be removed from the land—and unless notice in writing of the claim, together with the particulars thereof, is given to the landlord within one month after the expiration of the calendar year, or such other period of twelve months as by agreement between the landlord and tenant may be substituted therefor, in respect of which the claim is made.

Section 11.

(3) Where the landlord proves that, under a contract of tenancy made before the first day of January nineteen hundred and nine, any compensation for damage by game is payable by him, or that in fixing the rent to be paid under such contract allowance in respect of such damage to an agreed amount was expressly made, the arbitrator shall make such deduction from the compensation which would otherwise be payable under this section as may appear just.

(4) Where the right to kill and take the game is vested in some person other than the landlord, the landlord shall be entitled to be indemnified by such other person against all claims for compensation under this section.

(5) For the purposes of this section the expression "game" means deer, pheasants, partridges, grouse, and black game.

COMPENSATION FOR DISTURBANCE.

12.—(1) Where the tenancy of a holding terminates by reason of a notice to quit given by the landlord, and in consequence of such notice the tenant quits the holding, then, unless the tenant—

Compensation for disturbance.
1920, s. 10.
A.A., 1921,
s. 1 (1).

(a) was not at the date of the notice cultivating the holding according to the rules of good husbandry; or

(b) had, at the date of the notice, failed to comply within a reasonable time with any notice in writing by the landlord served on him requiring him to pay any rent due in respect of the holding or to remedy any breach being a breach which was capable of being remedied of any term or condition of the tenancy consistent with good husbandry; or

(c) had, at the date of the notice, materially prejudiced the interests of the landlord by committing a breach which was not capable of being remedied of any term or condition of the tenancy consistent with good husbandry; or

(d) was at the date of the notice a person who had become bankrupt or compounded with his creditors; or

(e) has, on or after the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one refused, or within a reasonable time failed, to agree to a demand made to him in writing by the landlord for arbitration under this Act as to the rent to be paid for the holding as from the next ensuing date at which the tenancy could have been terminated by notice to quit given by the landlord at the date of the said demand; or

As to notice and demand for arbitration as to rent given at one and the same time, see Westlake v. Page, (1926) 1 K. B. 298; 95 L. J. K. B. 456.

Section 12.

(f) had, at the date of the notice, unreasonably refused, or within a reasonable time failed, to comply with a demand made to him in writing by the landlord requiring him to execute at the expense of the landlord an agreement setting out the existing terms of the tenancy; and unless the notice to quit states that it is given for one or more of the reasons aforesaid, compensation for the disturbance shall be payable by the landlord to the tenant in accordance with the provisions of this section :

Provided that—

- (i.) compensation shall not be payable under this section in any case where the landlord has made to the tenant an offer in writing to withdraw the notice to quit and the tenant has unreasonably refused or failed to accept the offer ; and

An offer to withdraw the notice and allow the tenant to continue at a substantially increased rent is not an offer within the meaning of this sub-section. Perrett and Bennett-Stanford's Arbitration, In re, (1922) 2 K. B. 592 ; 91 L. J. K. B. 930.

As to meaning of "landlord," see Richards v. Pryse, (1927) 2 K. B. 76.

- (ii.) this section shall not apply where notice to quit was given on or before the twentieth day of May nineteen hundred and twenty ; and
- (iii.) where notice to quit was given after that date but before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one, this section shall apply whether or not the notice stated the reason or reasons for which it was given.

(2) The landlord of a holding may at any time apply to the agricultural committee for the area in which the holding is situate for a certificate that the tenant is not cultivating the holding according to the rules of good husbandry, and, on any such application being made, the committee, after giving to the landlord and the tenant or their respective representatives an opportunity of being heard, shall, as they think proper, either grant or refuse the certificate within one month after the date of the application.

The landlord or tenant may, within seven days after the notification to him of the refusal or grant by the committee of a certificate, require the question as to whether the holding is being cultivated according to the rules of good husbandry to be referred to an arbitrator who may grant a certificate for the purpose of this sub-section or revoke the certificate granted by the committee, and the award of the arbitrator shall be given within twenty-eight days of the date on which the matter is referred to him.

Subject to any such appeal, a certificate granted under this sub-section shall be conclusive evidence that the holding is not being cultivated according to the rules of good husbandry. Section 12.

In the case of a holding situate in a county borough for which an agricultural committee has not been appointed, this sub-section shall have effect with the substitution of the Minister for an agricultural committee.

(3) Where the landlord of a holding refuses, or within a reasonable time fails to agree to, a demand made to him in writing by the tenant for arbitration under this Act as to the rent to be paid for the holding as from the next ensuing date at which the tenancy could have been terminated by notice to quit given by the tenant at the date of the said demand, and by reason of the refusal or failure the tenant exercises his power of terminating the tenancy by a notice stating that it is given for that reason, the tenant shall be entitled to compensation in the same manner as if the tenancy had been terminated by notice to quit given by the landlord :

Provided that such compensation shall not be payable if the circumstances are such that a notice to quit could have been given by the landlord for any of the reasons mentioned in paragraphs (a), (b), or (c) of sub-section (1) of this section.

(4) The provisions of this section relating to demands for arbitration as to the rent to be paid for a holding shall not apply where the demand, if made later than six months after the thirty-first day of December, nineteen hundred and twenty, is so made that the increase or reduction of the rent would take effect at some time before the expiration of two years from the commencement of the tenancy of the holding or from the date on which a previous increase or reduction of the rent took effect.

(5) (a) Where a demand in writing for an arbitration as to the rent to be paid for the holding has been made for the purposes of this section and has been agreed to, whether in writing or otherwise, the question as to the rent shall be referred to arbitration.

(b) An arbitrator, in determining for the purposes of this section what rent is properly payable in respect of a holding, shall not take into account any increase in the rental value which is due to improvements which have been executed thereon so far as they were executed wholly or partly by and at the expense of the tenant without any equivalent allowance or benefit made or given by the landlord in consideration of their execution and have not been executed by him under an obligation imposed by the terms of his contract of tenancy, or fix the rent at a higher amount than would have been properly payable if those improvements had not been so executed, and shall not fix the rent at a lower amount by reason of any dilapidation or deterioration of land or buildings made or permitted by the tenant.

Section 12.

(6) The compensation payable under this section shall be a sum representing such loss or expense directly attributable to the quitting of the holding as the tenant may unavoidably incur upon or in connection with the sale or removal of his household goods, implements of husbandry, fixtures, farm produce or farm stock on or used in connection with the holding, and shall include any expenses reasonably incurred by him in the preparation of his claim for compensation (not being costs of an arbitration to determine the amount of the compensation), but for the avoidance of disputes, such sum shall, for the purposes of this Act, be computed at an amount equal to one year's rent of the holding, unless it is proved that the loss and expenses so incurred exceed an amount equal to one year's rent of the holding, in which case the sum recoverable shall be such as represents the whole loss and expenses so incurred up to a maximum amount equal to two years' rent of the holding.

Before the tenant can claim for disturbance under s. 12 (formerly s. 10 of the Agricultural Act, 1920) he must prove that he has actually suffered some loss or incurred some expense such as is indicated in this sub-section (sub-s. 6). On proof thereof he is entitled as a minimum to the amount of one year's rent. Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries v. Dean, (1924) 1 K. B. 851; 93 L. J. K. B. 374. As to compensation payable to a tenant of two or more holdings, see Westlake v. Page, ante, p. 1677.

(7) Compensation shall not be payable under this section—

(a) in respect of the sale of any goods, implements, fixtures, produce or stock unless the tenant has before the sale given the landlord a reasonable opportunity of making a valuation thereof; or

What is a "reasonable opportunity" for the purpose of this sub-section is always a question of fact. Dale v. Hatfield Chase Corporation, (1922) 2 K. B. 282.

(b) unless the tenant has, not less than one month before the termination of the tenancy, given notice in writing to the landlord of his intention to make a claim for compensation under this section; or

"Termination of the tenancy." This means, where the letting is under one contract, the last date at which part of the tenancy is to be given up, where it is to be given up at different times. Swinburne v. Andrews, (1923) 2 K. B. 483.

(c) where the tenant with whom the contract of tenancy was made has died within three months before the date of the notice to quit; or

(d) if in a case in which the tenant under section twenty-seven of this Act accepts a notice to quit part of his holding as a notice to quit the entire holding, the part of the holding affected by the notice given by the landlord, together with any other part of the holding affected by any previous notice given under that section by the landlord to the tenant, is less than one-fourth part of the original holding, or the holding as proposed to be diminished is reasonably capable of being cultivated as a separate holding, except compensation in respect of the part of the holding to which the notice to quit related; or

Section 12.

NOTE.—As to the position when notice to quit is given by the owner of a severed part of the reversion, see note to sect. 27, post, p. 1693.

- (e) where the holding was let to the tenant by a corporation carrying on a railway, dock, canal, water, or other undertaking, or by a Government department or a local authority, and possession of the holding is required by the corporation, department, or authority for the purpose (not being the use of the land for agriculture) for which it was acquired by the corporation, department, or authority, or appropriated under any statutory provision; or
 - (f) in the case of a permanent pasture which the landlord has been in the habit of letting annually for seasonal grazing, and which has since the fourth day of August nineteen hundred and fourteen and before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one been let to a tenant for a definite and limited period for cultivation as arable land, on the condition that the tenant shall, along with the last or waygoing crop, sow permanent grass seeds; or
 - (g) where a written contract of tenancy has been entered into (whether before or after the commencement of this Act) for the letting by the landlord to the tenant of a holding, which at the time of the creation of the tenancy had then been for a period of not less than twelve months in the occupation of the landlord, upon the express terms that if the landlord desires to resume that occupation before the expiration of a specified term not exceeding seven years the landlord should be entitled to give notice to quit without becoming liable to pay to the tenant any compensation for disturbance, and the landlord desires to resume occupation within the specified period, and such notice to quit has been given accordingly.
- (8) In any case where a tenant holds two or more holdings, whether from the same landlord or different landlords, and receives notice to quit one or more but not all of the holdings, the compensation for disturbance in respect of the holding or holdings shall be reduced by such amount as is shown to the satisfaction of the arbitrator to represent the reduction (if any) of the loss

Section 12. attributable to the notice to quit by reason of the continuance in possession by the tenant of the other holding or holdings.

(9) The landlord shall, on an application made in writing after the thirty-first day of December nineteen hundred and twenty by the tenant of a holding to whom a notice to quit has been given which does not state the reasons for which it is given, furnish to the tenant within twenty-eight days after the receipt of the application a statement in writing of the reasons for the giving of the notice, and, if he fails unreasonably so to do, compensation shall be payable under this section as if the notice to quit had not been given for a reason specified in sub-section (1) of this section.

(10) The expression "holding" in this section shall not include any land which forms part of any park, garden, or pleasure ground attached to and usually occupied with the mansion house, or any land adjoining the mansion house which is required for its protection or amenity, and the compensation for disturbance payable in respect of a notice to quit given in respect of any such land shall be such compensation (if any) as is payable under the provisions of this Act in that behalf.

(11) Compensation payable under this section shall be in addition to any compensation to which the tenant may be entitled in respect of improvements.

As to "good and sufficient cause," see In re Arbitration between Bonnett and Fowler (C. A.), (1913) 2 K. B. 537; 82 L. J. K. B. 713.

See Harvey and Mann's Arbitration, In re, (1920) 89 L. J. K. B. 687.

Compensation for disturbance in cases to which s. 12 does not apply.

13.—(1) This section applies only to land (being or forming part of a holding) which is not included in the definition of "holding" for the purposes of section twelve of this Act.

(2) Where the landlord of land to which this section applies, without good and sufficient cause, and for reasons inconsistent with good estate management terminates the tenancy by notice to quit, the tenant upon quitting the land shall, in addition to the compensation (if any) to which he may be entitled in respect of improvements, be entitled to compensation for the loss or expense directly attributable to his quitting the land which the tenant may unavoidably incur upon or in connection with the sale or removal of his household goods or his implements of husbandry, produce, or farm stock, on or used in connection with the land:

Provided that no compensation under this section shall be payable—

(a) unless the tenant has given to the landlord a reasonable opportunity of making a valuation of such goods, implements, produce, and stock as aforesaid;

Section 13.

- (b) unless the tenant has within two months after he has received notice to quit given to the landlord notice in writing of his intention to claim compensation under this section ;
- (c) where the tenant with whom a contract of tenancy was made has died within three months before the date of the notice to quit ;
- (d) if the claim for compensation is not made within three months after the time at which the tenant quits the land.

See Dale v. Hatfield Chase Corporation, (1922) 2 K. B. 282 ; (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 237.

14.—(1) Where the occupation of a dwelling-house (including a garden attached thereto) forming part of a holding has been allowed by the tenant of the holding to a workman employed by him in agriculture on the holding, whether the occupation is under a contract of tenancy or not, and the occupation is terminated on account of the termination by the tenant of the holding of the employment of the workman, the provisions of sections twelve and thirteen of this Act shall (subject as hereinafter provided and so far as the same are capable of application) apply as if the dwelling-house (including a garden attached thereto) were a holding and, where there is no contract of tenancy, as if the person allowing the dwelling-house to be so occupied were the landlord and the workman were the tenant, and the notice to terminate the occupation were a notice to quit :

Application of preceding section to cottages on holdings.

A.A., 1921, s. 1 (2).

Provided that—

(a) compensation shall not be payable under this section if—

(i.) the notice to terminate the occupation is given before the expiration of six weeks from the commencement of the occupation ; or

(ii.) the tenant of the holding has, before giving the notice, obtained from a court of summary jurisdiction for the district in which the dwelling-house is situate a certificate that the termination of the occupation is necessary or expedient to enable the holding to be worked properly or to better advantage ; or

(iii.) the employment of the workman is for a year or half-year, and the occupation is terminated at the end of such period ; or

(iv.) the workman does not cease to occupy the dwelling-house on the expiration of the notice to terminate his occupation thereof or on the expiration of a period of two months from the date when the notice was given which ever is the later ; or

(v.) the notice is given by reason of the employment of the workman having been terminated on account of his misconduct, and such reason shall be substituted for the reasons specified in sub-section (1) of section twelve of this Act; and

- (b) for the purpose of compensation the year's rent of the dwelling-house shall be taken to be the sum of seven pounds and sixteen shillings, or if it is shown that that sum exceeds an amount equal to fifty-two times the weekly rental value of the dwelling-house let free from rates, then such last mentioned amount; and
- (c) sub-sections (2) and (3) and paragraph (b) of sub-section (7) of section twelve of this Act shall not apply; and
- (d) any question as to whether compensation is payable under this section or as to the amount payable shall, on the application of the tenant or workman, be determined by a court of summary jurisdiction for the district in which the dwelling-house is situate, and the court may, in any case in which it appears to the court to be just, direct the payment by the tenant to the workman of a sum in respect of his expenses of appearing before the court, and any sum so directed to be paid shall be recoverable summarily from the tenant as a civil debt.

(2) Where under this section the tenant of a holding seeks to obtain a certificate from a court of summary jurisdiction, the workman shall be entitled to appear before the court and shall, in the event of the certificate being refused, also be entitled to recover from the tenant such sum as the court may direct in respect of any expenses incurred by him in appearing before the court.

COMPENSATION IN CASE OF TENANCY UNDER MORTGAGOR.

Compensation to tenants when mortgagee takes possession.

1908, s. 12.

15. Where a person occupies a holding under a contract of tenancy with a mortgagor, which is not binding on the mortgagee; then—

- (1) the occupier shall, as against the mortgagee who takes possession, be entitled to any compensation which is, or would but for the mortgagee taking possession be, due to the occupier from the mortgagor as respects crops, improvements, tillages, or other matters connected with the holding, whether under this Act or custom or an agreement authorised by this Act;
- (2) if the contract of tenancy is for a tenancy from year to year or for a term of years, not exceeding twenty-one, at a rackrent, the mortgagee shall, before he deprives the occupier of possession otherwise than in accordance with the contract of tenancy, give to the occupier six months'

notice in writing of his intention so to do, and, if he so deprives him, compensation shall be due to the occupier for his crops, and for any expenditure upon the land which he has made in the expectation of remaining in the holding for the full term of his contract of tenancy, in so far as any improvement resulting therefrom is not exhausted at the time of his being so deprived ;

Section 15.

- (3) any sum ascertained to be due to the occupier for compensation, or for any costs connected therewith, may be set off against any rent or other sum due from him in respect of the holding, but unless so set off shall, as against the mortgagee, be charged and recovered in accordance with the provisions of this Act relating to the recovery of compensation due from a landlord who is a trustee.

ARBITRATION.

16.—(1) Any question or difference arising out of any claim by the tenant of a holding against the landlord for compensation payable under this Act, or for any sums claimed to be due to the tenant from the landlord for any breach of contract or otherwise in respect of the holding, or out of any claim by the landlord against the tenant for waste wrongly committed or permitted by the tenant, or for any breach of contract or otherwise in respect of the holding, and any other question or difference of any kind whatsoever between the landlord and the tenant of the holding arising out of the termination of the tenancy of the holding or arising, whether during the tenancy or on the termination thereof, as to the construction of the contract of tenancy, and any other question which under this Act is referred to arbitration shall be determined, notwithstanding any agreement under the contract of tenancy or otherwise providing for a different method of arbitration, by a single arbitrator in accordance with the provisions set out in the Second Schedule to this Act.

Matters to be referred to arbitration.
1908, ss. 6 (4), 13 (1), (3), and (4).
1920, s. 18.
See also 1 & Geo. V. c. 6.

NOTE.—Considerable discussion has arisen as to the scope of this section. The Court of Appeal has however now decided in Lowther v. Clifford, (1927) 1 K. B. 130, that the section is not to be read with an unrestricted meaning and that its operation is limited to questions referred to arbitration by other sections of the Act, whether arising during the continuance of the tenancy or after its determination. The common law rights and liabilities of landlord and tenant, including the right to sue in the King's courts, are preserved by sect. 54 of the Act, and the questions and differences dealt with in sect. 16 are only those on rights created by the Act and already by the Act referred to arbitration. This ruling adopts the suggestion made by Scrutton, L.J., in Simpson v. Batey, (1924) 2 K. B. 666 ; 93 L. J. K. B. 919, and Harrison v. Ridgway, (1925) 133 L. T. 238, as to how the section should be construed ; but the decisions in those two cases, and also in Rex v. Powell, (1925) 1 K. B. 641 ; 94 L. J. K. B. 433, cannot now be regarded as having authority.

Section 16.

(2) Any such claim as is mentioned in this section shall cease to be enforceable after the expiration of two months from the termination of the tenancy unless particulars thereof have been given by the landlord to the tenant or by the tenant to the landlord, as the case may be, before the expiration of that period :

See as to meaning of " particulars," Jones v. Evans, (1923) 1 K. B. 12; 92 L. J. K. B. 351.

Provided that, where a tenant lawfully remains in occupation of part of a holding after the termination of the tenancy, particulars of a claim relating to that part of the holding may be given within two months from the termination of the occupation.

(3) Where a claim for compensation under this Act has been referred to arbitration, and the compensation payable under an agreement is by this Act to be substituted for compensation under this Act, such compensation as is to be so substituted shall be awarded in respect of any improvements provided for by the agreement.

(4) If in any arbitration under this Act the arbitrator states a case for the opinion of the county court on any question of law, the opinion of the court on any question so stated shall be final unless within the time and in accordance with the conditions prescribed by Rules of the Supreme Court either party appeals to the court of appeal, from whose decision no appeal shall lie.

This sub-section does not oust the jurisdiction of the High Court where there is error on the face of the award (Jones and Carters' Arbitration, In re, (1922) 2 Ch. 599; 91 L. J. Ch. 824).

It is a general principle that an agreement by the parties to an arbitration that the arbitrator shall not under any circumstances be required to state a special case, is invalid as contrary to public policy (Czarnikow v. Roth & Co., (1922) 2 K. B. 478). An agreement as to costs made between the parties prior to the arbitration is valid and enforceable though the fact of such agreement is not mentioned to the arbitrator (Mansfield v. Robinson, (1928) 2 K. B. 353; 97 L. J. K. B. 466).

52 & 53 Vict.
c. 49.

(5) The Arbitration Act, 1889, shall not apply to any arbitration under this Act.

(6) This section shall not apply in the case of a tenancy which terminated before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

Though the appeal is generally to the Court of Appeal, an appeal lies to a Divisional Court under s. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, upon a question of law in an application to set aside an award (Williams v. Wallis & Cox, (1914) 2 K. B. 478; 83 L. J. K. B. 1296).

Provisions for expediting and reducing costs of arbitrations.
1920, s. 20.

17.—(1) Subject as hereinafter provided, the Minister may by rules make such provision (not being inconsistent with the rules contained in the Second Schedule to this Act) as he thinks desirable for expediting, or reducing the costs of, proceedings on arbitrations under this Act.

(2) On an arbitration under this Act the arbitrator—

Section 17.

(a) shall state separately in his award the amounts awarded in respect of the several claims referred to him; and

(b) may, if he thinks fit, make an interim award for the payment of any sum on account of the sum to be finally awarded.

(3) A rule made under this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament forthwith, and, if an address is presented to His Majesty by either House of Parliament within the next subsequent thirty days on which that House has sat next after any such rule is laid before it praying that the rule may be annulled, it shall thenceforth be void, but without prejudice to the validity of anything previously done thereunder.

18.—(1) Where a holding has become vested in more than one person in several parts and the rent payable by the tenant of the holding has not been apportioned with his consent or under any statute, the tenant shall be entitled to require that any compensation payable to him under this Act shall be determined as if the holding had not been divided, and the arbitrator shall, where necessary, apportion the amount awarded between the persons who for the purposes of this Act together constitute the landlord of the holding, and any additional costs of the award caused by the apportionment shall be directed by the arbitrator to be paid by those persons in such proportions as he shall determine.

Determination of claims for compensation where a holding is divided.
1920, s. 17.

(2) This section shall not apply in the case of a tenancy which terminated before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

19. Where any sum agreed or awarded under this Act to be paid for compensation costs or otherwise by a landlord or tenant of a holding is not paid within fourteen days after the time when the payment becomes due, it shall, subject as in this Act provided, be recoverable upon order made by the county court as money ordered by a county court under its ordinary jurisdiction to be paid is recoverable.

Recovery of compensation and other sums due.
1908, s. 14.

That is, as a judgment debt can be enforced; as to this, see County Courts Act, 1888, s. 146, Order XXV., and Order XL., r. 7, post, p. 1717.

CHARGE ON HOLDING FOR COMPENSATION.

20.—(1) A landlord, on paying to the tenant the amount due to him under this Act, or under custom or agreement, or otherwise, in respect of compensation for an improvement comprised in the First Schedule to this Act or in respect of compensation for disturbance, or on expending after notice given in accordance with this Act such amount as may be necessary to execute an improvement comprised in Part II. of the First Schedule to this Power for landlord on paying compensation to obtain charge.

1908, ss. 15—19.
1920, First Schedule.

Section 20. Act, shall be entitled to obtain from the Minister an order in favour of himself, his executors, administrators, and assigns, charging the holding, or any part thereof, with repayment of the amount paid or expended, and of all costs properly incurred by him in obtaining the charge, with such interest, and by such instalments, and with such directions for giving effect to the charge, as the Minister thinks fit.

“Landlord” includes his executor (Gough v. Gough (C. A.), (1891) 2 Q. B. 665; 60 L. J. Q. B. 726).

(2) Where the landlord obtaining the charge is not absolute owner of the holding for his own benefit, no instalment or interest shall be made payable after the time when the improvement in respect whereof compensation is paid will, in the opinion of the Minister, have become exhausted.

(3) Where the estate or interest of a landlord is determinable or liable to forfeiture by reason of his creating or suffering any charge thereon, that estate or interest shall not be determined or forfeited by reason of his obtaining a charge under this Act, anything in any deed, will, or other instrument to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

(4) The sum charged shall be a charge on the holding, or the part thereof charged, for the landlord's interest therein and for all interests therein subsequent to that of the landlord; but so that, in any case where the landlord's interest is an interest in a leasehold, the charge shall not extend beyond the interest of the landlord, his executors, administrators, and assigns.

(5) Any company now or hereafter incorporated by Parliament, and having power to advance money for the improvement of land, may take an assignment of any charge made under this section, or any like charge made under any repealed enactment, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between the company and the person entitled to the charge, and may assign any charge so acquired by them.

(6) Where a charge may be made under this section for compensation due under an award, the person making the award shall, at the request and cost of the person entitled to obtain the charge, certify the amount to be charged and the term for which the charge may properly be made, having regard to the time at which each improvement in respect of which compensation is awarded is to be deemed to be exhausted.

(7) A charge made under this section shall be a land charge within the meaning of the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888, as amended by any subsequent enactment, and may be registered accordingly.

CAPITAL MONEY APPLICABLE FOR COMPENSATION.

Section 20.

21. [Repealed by Settled Land Act, 1925 (15 Geo. 5, c. 18). See now s. 73 (1) (ii) and (iv) of that Act.]

Capital money applicable for compensation.

1908, s. 20.

FIXTURES AND BUILDINGS.

22.—(1) Any engine, machinery, fencing, or other fixture affixed to a holding by a tenant, and any building erected by him thereon for which he is not under this Act or otherwise entitled to compensation, and which is not so affixed or erected in pursuance of some obligation in that behalf or instead of some fixture or building belonging to the landlord, shall be the property of and be removable by the tenant before or within a reasonable time after the termination of the tenancy : (a) Tenant's property in fixtures and buildings.

1908, s. 21.

Provided that—

- (i.) before the removal of any fixture or building the tenant shall pay all rent owing by him, and shall perform or satisfy all other his obligations to the landlord in respect of the holding :
- (ii.) in the removal of any fixture or building the tenant shall not do any avoidable damage to any other building or other part of the holding :
- (iii.) immediately after the removal of any fixture or building the tenant shall make good all damage occasioned to any other building or other part of the holding by the removal :
- (iv.) the tenant shall not remove any fixture or building without giving one month's previous notice in writing to the landlord of his intention to remove it :
- (v.) at any time before the expiration of the notice of removal the landlord, by notice in writing given by him to the tenant, may elect to purchase any fixture or building comprised in the notice of removal, and any fixture or building thus elected to be purchased shall be left by the tenant, and shall become the property of the landlord, who shall pay to the tenant the fair value thereof to an incoming tenant of the holding.

(2) The provisions of this section shall apply to a fixture or building acquired since the thirty-first day of December nineteen hundred by a tenant in like manner as they apply to a fixture or

Section 22. building affixed or erected by a tenant, but shall not apply to any fixture or building affixed or erected before the first day of January eighteen hundred and eighty-four.

EXTENSION OF TENANCIES UNDER LEASES.

Extension of tenancies under leases for a term of years.

1920, s. 13.

23.—(1) In the case of a tenancy of a holding for a term of two years or upwards, the tenancy shall not terminate on the expiration of the term for which it was granted, unless not less than one year nor more than two years before the date fixed for the expiration of the term a written notice has been given by either party to the other of his intention to terminate the tenancy, and any notice so given shall be deemed to be a notice to quit for the purposes of this Act.

(2) If no such notice is given the tenancy shall, as from the expiration of the term for which it was granted, continue as a tenancy from year to year, but otherwise so far as applicable on the terms of the original tenancy.

(3) This section shall not apply to any tenancy granted, or agreed to be granted, before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

(4) In any case to which this section shall apply, it shall apply notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary.

Extension of tenancies determined by death.

1920, s. 14.

24.—(1) Where the tenancy of any holding held by a tenant at a rackrent determines by the death or cesser of the estate of any landlord entitled for his life, or for any other uncertain interest, instead of claims to emblements, the tenant shall continue to hold and occupy the holding until the occupation is determined by a twelve months' notice to quit expiring at the end of a year of the tenancy, and shall then quit upon the terms of his tenancy in the same manner as if the tenancy were then determined by effluxion of time or other lawful means during the continuance of his landlord's estate.

(2) The succeeding landlord shall be entitled to recover from the tenant, in the same manner as his predecessor could have done, a fair proportion of the rent for the period which may have elapsed from the date of the death or cesser of the estate of such predecessor to the time of the tenant so quitting.

(3) The succeeding landlord and the tenant respectively shall as between themselves and as against each other be entitled to all the benefits and advantages and be subject to the terms, conditions and restrictions to which the preceding landlord and such tenant respectively would have been entitled and subject in case the tenancy had determined in manner aforesaid at the expiration of the said twelve months' notice.

MISCELLANEOUS RIGHTS OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Section 25.

25.—(1) Notwithstanding any provision in a contract of tenancy to the contrary, a notice to quit a holding shall be invalid if it purports to terminate the tenancy before the expiration of twelve months from the end of the then current year of tenancy ; but nothing in this section shall extend to a case where a receiving order in bankruptcy is made against the tenant.

This section applies to a lease for twenty-one years determinable at the end of seven or fourteen years under the express provisions of the deed of demise by six months' notice, and makes such a notice a bad notice (Edell v. Dulieu, (1924) A. C. 38 ; 93 L. J. K. B. 286).

(2) This section shall not apply to—

(a) any notice given by or on behalf of the Admiralty, War Department, or Air Council under the provisions of any agreement of tenancy where possession of the land is required for naval, military, or air-force purposes ; or

(b) any notice given by a corporation carrying on a railway, dock, canal, water, or other undertaking in respect of any land acquired by the corporation for the purposes of their undertaking or by a government department or local authority where possession of the land is required by the corporation, government department or authority for the purpose (not being the use of the land for agriculture) for which it was acquired by the corporation, department, or authority or appropriated under any statutory provision ; or

(c) any notice given in pursuance of a provision in the contract of tenancy authorising the resumption of possession of the holding or some part thereof for some specified purpose, unless that purpose is the use of the land for agriculture ; or

(d) any notice given by a tenant to a sub-tenant ; or

(e) any notice given before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

This section reproduces sect. 33 of the 1883 Act which was held not to apply to any demise in which any stipulation for the determination of the tenancy by notice is contained (Barlow v. Teal (C. A.), (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 501 ; 54 L. J. Q. B. 564). Where by custom a tenant was entitled to hold part of the land for four months after the expiration of his notice to quit, it was held that his tenancy was not determined until the expiration of the four months, hence notice of claim for compensation given two months before that time was good (In re Paul, (1889) 24 Q. B. D. 247 ; 59 L. J. Q. B. 30). In Morley v. Carter, (1898) 1 Q. B. 8 ; 66 L. J. Q. B. 843, where the tenancy of the land expired on February 2nd, and of the buildings on May 1st, it was held that the notice ought to be given with reference to the first date, establishing the principle that the expiration of the tenancy of the land determines when the notice should be given.

Section 25
Notes.

A notice to quit under sect. 83 of the 1883 Act might be sent by registered letter (see sect. 53 of this Act): Van Grutten v. Trevenen (C. A.), (1902) 2 K. B. 82; 71 L. J. K. B. 544.

Restriction of notices to quit.

1919.
1920, First Schedule.

26.—(1) On the making of any contract for sale of a holding or any part of a holding held by a tenant from year to year any then current and unexpired notice to determine the tenancy of the holding given to the tenant either before or after the commencement of this Act shall, if the contract for sale is made by the person by whom the notice to quit was given, be null and void unless the tenant has after the nineteenth day of August nineteen hundred and nineteen, and prior to such contract of sale, by writing, agreed that such notice shall be valid.

(2) This section shall not apply to a contract for sale to a government department or local authority for the purpose of providing small holdings or allotments, or for any other public purpose made before the twentieth day of August nineteen hundred and twenty-two.

See Blay v. Dadsell, (1922) 91 L. J. K. B. 739. Rochester Sewerage Board v. Clinch, (1925) 1 Ch. 753; 95 L. J. Ch. 49.

Resumption of possession of part of holding by landlord.

1908, s. 23.
1920, s. 22.

27.—(1) Where a notice to quit is given by the landlord of a holding to a tenant from year to year with a view to the use of land for any of the following purposes:—

- (i.) The erection of farm labourers' cottages or other houses with or without gardens;
- (ii.) The provision of gardens for farm labourers' cottages or other houses;
- (iii.) The provision of allotments;
- (iv.) The provision of small holdings as defined by the Small Holdings and Allotments Acts, 1908 to 1919;
- (v.) The planting of trees;
- (vi.) The opening or working of any coal, ironstone, limestone, brick earth, or other mineral, or of a stone quarry, clay, sand, or gravel pit, or the construction of any works or buildings to be used in connection therewith;
- (vii.) The making of a watercourse or reservoir;
- (viii.) The making of any road, railway, tramroad, siding, canal, or basin, or any wharf, pier, or other work connected therewith; and the notice states that it is given with a view to any such use—

- (a) it shall, by virtue of this Act, be no objection to the notice that it relates to part only of the holding; and
- (b) the provisions of this Act respecting compensation shall apply as if the part to which the notice relates were a separate holding; and Section 27.

- (c) the tenant shall be entitled to a reduction of rent proportionate to the part to which the notice relates, and in respect of any depreciation of the value to him of the residue of the holding caused by the severance, or by the use to be made of the part severed, and the amount of that reduction shall be settled as in case of compensation under this Act :

Provided that the tenant may, at any time within twenty-eight days after service of the notice to quit, serve on the landlord a notice in writing to the effect that he accepts it as a notice to quit the entire holding, to take effect at the expiration of the then current year of tenancy; and the notice to quit shall have effect accordingly.

(2) Where the landlord of a holding gives notice, in pursuance of a provision in that behalf contained in the contract of tenancy, of his intention to resume possession of some part of the holding, the provisions of paragraphs (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) of this section (but not including the proviso thereto) shall apply as if the notice were such a notice to quit as is mentioned in that sub-section :

Provided that, in assessing the compensation payable to the tenant and the reduction of rent, the arbitrator shall take into consideration any benefit or relief allowed to the tenant under the contract of tenancy in respect of any land resumed in pursuance of such provision.

NOTE.—It appears that where the reversion is severed and notice to quit is given to the tenant by the person entitled to a severed part of the reversion, such notice is valid independently of this section; but the tenant may within twenty-eight days give notice to the persons severally entitled to the severed parts of the reversion that he accepts the notice to quit as a notice to quit the entire holding given by the persons so severally entitled, and thereupon the provisions of sect. 12 (7) (d) of this Act will apply (Law of Property Act, 1925, sect. 140, as amended by sect. 2 of the Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926).

28. The landlord of a holding or any person authorised by him may at all reasonable times enter on the holding for the purpose of viewing the state of the holding. Power of entry by landlord.
1908, s. 24.

29. Notwithstanding any provision in a contract of tenancy making the tenant of a holding liable to pay a higher rent or other liquidated damages in the event of any breach or non-fulfilment of a term or condition in the contract, a landlord shall not be entitled to recover, by distress or otherwise, any sum in consequence of any such breach or non-fulfilment in excess of the Penal rents and liquidated damages.
1908, s. 25.

Section 29. damage actually suffered by him in consequence of the breach or non-fulfilment :

Provided that this section shall not apply to any term or condition in a contract against the breaking up of permanent pasture, the grubbing of underwoods, or the felling, cutting, lopping, or injuring of trees, or regulating the burning of heather.

Penalty cannot be recovered, but liquidated damages can to extent of the actual damage suffered (Willson v. Love, (1896) 1 Q. B. 626; 65 L. J. Q. B. 474).

Freedom of cropping and disposal of produce.

30.—(1) Notwithstanding any custom of the country, or the provisions of any contract of tenancy or agreement respecting the method of cropping of arable lands, or the disposal of crops, a tenant of a holding shall have full right to practise any system of cropping of the arable land on the holding and to dispose of the produce of the holding without incurring any penalty, forfeiture, or liability :

Provided that he shall previously have made, or, as soon as may be, shall make, suitable and adequate provision to protect the holding from injury or deterioration, which provision shall in the case of disposal of the produce of the holding consist in the return to the holding of the full equivalent manurial value to the holding of all crops sold off or removed from the holding in contravention of the custom, contract, or agreement :

This sub-section shall not apply—

- (a) in the case of a tenancy from year to year, as respects the year before the tenant quits the holding or any period after he has given or received notice to quit which results in his quitting the holding ; or
- (b) in any other case, as respects the year before the termination of the tenancy.

Where there is an agreement prohibiting defendant from selling or disposing of hay, straw, or roots during the term, this section does not enable him to sell any such produce off the holding after he has given or received notice to quit which results in his quitting the holding, even though such produce existed before the last year of the tenancy (Meggeson v. Groves, (1917) 86 L. J. Ch. 145).

(2) If the tenant exercises his rights under this section in such a manner as to injure or deteriorate the holding, or to be likely to injure or deteriorate the holding, the landlord shall, without prejudice to any other remedy which may be open to him, be entitled to recover damages in respect of such injury or deterioration at any time, and, should the case so require, to obtain an injunction restraining the exercise of the rights under this section in that manner.

(3) A tenant shall not be entitled to any compensation in respect of improvements comprised in Part III. of the First Schedule to this Act which have been made for the purpose of making such provision to protect the holding from injury or deterioration as is required by this section. Section 30.

(4) In this section the expression "arable land" shall not include land in grass which by the terms of any contract of tenancy is to be retained in the same condition throughout the tenancy.

31. Where notice to terminate the tenancy of a holding is given, either by the tenant or by the landlord, the tenant shall not, subject to any agreement to the contrary, at any time after the date of the notice, sell or remove from the holding any manure or compost, or any hay or straw or roots grown in the last year of the tenancy, unless and until he has given the landlord or incoming tenant a reasonable opportunity of agreeing to purchase on the termination of the tenancy at their fair market value, or at such other value as is provided by the contract of tenancy, the said manure, compost, hay, straw, or roots. Prohibition of removal of manure, etc., after notice to terminate the tenancy. 1920, s. 25.

32. If the landlord or tenant of a holding at any time during the tenancy so requires, a record of the condition of the buildings, fences, gates, roads, drains, ditches and cultivation of the holding, and, if so required by the tenant, a record of any existing improvements executed by the tenant or for which the tenant has with the written consent of his landlord paid compensation to an outgoing tenant and of any fixtures or buildings which under section twenty-two of this Act the tenant is entitled to remove, shall be made by a person to be appointed in default of agreement by the Minister, and in default of agreement the cost of making any such record shall be borne by the landlord and tenant in equal shares. Record of holding. 1920, s. 26.

33.—(1) Where the land comprised in a contract of tenancy is not a holding within the meaning of this Act by reason only of the fact that the land so comprised includes land (hereinafter referred to as "the non-statutory land") which, owing to the nature of the buildings thereon or the use to which it is put, would not, if it had been separately let, be a holding within the meaning of this Act, the provisions of this Act relating to compensation for improvements and disturbance shall, unless otherwise agreed in writing, apply to the part of the land exclusive of the non-statutory land as if that part were a separate holding. Extension of meaning of "holding." 1920, s. 24.

(2) This section shall not apply in relation to a contract of tenancy made before the first day of January nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

DISTRESS,

34. It shall not be lawful for a landlord entitled to the rent of a holding to distrain for rent which became due in respect of that holding more than one year before the making of the distress : Limitation of distress in respect of amount and time. 1908, s. 28.

Section 34.

Provided that, where it appears that according to the ordinary course of dealing between the landlord and the tenant of the holding the payment of rent has been deferred until the expiration of a quarter or half-year after the date at which the rent legally became due, the rent shall for the purpose of this section be deemed to have become due at the expiration of that quarter or half-year, and not at the date at which it legally became due.

This section reproduces in substance sect. 44 of the 1883 Act, which was held merely to take away the right of the landlord to distrain for rent which had been due for more than twelve months, but to leave him his other remedies. Thus, where by the course of dealing payment of rent due in advance on June 24th was deferred for three months, it was held that the landlord was enabled by the proviso in sect. 44 of the 1883 Act to distrain in the middle of September for two years' rent, one in arrear and one in advance (Ex parte Bull, (1887) 18 Q. B. D. 642; 56 L. J. Q. B. 270).

Limitation of distress in respect of things to be distrained.
1908, s. 29.

35.—(1) Where live stock belonging to another person has been taken in by the tenant of a holding to be fed at a fair price, the stock shall not be distrained by the landlord for rent where there is other sufficient distress to be found, and, if so distrained by reason of other sufficient distress not being found, there shall not be recovered by that distress a sum exceeding the amount of the price agreed to be paid for the feeding, or any part thereof which remains unpaid.

(2) The owner of the stock may, at any time before it is sold, redeem the stock by paying to the distrainer a sum equal to such amount as aforesaid, and any payment so made to the distrainer shall be in full discharge as against the tenant of any sum of the like amount which would be otherwise due from the owner of the stock to the tenant in respect of the price of feeding.

(3) Any portion of the stock so long as it remains on the holding shall continue liable to be distrained for the amount for which the whole of the stock is distrainable.

(4) Agricultural or other machinery which is the property of a person other than the tenant, and is on the holding under an agreement with the tenant for the hire or use thereof in the conduct of his business, and live stock which is the property of a person other than the tenant and is on the holding solely for breeding purposes, shall not be distrained for rent.

“Fair price” in the 1883 Act was held to mean a “fair equivalent,” so that cows agisted on terms that the agister should take payment in milk were privileged from distress to the extent mentioned in the section (London and Yorkshire Bank v. Belton, (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 457; 54 L. J. Q. B. 568). An “exclusive right to feed the grass on the land for four weeks” in consideration of 2*l.* was held not an agreement to agist cattle, but in the nature of rent for use and occupation, and not within protection given by the section (Masters v. Green, (1888) 20 Q. B. D. 807).

36.—(1) Where any dispute arises—

- (a) in respect of any distress having been levied on a holding contrary to the provisions of this Act; or
- (b) as to the ownership of any live stock distrained, or as to the price to be paid for the feeding of that stock; or
- (c) as to any other matter or thing relating to a distress on a holding;

Section 36.

Remedy for wrongful distress.
1908, s. 30.

the dispute may be heard and determined by the county court or by a court of summary jurisdiction, and any such court may make an order for restoration of any live stock or things unlawfully distrained, or may declare the price agreed to be paid for feeding, or may make any other order which justice requires.

(2) Any such dispute shall be deemed to be a matter in which a court of summary jurisdiction has authority by law to make an order on complaint in pursuance of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts; but any person aggrieved by any decision of a court of summary jurisdiction under this section may appeal to a court of quarter sessions.

37. Where the compensation for disturbance or for any improvement due under this Act or any enactment repealed by this Act, or under custom or agreement, to a tenant of a holding has been ascertained before the landlord distrains for rent, the amount of the compensation may be set off against the rent, and the landlord shall not be entitled to distrain for more than the balance.

Set-off of compensation against rent.
1908, s. 31.
1920, Sched. I.

No set-off of unascertained claim (Gas Light Co. v. Holloway, (1885) 52 L. T. 434).

PERSONS UNDER DISABILITY, TRUSTEES, ETC.

38. Where a landlord or a tenant is an infant without a guardian, or is of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, the county court on the application of any person interested may appoint a guardian of the infant or person of unsound mind for the purposes of this Act, and may revoke the appointment and appoint another guardian if and as occasion requires.

Appointment of guardian.
1908, s. 32.

39. Where a woman married before the commencement of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, is entitled to land her title to which accrued before that commencement, then—

Provisions respecting married women.

- (a) if she is entitled to the land for her separate use and is not restrained from anticipation, she shall, for the purposes of this Act, be in respect of the land as if she were a feme sole; and
- (b) in any other case her husband's concurrence shall be requisite, and she shall for the purposes of this Act be examined apart from him by the county court, or by the judge of the county court for the place where she is, owners.

1908, s. 34.

40. Subject to the provisions of this Act in relation to Crown, Duchy, Ecclesiastical, and Charity lands, a landlord of a holding, whatever may be his estate or interest in the holding, may give any consent, make any agreement, or do or have done to him any act in relation to improvements in respect of which compensation is payable under this Act, which he might give or make or do or have done to him if he were owner in fee simple or, if his interest is an interest in a leasehold, were absolutely entitled to that leasehold.

Recovery of compensation, etc.
from trustee.

1908, s. 35.

41. Where any sum agreed or awarded to be paid for compensation, or any sum awarded under this Act to be paid by a landlord, is due from a landlord entitled to receive the rents and profits of the holding otherwise than for his own benefit, whether as trustee or in any other character, the sum due shall be charged and recovered as follows and not otherwise (that is to say) :—

- (i.) The amount so due shall not be recoverable personally against the landlord, nor shall he be under any liability to pay that amount, but it shall be a charge on and recoverable against the holding only :
- (ii.) The landlord shall, either before or after having paid to the tenant the amount due to him, be entitled to obtain from the Minister a charge on the holding to the amount of the sum which is required to be paid or which has been paid, as the case may be, to the tenant :
- (iii.) If the landlord neglects or fails to pay to the tenant the amount due to him for one month after it has become due, the tenant shall be entitled to obtain from the Minister a charge on the holding to the amount of the sum due to him, and of all costs properly incurred by him in obtaining the charge :
- (iv.) Charges under this section shall be made in like manner as other charges under this Act.

Estimation of best rent.
1908, s. 36.

42. In estimating the best rent, or reservation in the nature of rent, of a holding for the purposes of any Act of Parliament, deed, or other instrument, authorising a lease to be made, provided that the best rent, or reservation in the nature of rent, is reserved, it shall not be necessary to take into account against the tenant any increase in the value of the holding arising from any improvements made or paid for by the tenant.

CROWN AND DUCHY LANDS.

Section 43.

43.—(1) This Act shall apply to land belonging to His Majesty in right of the Crown. Application to Crown lands.

(4) The amount of any compensation under this Act payable by the Chancellor of the Duchy in respect of an improvement comprised in Part III. of the First Schedule to this Act shall be paid out of the annual revenues of the Duchy.

45.—(1) This Act shall apply to land belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall. Application to land of Duchy of Cornwall.

(2) With respect to any such land, for the purposes of this Act, such person as the Duke of Cornwall, or the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall, appoints, shall represent the Duke of Cornwall or other the possessor aforesaid, and be deemed to be the landlord, and may do any act or thing under this Act which a landlord is authorised or required to do thereunder. 1908, s. 39.

(3) Any compensation under this Act payable by the Duke of Section 45. Cornwall, or other the possessor aforesaid, in respect of an improvement comprised in Part I. or Part II. of the First Schedule to this Act, shall be paid, and advances therefor made, in the manner and subject to the provisions of section eight of the Duchy of Cornwall Management Act, 1863, with respect to improvements of land mentioned in that section.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS AS TO MARKET GARDENS.

Special provisions as to market gardens.

1908, s. 42.
1913, s. 1.

48.—(1) In the case of a holding in respect of which it is agreed by an agreement in writing made on or after the first day of January eighteen hundred and ninety-six that the holding shall be let or treated as a market garden—(a)

(a) Where the agreement declares that the holding "shall not be deemed to be let or treated as a market-garden" no compensation is payable upon leaving, though the holding is in fact a market-garden. Masters v. Duveen, (1924) 2 K. B. 729; 93 L. J. K. B. 57.

(i.) the provisions of this Act shall apply as if the improvements comprised in the Third Schedule to this Act were comprised in Part III. of the First Schedule to this Act:

Provided that—

Section 48.

(a) in the case of Crown lands, compensation in respect of an improvement comprised in paragraphs (1) (2) and (5) of the said Third Schedule shall be paid in the same manner and out of the same funds as if it were an improvement comprised in Part I. of the said First Schedule; and

(b) in the case of Duchy lands, compensation in respect of any improvement comprised in the said Third Schedule shall be paid in the same manner and out of the same funds as if it were comprised in Part I. of the said First Schedule;

(c) the right of an incoming tenant to claim compensation in respect of the whole or part of an improvement which he has purchased may be exercised although his landlord has not consented in writing to the purchase:

(ii.) The provisions of this Act relating to tenants' property in fixtures and buildings shall extend to every fixture or building affixed or erected by the tenant to or upon the holding, or acquired by him since the thirty-first day of December nineteen hundred for the purposes of his trade or business as a market gardener:

(iii.) It shall be lawful for the tenant to remove all fruit trees and fruit bushes planted by him on the holding and not permanently set out; but if the tenant does not remove such fruit trees and fruit bushes before the termination of his tenancy, they shall remain the property of the landlord, and the tenant shall not be entitled to any compensation in respect thereof.

(2) Where under a contract of tenancy current on the first day of January eighteen hundred and ninety-six a holding was at that date in use or cultivation as a market garden with the knowledge of the landlord, and the tenant thereof had then executed thereon, without having received previously to the execution thereof any written notice of dissent by the landlord, any improvement comprised in the Third Schedule to this Act, the provisions of this section shall apply, in respect of that holding, as if it had been agreed in writing after that date that the holding should be let or treated as a market garden, so however that the improvements in respect of which compensation is payable under those provisions as so applied shall include improvements executed before as well as improvements executed after that date.

(3) Where the land to which such agreement relates, or so used

Section 48. and cultivated, consists of part of a holding only, this section shall apply as if that part were a separate holding.

Further provision as to market gardens.
1920, sub-ss. (3), (4), (5), (6) and (7) of s. 15.
1920, s. 27.

49.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this section, where a tenant desires to make on his holding or any part of his holding any improvement comprised in the Third Schedule to this Act and the landlord refuses, or within a reasonable time fails, to agree in writing that the holding or that part of the holding shall be treated as a market garden, the agricultural committee for the area in which the holding is situate may, on the application of the tenant and after hearing the landlord or his representative, and after being satisfied that the holding or part of the holding is suitable for the purposes of market gardening, direct that the last preceding section of this Act shall, either in respect of all the improvements comprised in the said Third Schedule or in respect of some only of those improvements, apply to the holding or to that part thereof, and the said section shall apply accordingly as respects any improvements executed after the date on which the direction is given:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall authorise the breaking up of meadow land or pasture.

Any direction given by an agricultural committee under this sub-section shall be subject to such conditions, if any, for the protection of the landlord, as the committee may think fit to attach to the direction, and, where any such direction is given, the following provisions shall have effect:—

- (a) If the tenancy is terminated by notice to quit given by the tenant or by reason of the tenant becoming bankrupt or compounding with his creditors, the tenant shall not be entitled to compensation in respect of any such improvements as are specified in the direction unless the tenant not later than one month after the date on which the notice to quit is given or the date of the bankruptcy or composition, as the case may be, or such later date as may be agreed, produces to the landlord an offer in writing by a substantial and otherwise suitable person (being an offer which is to hold good for a period of three months from the date on which it is produced), to accept a tenancy of the holding from the termination of the existing tenancy thereof, and on the terms and conditions of that tenancy so far as applicable, and, subject as hereinafter provided, to pay to the outgoing tenant all compensation payable under this Act or under the contract of tenancy, and the landlord fails to accept the offer within three months after the production thereof; and

Section 49.

(b) If the landlord accepts any such offer, the incoming tenant shall pay to the landlord on demand all sums payable to him by the outgoing tenant on the termination of the tenancy in respect of rent or breach of contract or otherwise in respect of the holding, and any amount so paid may, subject to any agreement between the outgoing tenant and incoming tenant, be deducted by the incoming tenant from any compensation payable by him to the outgoing tenant; and

(c) If the direction relates to part only of the holding the direction may, on the application of the landlord, be given subject to the condition that the tenant shall consent to the division of the holding into two parts (one such part being the part to which the direction relates) to be held at rents agreed by the landlord and tenant or in default of agreement settled by the committee, but otherwise on the same terms and conditions as the original holding, so far as applicable.

(2) A new tenancy created by the acceptance of a tenant in accordance with the provisions of this section on the terms and conditions of the existing tenancy shall not be deemed to be a new tenancy for the purposes of the provisions of this Act relating to demands for arbitration as to rent.

(3) The powers under this section of an agricultural committee may, in the case of a holding situate in a county borough for which an agricultural committee has not been appointed, be exercised by the Minister.

(4) In the exercise of their powers under this section the agricultural committee and the Minister shall have regard to the likelihood of the land being required for any purpose other than agriculture.

(5) If in any case a landlord or tenant by notice in writing given to the other party shall so require, the powers which under this section may be exercised by a committee shall in that case be exercised by an arbitrator appointed and acting under and in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(6) Where any agreement in writing secures to the tenant of a holding for any improvement to which the provisions of the last preceding section of this Act apply, or are directed under this section to apply, fair and reasonable compensation, having regard to the circumstances existing at the time of making the agreement, the compensation so secured shall as respects that improvement be substituted for compensation under this Act.

5. An application to the Court under rule 40 or rule 41 in the first schedule to the Ballot Act, 1872, as applied by rule 64 in the said schedule, may be made in writing and shall be intituled in the matter of the Acts and of the particular matter. Such application shall be made in accordance with the rules for the time being in force as to interlocutory applications, save that, unless by consent or otherwise ordered only oral evidence shall be admitted. Costs if allowed shall be taxed on such scale as the judge shall direct.

122. [This section relates to administration orders, and is set out, ante, pp. 285 et seq.]

145. Where the sheriff sells the goods of a debtor under an execution for a sum exceeding twenty pounds (including legal incidental expenses), the sale shall, unless the court from which the process issued otherwise orders, be made by public auction, and not by bill of sale or private contract, and shall be publicly advertised by the sheriff on and during three days next preceding the day of sale.

Sales under executions to be public.

“ Sheriff ” apparently includes high bailiff.

This section is preserved by the 6th Sched. of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914. The purchaser acquires a good title against the trustee in bankruptcy (see sect. 40, sub-s. 3, Bankruptcy Act, 1914, post, p. 1759).

Private Sale.—An application for a sale otherwise than by auction must be made to the court on notice (Form 170), stating the grounds of application. The high bailiff must deliver to any applicant a list of the names and addresses of every person at whose instance any warrant or writ of execution has been lodged with him. This list must be produced to the court on the hearing. The notice must be served on every person named in the list except the applicant four clear days at least before the return day of the notice (Order XXV. r. 24).

If the high bailiff has notice of another execution or executions the court may not consider an application to sell privately until notice has been given to the other execution creditors (Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 12, infra). Every person on whom notice is served may attend the hearing and be heard. The court may order all or any part of the costs to be paid by any of the persons who attend (Order XXV. r. 24).

Account of Sale.—The high bailiff must, on the request of the execution debtor, furnish him with a detailed account in writing of the sale and of the application of the proceeds thereof (Order XXV. r. 23).

the court shall not consider an application for leave to sell privately until the notice directed by rules of court has been given to the other execution creditor or creditors, who may appear before the court and be heard upon the application.

Every person on whom notice is served may attend the hearing and be heard. The court may order all or any part of the costs to be paid by any of the persons who attend (Order XXV. r. 24).

The high bailiff must, on the request of the execution debtor, furnish him with a detailed account in writing of the sale, and of the application of the proceeds thereof (Order XXV. r. 23).

BANKRUPTCY AND DEEDS OF ARRANGEMENT ACT, 1913.

[3 & 4 GEO. 5, c. 34.]

15. Where any goods in the possession of an execution debtor at the time of seizure by a sheriff, high bailiff, or other officer charged with the enforcement of a writ, warrant, or other process of execution, are sold by such sheriff, high bailiff, or other officer, without any claim having been made to the same, the purchaser of the goods so sold shall acquire a good title to the goods so sold, and no person shall be entitled to recover against the sheriff, high bailiff, or other officer, or anyone lawfully acting under the authority of either of them, except as provided by the Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 and 1890, for any sale of such goods or for paying over the proceeds thereof, prior to the receipt of a claim to the said goods unless it is proved that the person from whom recovery is sought had notice, or might by making reasonable inquiry have ascertained that the goods were not the property of an execution debtor. Provided that nothing in this section contained shall affect the right of any claimant who may prove that at the time of sale he had a title to any goods so seized and sold to any remedy to which he may be entitled against any person other than such sheriff, high bailiff, or other officer as aforesaid.

NOTE.—This section overrules the decisions in L. C. & D. Rly. Co. v. Cable, (1899) 80 L. T. 119; Crane v. Ormerod, (1903) 2 K. B. 37; and Jelks v. Hayward, (1905) 2 K. B. 460.

THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1914.

[4 & 5 GEO. 5, c. 59.]

Compositions and schemes of arrangement.

16.—(9) If the court is of opinion that the terms of the proposal are not reasonable, or are not calculated to benefit the general body of creditors, or in any case in which the court is required where the debtor is adjudged bankrupt to refuse his discharge, the court shall refuse to approve the proposal. Section 16.

(10) If any facts are proved on proof of which the court would be required either to refuse, suspend, or attach conditions to the debtor's discharge were he adjudged bankrupt, the court shall refuse to approve the proposal, unless it provides reasonable security for payment of not less than five shillings in the pound on all the unsecured debts provable against the debtor's estate.

(11) In any other case the court may either approve or refuse to approve the proposal.

40.—(1) Where a creditor has issued execution against the goods or lands of a debtor, or has attached any debt due to him, he shall not be entitled to retain the benefit of the execution or attachment against the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor, unless he has completed the execution or attachment before the date of the receiving order, and before notice of the presentation of any bankruptcy petition by or against the debtor, or of the commission of any available act of bankruptcy by the debtor. Restriction of rights of creditor under execution or attachment.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, an execution against goods is completed by seizure and sale; an attachment of a debt is completed by receipt of the debt; and an execution against land is completed by seizure, or, in the case of an equitable interest, by the appointment of a receiver.

(3) An execution levied by seizure and sale on the goods of a debtor is not invalid by reason only of its being an act of bankruptcy, and a person who purchases the goods in good faith under a sale by the sheriff shall in all cases acquire a good title to them against the trustee in bankruptcy.

Attachment of Debt.—The actual receipt of the debt is essential, the undertaking of the garnishee to pay will not suffice (Re Trehearne (C. A.), (1890) 60 L. J. Q. B. 50).

Receiver.—It has been held in the High Court that where a certificate of a decree of the Court of Session in Scotland has been registered in the High Court under the Judgments Extension Act, 1868, that court has the same jurisdiction to appoint a receiver by way of equitable execution as if the judgment had been originally obtained in the High Court (Thompson v. Gill (C. A.), (1903) 88 L. T. 714).

The receiver may be appointed in the action by order made after final judgment; no new action is necessary (Salt v. Cooper (C. A.), (1880) 16 Ch. D. 544; 50 L. J. Ch. 529). It has been decided that when the order is made as to land, it is equivalent to an actual delivery in execution (Hatton v. Haywood, (1874) L. R. 9 Ch. 229; 43 L. J. Ch. 372), and therefore equivalent to a writ or order under the Land Charges Act, 1925 (15 Geo. V. c. 22, sect. 6), and gives the judgment creditor priority over a subsequent purchaser of the judgment debtor's interest (Re Pope, (1886) 17 Q. B. D. 743; 55 L. J. Q. B. 522), provided it be registered pursuant to that Act. The order will, moreover, complete the execution, as regards an equitable interest in land, against the trustee in bankruptcy for the purpose of the section ; but when the order is made as to goods, even if it is to be treated as an execution, the mere possession of the receiver under it will not complete the execution for the purposes of the same section (Re Dickinson (C.A.), (1888) 22 Q. B. D. 187 ; 58 L. J. Q. B. 1).

The judge, in determining whether it is just or convenient that a receiver should be appointed, should, amongst other things, have regard to the amount which could probably be obtained by a receiver, and to the probable costs of appointment, and if necessary may direct inquiries on these points before making the appointment (Order XIII. r. 13). Where the debt and costs exceed 50*l.*, but do not exceed 100*l.*, the total amount to be allowed for costs, including the cost of receiver's appointment, completing his security, passing his accounts and obtaining his discharge, but exclusive of his salary, must not exceed 2½ per cent. of such debt and costs (Order XIII. r. 14 (1)) ; where debt and costs exceed 20*l.*, but do not exceed 50*l.*, the total amount allowed is not to exceed 1*l.* 5*s.* for costs (Order XIII. r. 14 (2)) ; where debt and costs exceed 5*l.*, but do not exceed 20*l.*, there may be allowed for costs not less than 7*s.* 6*d.*, or more than 1*l.*, as the judge shall direct (Order XIII. r. 14 (3)).

When a receiver is appointed by way of equitable execution where the debt and costs do not exceed 50*l.*, the judge may direct that instead of the receiver giving security, the applicant shall be answerable for his acts and defaults, and that the receiver shall not receive more, without leave of the court, than the debt and costs, the allowance to the receiver and the costs of the receiver's appointment (Order XIII. r. 14 (4)).

Forms 300A and 300B in the Appendix, with necessary modifications, may be used for interim or final orders for the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution (Order XIII. r. 15).

Duties of sheriff as to goods taken in execution.

41.—(1) Where any goods of a debtor are taken in execution and before the sale thereof, or the completion of the execution by the receipt or recovery of the full amount of the levy, notice is served on the sheriff that a receiving order has been made against the debtor, the sheriff shall, on request, deliver the goods and any money seized or received in part satisfaction of the execution to the official receiver, but the costs of the execution shall be a first charge on the goods or money so delivered, and the official receiver or trustee may sell the goods, or an adequate part thereof, for the purpose of satisfying the charge.

(2) Where under an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding twenty pounds, the goods of a debtor are sold or money is paid in order to avoid sale, the sheriff shall deduct his costs of the execution from the proceeds of sale or the money paid, and retain the balance for fourteen days, and if within that time notice is served on him of a bankruptcy petition having been presented against or by the debtor, and a receiving order is made against the debtor thereon or on any other petition of which the sheriff has notice, the sheriff shall pay the balance to the official receiver or, as the case may be, to the trustee, who shall be entitled to retain the same as against the execution creditor.

The official receiver is not, under the above sub-section, entitled to the proceeds where in an execution against a firm the partnership goods are sold and within fourteen days a receiving order is made against one partner (Dibb Brooke, (1894) 2 Q. B. 338; 63 L. J. Q. B. 665). Also, an administration order in the case of a deceased insolvent is not for the purposes of this section equivalent to a receiving order (Hasluck v. Clark, (1899) 1 Q. B. 699; 68 L. J. Q. B. 486).

Section 41.
Notes.

“Balance.”—This means the balance proper, i.e., the balance after the payment of the sheriff's costs, and where the execution creditor had paid 20*l.* for rent due to the landlord, and the sheriff then sold the debtor's goods and paid over the whole value (less his expenses) to the trustee in bankruptcy, held he had paid over 220*l.* which formed no part of the debtor's estate, and the trustee in bankruptcy must return such sum. Section 1 of the statute of 8 Anne, c. 14 (which requires the landlord's rent to a limited extent to be paid as a first charge on goods seized in execution), is not overridden by sect. 41 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (In re Craig & Sons, Ex parte Hinchcliffe, (1916) 2 K. B. 497; 85 L. J. K. B. 1537).

Execution being levied, the judgment debtor paid debt and costs to the execution creditors direct, and the sheriff withdrew. In less than fourteen days after the debtor had a receiving order made against him. Held, that the execution had not been completed, and the execution creditors must pay the money to the trustee in bankruptcy (In re Godding, (1914) 2 K. B. 70; 83 L. J. K. B. 1222). See sect. 40, ante, p. 1759.

In Bower v. Hett, (1895) 2 Q. B. 337; 64 L. J. Q. B. 772 the Court of Appeal held that where the debtor's father paid the money to avoid seizure (the sheriff being out of possession) the money was not paid “to avoid sale” and the sheriff was not entitled to retain the money for fourteen days.

In ascertaining the 20*l.* in sub-sect. 2 (supra) the amount of the execution, not the judgment, must be looked at (Howes v. Young, (1876) 1 Ex. D. 146), and the costs of the high bailiff to the time of sale must be included (Ex parte Sims, (1877) 5 Ch. D. 375; 46 L. J. Bk. 103); but not the expenses of possession money, appraisement and sale, unless they have been actually incurred (Willey v. Hucks, (1909) 1 K. B. 760; 78 L. J. K. B. 513).

This notice to be effective ought to be served on the high bailiff or at his office, and not on the bailiff in possession (see Ex parte Warren (C. A.), (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 48; 54 L. J. Q. B. 320; Bellyse v. McGinn, (1891) 2 Q. B. 227).

After completion of the levy, the high bailiff must within twenty-four hours send notice of the levy and of the amount realised to the registrar of the court out of which the warrant originally issued and to the execution creditor (Order II. r. 35; Form 171). If he has paid the money over to the registrar without notice of the receiving order, he is now protected, but must give notice to the registrar forthwith when such knowledge comes to him. The registrar, after deducting the costs of execution, must account to the official receiver (Bankruptcy Rule 323A, post, p. 1764).

“Any other petition of which the sheriff has notice.”—The words “any other petition” include any subsequent petition of which the sheriff has notice whilst so holding although presented after the expiration of the fourteen days (Latter v. Jukes, (1927) 1 K. B. 17).

Purchaser acquires Good Title.—An execution levied by seizure and sale is not invalid by reason only of its being an act of bankruptcy, and a person who purchases the goods in good faith under a sale by the high bailiff acquires a good title against the trustee (Bankruptcy Act, 1914, s. 40 (3), ante, p. 1759).

103. A county court shall, for the purposes of its bankruptcy jurisdiction, in addition to the ordinary powers of the court, have all the powers and jurisdiction of the High Court, and the orders of the court may be enforced accordingly in manner prescribed. Powers of county court.

See Savill v. Dalton, and notes to sects. 56 and 63 of County Courts Act.

Section 105

General power of

105.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy under this Act shall have full power to decide all questions of priorities, and all other questions whatsoever, whether of law or fact, which may arise in any case of bankruptcy coming within the cognizance of the court, or which the court may deem it expedient or necessary to decide for the purpose of doing complete justice or making a complete distribution of property in any such case :

Provided that the jurisdiction hereby given shall not be exercised by the county court for the purpose of adjudicating upon any claim, not arising out of the bankruptcy, which might heretofore have been enforced by action in the High Court, unless all parties to the proceeding consent thereto, or the money, money's worth, or right in dispute does not, in the opinion of the judge, exceed in value two hundred pounds.

Judgment
debtor's summons to be bankruptcy business.

107.—(1) It shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor by order to direct that the jurisdiction and powers under section five of the Debtors Act, 1869, now vested in the High Court, shall be assigned to and exercised by the judge to whom bankruptcy business is assigned.

(2) It shall be lawful also for the Lord Chancellor in like manner to direct that the whole or any part of the said jurisdiction and powers shall be delegated to and exercised by the registrars in bankruptcy of the High Court.

(3) Any order made under this section may, at any time, in like manner, be rescinded or varied.

(4) Where, under section five of the Debtors Act, 1869, application is made by a judgment creditor to a court, having bankruptcy jurisdiction, for the committal of a judgment debtor, the court may, if it thinks fit, decline to commit, and in lieu thereof, with the consent of the judgment creditor, and on payment by him of the prescribed fee, make a receiving order against the debtor. In such case the judgment debtor shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy at the time the order is made, and the provisions of this Act, except Part VII. thereof, shall apply as if for references to the presentation of a petition by or against a person there were substituted references to the making of such a receiving order.

Receiving Order.—The creditor will have to pay the same fee and deposit as are required on a bankruptcy petition, and if he does not consent to pay them, the court may dismiss the application or adjourn it on such terms as may be just (Bankruptcy Rules, 1915, r. 376). The receiving order cannot be made if there is no evidence of means before the county court judge (In re a Debtor, Ex parte the Debtor, (1905) 1 K. B. 375; 74 L. J. K. B. 362; and see In re Clark (C. A.), (1898) 1 Q. B. 20; 66 L. J. Q. B. 875); though it has been held that the absence of means is immaterial in a case where the debtor had made an assignment of the whole of his property on the morning of the day when judgment was given against him (R. v. Sussex C. C., (1888) 59 L. T. 32).

Section 107
Notes.

Transfer to Another Court.]—If the court has bankruptcy jurisdiction, but still is not the court to which a bankruptcy petition against a debtor could be properly presented, the court may make the order, but must then transfer the proceedings to the court to which a petition would be properly presented. The registrar must then transmit the proceedings and a sealed copy of the order of transfer to the registrar of the other court (Bankruptcy Rules, 1915, r. 378, post, p. 1766).

Transfer to Court having Bankruptcy Jurisdiction.]—Where the application is made to a court not having bankruptcy jurisdiction, if the judge is of opinion that a receiving order should be made in lieu of a commitment, he may order the matter to be transferred to the court to which a bankruptcy petition against the debtor might be presented. The registrar must then transmit by post to the court to which the matter is transferred, the proceedings in the matter, together with a copy of the order of transfer (Bankruptcy Rules, 1915, r. 377, post, p. 1765).

Notice of the order and of the subsequent proceedings must be served on the judgment debtor. The court to which the proceedings are transferred does not appear to be bound by the opinion of the court which transfers, but must decide on the merits (Re Andrews, (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 335; 54 L. J. Q. B. 572). The order of transfer suspends the operation of any commitment previously made (Re Ryley, (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 329; 54 L. J. Q. B. 420).

The court may also make an administration order if the total liabilities of the debtor do not exceed 50*l.* and the court thinks that an order of commitment ought not to be made (Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, r. 358), ante, p. 291.

(5) General rules under this Act may be made for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Debtors Act, 1869.

APPEALS.

108.—(1) Every court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy under this Act may review, rescind, or vary any order made by it under its bankruptcy jurisdiction. Appeals in bankruptcy.

See In re A Debtor; Ex parte Goldstein, (1917) 1 K. B. 558; 86 L. J. K. B. 705.

(2) Orders in bankruptcy matters shall, at the instance of any person aggrieved, be subject to appeal as follows:—

(a) Where the order is made by a county court, an appeal shall lie to a divisional court of the High Court, of which the judge to whom bankruptcy business is for the time being assigned shall, for the purpose of hearing any such appeal, be a member. The decision of the divisional court upon any such appeal shall be final and conclusive, unless in any case the divisional court or the Court of Appeal sees fit to give special leave to appeal therefrom to the court of appeal, whose decision in such case shall be final and conclusive;

122. The High Court, the county courts, the courts having jurisdiction in bankruptcy in Scotland and Ireland, and every Courts to be auxiliary to each other.

Section 122. British court elsewhere having jurisdiction in bankruptcy or insolvency, and the officers of those courts respectively, shall severally act in aid of and be auxiliary to each other on all matters of bankruptcy, and an order of the court seeking aid, with a request to another of the said courts, shall be deemed sufficient to enable the latter court to exercise, in regard to the matters directed by the order, such jurisdiction as either the court which made the request, or the court to which the request is made, could exercise in regard to similar matters within their respective jurisdictions.

See In re Marquis of Huntley; Ex parte Goldstein, (1917) 2 K. B. 728; (1918) 87 L. J. K. B. 735.

Married women.

125.—(1) Every married woman who carries on a trade or business, whether separately from her husband or not, shall be subject to the bankruptcy laws as if she were a feme sole.

(2) Where a married woman carries on a trade or business, and a final judgment or order for any amount has been obtained against her, whether or not expressed to be payable out of her separate property, that judgment or order shall be available for bankruptcy proceedings against her by a bankruptcy notice as though she were personally bound to pay the judgment debt or sum ordered to be paid.

Under this section bankruptcy proceedings can be taken upon a judgment obtained after the Act came into force in respect of a debt incurred before the Act came into force (Clark, In re, Pope, Ex parte, (1914) 3 K. B. 1095; 84 L. J. K. B. 89).

A married woman continues to carry on business so long as any business debt remains unpaid. A judgment against her in tort arising out of the negligence of her servant, is available for bankruptcy proceedings against her under this section (Allen, In re, (1915) 1 K. B. 285; 84 L. J. K. B. 271).

As to the meaning of "trade or business" within this section, see Re a Debtor, (1926) 135 L. T. 689.

Gazette to be evidence.

137.—(1) A copy of the London Gazette containing any notice inserted therein in pursuance of this Act shall be evidence of the facts stated in the notice.

(2) The production of a copy of the London Gazette containing any notice of a receiving order, or of an order adjudging a debtor bankrupt, shall be conclusive evidence in all legal proceedings of the order having been duly made, and of its date.

Interpretation of terms.

167. In this Act, "sheriff" includes any officer charged with the execution of a writ or other process.

THE BANKRUPTCY RULES, 1915.

323A.—(1) Payment by the High Bailiff of a County Court to the Registrar, pursuant to the County Court Rules for the time being in force, of any money seized or received by such High Bailiff in part satisfaction of an Execution, shall be a good discharge to him as against the Official Receiver under Section 41 (1) of the Act, provided that such payment is made without notice that a Receiving Order has been made against the Execution Debtor.

Rule 323a.

(2) When notice is given to the High Bailiff of such a Receiving Order as is mentioned in paragraph (1) of this Rule, he shall forthwith inform the Registrar thereof, and the Registrar shall, after deducting the costs of execution, on request pay over to the Official Receiver all monies paid to him by the High Bailiff in respect of the execution and not paid out by the Registrar before he has notice of the Receiving Order.

376.—(1) When a receiving order is made under section 107 (4) of the Act, the creditor shall pay the like fee and deposit as are prescribed in the case of a bankruptcy petition. Fee on receiving order.

(2) Where the court is of opinion that a receiving order ought to be made in lieu of committal, and the judgment creditor does not consent to pay the required fee and deposit, the court may dismiss the application or adjourn it on such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as may be just.

The receiving order cannot be made if there is no evidence of means before the county court judge (In re a Debtor, Ex parte the Debtor, (1905) 1 K. B. 375; 74 L. J. K. B. 362; and see In re Clark (C. A.), (1898) 1 Q. B. 20; 66 L. J. Q. B. 875), though it has been held that the absence of means is immaterial in a case where the debtor had made an assignment of the whole of his property on the morning of the day when judgment was given against him (R. v. Sussex C. C., (1888) 59 L. T. 32).

377.—(1) Where an application to commit is made to the judge of a court not having bankruptcy jurisdiction, and he is of opinion that a receiving order should be made in lieu of committal, he may order the matter to be transferred to the court to which, under the provisions of the Act and rules, a bankruptcy petition against the debtor in relation to the amount of the judgment debt would at the date of the transfer be properly presented. Transfer in lieu of committal.

(2) In such case the registrar of the court making the transfer shall transmit by post to the registrar of the court to which the matter is transferred the proceedings in the matter, together with a copy of the order of transfer.

Notice of the order and of the subsequent proceedings must be served on the judgment debtor. The court to which the proceedings are transferred does not appear to be bound by the opinion of the court which transfers, but must decide on the merits (Re Andrews, (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 335; 54 L. J. Q. B. 572). The order of transfer suspends the operation of any

commitment previously made (Re Ryley, (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 329; 54 L. J. Q. B. 420).

378.—(1) Where under section 107 of the Act a receiving order is made by a court to which a bankruptcy petition against the debtor could not properly be presented, the court making the order shall by the order transfer the matter to the court to which a bankruptcy petition against the debtor would properly be presented, and thereupon the official receiver of such latter court shall be constituted the official receiver of the debtor's estate, and all proceedings shall be taken as if the receiving order had been made by such latter court.

(2) Where any such order of transfer is made the registrar of the court making the transfer shall forthwith transmit by post to the registrar of the court to which the matter is transferred the proceedings in the matter, together with a sealed copy of the order of transfer, and the registrar of the latter court shall forthwith give notice of the transfer to the official receiver and the Board of Trade.

County court rules apply.

379. The county court rules for the time being in force as to the committal of judgment debtors shall, with any necessary modifications, apply to all courts exercising jurisdiction under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, provided that any reference therein to the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, shall be deemed to extend also to the corresponding provisions of the Act (Act of 1914).

BILLS OF SALE ACT, 1882.

[45 & 46 VICT. c. 43.]

AS AMENDED BY ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE ACT, 1925 (15 & 16 GEO. 5, c. 28), s. 23.

Sect. 11 of this Act (infra) casts a ministerial duty upon the registrar of county courts outside the London bankruptcy district to file, keep and index in the prescribed manner the abstract (a) sent to him by the registrar of bills of sale, of all bills of sale given by persons residing in the county court district. The county court registrar's duties and the remuneration are prescribed by the rules of the Supreme Court, infra.

An omission to transmit the abstract to the county court registrar does not invalidate the registration (Trinder v. Raynor, (1887) 56 L. J. Q. B. 422).

(a) Copies of bills of sale themselves, not abstracts only, have now to be sent (Administration of Justice Act (supra)).

Local registration of contents of bill of sale.

11. Where the affidavit (which under section ten of the principal Act is required to accompany a bill of sale when presented for registration) describes the residence of the person making or giving the same, or of the person against whom the process is issued to be in some place outside the London bankruptcy district as defined by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, or where the bill of sale describes the chattels enumerated therein as being in some place outside the said London bankruptcy district, the registrar under the principal Act shall forthwith and within three clear days after registration in the principal registry, and in accordance with the prescribed directions, transmit an abstract (a) in the prescribed form of the contents of such bill of sale to the county court registrar in whose district such places are situate, and if such places are in the districts of different registrars, to each such registrar.

Every abstract (a) so transmitted shall be filed, kept, and indexed by the registrar of the county court in the prescribed manner, and any person may search, inspect, make extracts from, and obtain copies of the abstract so registered in the like manner and upon the like terms as to payment or otherwise as near as may be as in the case of bills of sale registered by the registrar under the principal Act.

(a) By sect. 23 (supra) copies of the bills of sale must now be sent instead of an abstract.

NOTE.—A sale of chattels in their house by a husband to his wife when they are living in the same house together does not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act. Where the possession is a mixed possession, possession follows the title (Ramsey v. Margrett, (1894) 2 Q. B. 18). The rule would seem to be the same where the husband, residing with his wife, gives by deed such chattels to his wife (Trench v. Gething, (1921) 3 K. B. 230).

See Marshall and Snellgrove, Ltd. v. I. F. Gower, (1923) 92 L. J. K. B. 499.

Where goods are described in the bill of sale as belonging to husband and wife, the grantors of the bill of sale, and are subsequently found to belong to the wife only, the bill of sale, except as against the grantor, is void (Gordon v. Goldstein (I. Goldstein and anr., Claimants), (1924) 2 K. B. 779; (1925) 94 L. J. K. B. 21).

10. Search and Inspection of Abstract.—The registrar shall allow any person to search the index at any time during which he is required by the County Court Rules for the time being to keep his office open, upon payment by such person of one shilling; and to make extracts from the abstract or notice of satisfaction upon payment of one shilling for each abstract or notice of satisfaction inspected.

11. Office Copy of Abstract.—The registrar shall also, if required, cause an office copy to be made of any abstract or notice of satisfaction, and shall be entitled for making, marking and sealing the same to the same fee as is payable in the Bills of Sale Department of the Central Office of the Supreme Court of Judicature, viz., sixpence per folio.

BRINE PUMPING (COMPENSATION FOR SUBSIDENCE) ACT, 1891.

[54 & 55 VICT. c. 40.]

This Act enables an owner or owners of land of a rateable value of 2,000*l.* alleging subsidence of such land by brine pumping operations, to apply to the Local Government Board for the formation of a compensation district

(sect. 1). Every district formed under the Act shall have a compensation board (sect. 9). Such board, if and when appointed, shall form and maintain (sect. 21) a compensation fund for the district solely applicable to compensation for damage arising from subsidence. Such fund is derived from the assessment and levy of a rate per thousand gallons of brine pumped within the district.

Jurisdiction.]—The jurisdiction of county courts is limited (1) to the recovery as a debt of the sum awarded (sect. 26); (2) in allowing or disallowing a claim on the ground that the claimant had or had not such title or interest in the property damaged by subsidence as would entitle him to recover (sect. 27).

Practice in County Court.]—This is governed by Order L. rr. 19—21, post, p. 1771.

Appeal.]—An appeal from the county court under sect. 27 will be as provided by sect. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888 (sect. 27 (5)).

Court Fees.]—The fees payable under this Act are prescribed by the County Court Fees Order, 1925, as follows :—

(44) (i.) On entering an appeal under sect. 27 of the Act	2	0	0
(ii.) On hearing the appeal (including the order made thereon)	2	0	0

Recovery of sums awarded.

26. Any sum awarded by a compensation board to be paid under any of the provisions of this Act shall be certified by the clerk of the board under his hand, and may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be recovered as a debt at the expiration of three months from the date of such certificate in the county court within whose jurisdiction the property to which the claim relates is situate.

Appeal on questions
of title.

27.—(1) If a board disallow a claim or any item thereof on the ground that the claimant had not, as respects such claim or item, such title or interest in the property damaged by subsidence as would entitle him to recover under this Act, the claimant may appeal in manner in this section mentioned on the ground that he had such title or interest.

(2) If a board allow a claim or any item thereof, any person assessed to the last rate made under this Act in and for the district may appeal in manner in this section mentioned against such allowance on the ground that the board ought to have decided that the claimant had not (as respects such claim or item) such title or interest as hereinbefore mentioned.

(3) Notice of appeal under this section must be given in writing to the board at the meeting at which the decision appealed against is given, or within three weeks afterwards.

(4) The appeal shall be brought in the county court within whose jurisdiction the land is situate, in manner prescribed by rules made or to be made by the authority for the time being empowered to make rules for the procedure and practice of county courts. Section 27.

(5) The judgment of the county court shall be binding on all persons, subject to an appeal to the Supreme Court according to the practice for the time being in use with respect to appeals from county courts. Appeal from county court.

(6) The costs of any appeal under this section shall be in the discretion of the court in which the same are incurred.

(7) If as a consequence of any decision on appeal under this section any damage is to be assessed, increased, or reduced, the claim shall stand remitted to the board to be adjudicated, and allowed, altered, increased, or reduced as the case may require.

* * * * *

29. In no case shall there be any appeal, by special case or otherwise, where the amount claimed does not exceed one hundred pounds. Limit of appeal.

COUNTY COURT RULES, ORDER L., RR. 19—21.

19. Any person desirous of appealing to the court under sect. 27 of the Brine Pumping (Compensation for Subsidence) Act, 1891, shall within fourteen days from the date of giving notice of appeal file with the registrar a written statement of the decision of the board and of the grounds of appeal against such decision, together with as many copies thereof as there are respondents to the appeal. Appeals under 54 & 55 Vict. c. 40, s. 7.

20. The registrar shall forthwith on the filing of the said statement and copies enter a plaint and issue a summons calling upon the board and (in the case of an appeal against the allowance of a claim or any item thereof) upon the claimant to show cause why the decision of the board should not be reversed or modified, and shall annex to the summons for service on each respondent a copy of the said statement, which copy shall be deemed to be part of the summons. Entry of plaint and issue of summons. [Conf. Form 446.]

21. The practice, procedure, and costs in an action shall be applicable to an appeal under the said section. Practice and costs.

THE BUILDING SOCIETIES ACTS, 1874 AND 1894.

[37 & 38 VICT. c. 42; 57 & 58 VICT. c. 47.]

Jurisdiction of the county court under these Acts is partly exclusive and partly concurrent with the High Court, and relates to four different matters: (1) as to defaults of officers (sect. 24); (2) as to winding-up (sect. 32); (3) as to enforcing awards of arbitrators (sect. 34); (4) as to decision of disputes between a society and its members (sect. 35).

“The Court” in the 1874 Act means the county court of the district in which the chief office or place of meeting for business of the society is situate. See sect. 4.

Appeal.]—Every determination of a dispute by arbitrators or by the court or by the registrar shall be binding on all parties and shall be final, provided that the arbitrators or registrar or the court may at the request of either party state a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court on any question of law (sect. 36), but are not compelled to do so (sect. 20, 1894 Act).

37 & 38 VICT. c. 42.

4. The court in this Act means,— Definition of court.

In England, the county court of the district in which the chief office or place of meeting for the business of the society is situate. . . .

Matters to be set forth in the rules.

16. The rules of every society hereafter established under this Act shall set forth :—

- (9) Whether disputes between the society and any of its members, or any person claiming by or through any member, or under the rules, shall be settled by reference to the court, or to the registrar, or to arbitration.

Officers to account.

24. Every such officer, his executors or administrators, shall, upon demand made, or notice in writing given or left at his last or usual place of residence, give in his account as may be required by the board of directors or committee of management of the society to be examined and allowed or disallowed by them, and shall, on the like demand or notice, pay over all the moneys remaining in his hands, and deliver all securities and effects, books, papers, and property of the society in his hands or custody, to such person as the society appoint ; and in case of any neglect or refusal to deliver such account, or to pay over such moneys, or to deliver such securities and effects, books, papers, and property, in manner aforesaid, the society may sue upon the bond or may apply to the court, who may proceed thereupon in a summary way, and make such order thereon as to the court in its discretion shall seem just, which order shall be final and conclusive.

Practice.]—The jurisdiction under sect. 24 is exclusive. Proceedings should be by action commenced by plaint and summons, the society being plaintiffs and the officer in default defendant (Order XLI. r. 7, post, p. 1779). Particulars of demand must be filed (ib. rr. 8, 9, 10).

Proceedings necessary for the termination or dissolution of a society.

32. A society under this Act may terminate or be dissolved—

- (1) Upon the happening of any event declared by its rules to be the termination of the society.
- (2) By dissolution in manner prescribed by its rules.
- (3) By dissolution with the consent of three-fourths of the members holding not less than two-thirds of the number of shares in the society, testified by their signatures to the instrument of dissolution. The instrument of dissolution shall set forth— Section 32.

- (a) The liabilities and assets of the society in detail.
- (b) The number of members, and the amount standing to their credit in the books of the society.
- (c) The claims of depositors and other creditors, and the provision to be made for their payment.
- (d) The intended appropriation or division of the funds and property of the society.
- (e) The names of one or more persons to be appointed trustees for the special purpose, and their remuneration.

Alterations in the instrument of dissolution may be made with the like consent, testified in the same manner. The instrument of dissolution and all alterations therein shall be registered in the manner provided for the registration of rules, and shall be binding upon all the members of the society.

- (4) By winding-up, either voluntarily under the supervision of the court or by the court, if the court shall so order, on the petition of any member authorised by three-fourths of the members present at a general meeting of the society specially called for the purpose to present the same on behalf of the society, or on the petition of any judgment creditor for not less than fifty pounds, but not otherwise. General orders for regulating the proceedings of the court under this section may be from time to time made by the authority for the time being empowered to make general orders for the court. Winding-up.

Notice of the commencement and termination of every dissolution or winding up shall be sent to the registrar, and registered by him.

The effect of sect. 32 is considerably altered by sect. 8 of the 1894 Act (infra), as since the passing of that section Jurisdiction in winding-up is limited to a society the amount of whose capital paid up, or credited as paid up, does not exceed 10,000*l*.

57 & 58 VICT. c. 47.

8.—Notwithstanding anything in the Building Societies Acts, every society under those Acts shall be deemed to be a company within the meaning of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890. Application of 53 & 54 Vict. c. 63, to building societies.

Although the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, has been repealed by the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, yet sects. 286 to 291 of the said Act make it clear that the winding-up of building societies must be effected under the provisions of the 1908 Act, hence the jurisdiction is limited as above-mentioned. For winding-up the county court will be the county court to which the district in which the chief office or place of meeting for business of the society is situate is attached for the purpose of jurisdiction in bankruptcy (see Order XLI., r. 12, post, p. 1779).

Three-fourths, how computed.]—In computing the three-fourths mentioned in sect. 32, members who have given notice of withdrawal, but have not been paid out, must be counted (Sibun v. Pearce (C. A.), (1890) 44 Ch. D. 354; see also Pepe v. City and Suburban Building Society, (1893) 2 Ch. 311; 62 L. J. Ch. 501).

Costs.]—These in the winding-up are taxed according to the scale of costs for the time being in use in the Supreme Court (Order XLI. r. 12, post, p. 1779).

An Instrument of dissolution is not equivalent in its operation to a winding-up order. Upon such instrument advanced members who have covenanted to pay their advances by instalments cannot be compelled to pay forthwith the balances due from them (Kemp v. Wright, (1895) 1 Ch. 121; 64 L. J. Ch. 59).

Claims against Society.]—Many difficult questions arise in the course of a winding-up as to the claims admissible against the society and the various priorities of claimants, and also as to the distribution of assets when there is a surplus after payment of debts. The particular words used in the rules generally make provision as to the rights of members: subject to them the following rules appear to be supported by the authorities.

Debts. Loan to Society.]—The debts payable by the society must be satisfied first. The most important item under this head is that of loans. Prior to the Act of 1874 no society could borrow money so as to create a debt from the society unless its rules authorised borrowing (Ex parte Williamson, (1870) L. R. 5 Ch. 309). If the rules gave a limited or unlimited power to borrow, borrowing pursuant thereto created debts enforceable against the society (Murray v. Scott, (1884) 9 App. Cas. 519; 53 L. J. Ch. 745). The Act limits the power of borrowing (sect. 15), and any borrowing beyond that limit, or in societies not under the Act, beyond the limit imposed by the rules, or for purposes other than those authorised by the rules, will create no debt enforceable against the society, by action (Chapleo v. Brunswick Building Society (C. A.), (1881) 6 Q. B. D. 696; 50 L. J. Q. B. 372; Re Professional Building Society, (1871) L. R. 6 Ch. 856), or in a winding-up (In re Davies' Trusts, (1871) L. R. 12 Eq. 516; 40 L. J. Ch. 566; Cunliffe Brooks v. Blackburn Building Society, (1884) 9 App. Cas. 857; 54 L. J. Ch. 562). See also Sinclair v. Brougham and Another, [1914] A. C. 398; 83 L. J. Ch. 465. If, however, a lender whose loan is thus invalid can prove that his money has been applied in satisfaction of any valid debt of or claim against the society, he will be entitled to that extent to maintain his claim against the society (Cunliffe Brooks v. Blackburn Building Society, supra); or if the money has been advanced to members on mortgage, he will be entitled to the benefit of the security (Neath Building Society v. Luce (1889), 43 Ch. D. 158; 59 L. J. Ch. 3). Where money has been lent to a society without borrowing powers, the directors have no power, after incorporation under the Act of 1874, to create a debt against the society in respect of such money by the issue of any form of security under seal (Ex parte Watson, (1888) 21 Q. B. D. 301; 57 L. J. Q. B. 609). As to personal liability of directors, see Cross v. Fisher (C. A.), (1892) 1 Q. B. 467; 61 L. J. Q. B. 609.

Lenders when not Members.]—A mere lender, who lends his money and gets a bond or promissory note as security for it, does not thereby become a member of the society, and, generally speaking, he and other lenders will be entitled to be paid in full before any member is entitled to participate in the assets, whether the member has given notice to withdraw or not (Re Mutual Aid Building Society (C. A.), (1885) 30 Ch. D. 434; 55 L. J. Ch. 111; Murray v. Scott, supra; Sinclair v. Brougham and Another, supra). But a member might, it is believed, lend money in the ordinary way, and, in regard to it, be an outside creditor. See Sinclair v. Brougham, supra.

Deposit, etc., Members.]—In many societies, persons, under the name of deposit members, or without any particular designation, are allowed to pay money into the society from time to time and receive a kind of pass-book in which they are described as members. When lenders of this kind received “deposit” shares they were held to rank after outside creditors, but before unadvanced members (Murray v. Scott, supra).

Advanced Members.]—Advanced members are, in the absence of special provisions to the contrary in the rules, entitled to redeem and pay up all moneys due from them to the society pursuant to the rules, including fines, etc. (no interest chargeable on fines (Parker v. Butcher, (1867) L. R. 3 Eq. 762; 36 L. J. Ch. 552)), at any time either before or after a winding-up, and on so doing generally cease to be liable to contribute to any deficiency in funds (Parker v. Butcher, supra; Re Doncaster Building Society, (1866) L. R. 3 Eq. 158; Brownlie v. Russell, (1883) 8 App. Cas. 235; Tosh v. North British Building Society, (1886) 11 App. Cas. 489). Where the rules, however, provide for their participation in losses, they cannot redeem without paying their share of the losses (Re West Riding of Yorkshire Building Society (No. 1), (1890) 43 Ch. D. 407; 59 L. J. Ch. 197).

Unadvanced Members.]—Unadvanced members supply the fund to which creditors ultimately resort. The extent of their liability is generally limited by the rules, and such limit is expressly confirmed by the Act (sect. 14). Members of this class are, however, generally empowered to withdraw on giving a specified notice. When such notices have been given and have expired before the commencement of a winding-up, and the members have been paid out, they cease to be members and cannot be placed on the list of contributories (Re Sheffield Building Society, (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 470; 58 L. J. Q. B. 265, explained by Sibun v. Pearce, (1890) 44 Ch. D. 354); if not paid out they will generally be entitled to be paid out of the assets in priority to others who have not given notice, although there were no funds in hand for payment between the giving of notice and the winding-up (Walton v. Edge, (1884) 10 App. Cas. 33; 54 L. J. Ch. 362; Re Alliance Society (C. A.), (1885) 28 Ch. D. 559; 54 L. J. Ch. 540); unless, indeed, it has become patent that liquidation is inevitable, when notices then given are as inoperative as if given after the order to wind-up (Re Sunderland Building Society (No. 2), (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 394; 59 L. J. Q. B. 217. See this case also as to interest after notice).

34. Where the rules of a society under this Act direct disputes to be referred to arbitration, arbitrators shall be named and elected in the manner such rules provide, or if there be no such provision, at the first general meeting of the society, none of the said arbitrators being beneficially interested, directly or indirectly, in its funds; of whom a certain number, not less than three, shall be chosen by ballot in each such case of dispute, the number of the said arbitrators and mode of ballot being determined by the rules of the society; the names of such arbitrators shall be duly entered in the minute book of the society, and, in case of the death or refusal or neglect of any of the said arbitrators to act, the society, at a general meeting, shall name and elect an arbitrator to act in the place of the arbitrator dying, or refusing or neglecting to act; and

Section 34.

Court may order compliance with the decision.

Determination of disputes by registrar.

whatever award shall be made by the arbitrators or the major part of them, according to the true purport and meaning of the rules of the society, shall determine the dispute ; and should either of the parties to the dispute refuse or neglect to comply with or conform to such award within a time to be limited therein, the court, upon good and sufficient proof being adduced of such award having been made, and of the refusal of the party to comply therewith, shall enforce compliance with the same upon the petition of any person concerned. Where the parties to any dispute arising in a society under this Act agree to refer the dispute to the registrar, or where the rules of the society direct disputes to be referred to the registrar, the award of the registrar shall have the same effect as that of arbitrators.

Jurisdiction under this section is exclusive.

Practice.—Every application to enforce an award must be by plaint and summons, the party claiming the benefit of the award to be plaintiff, the party against whom the award has been given, defendant ; file particulars stating relief or order claimed (Order XLI. r. 4, post, p. 1778).

Determination of disputes by court.

35. The court may hear and determine a dispute in the following cases :—

- (1) If it shall appear to the court, upon the petition of any person concerned, that application has been made by either party to the dispute to the other party, for the purpose of having the dispute settled by arbitration under the rules of the society, and that such application has not within forty days been complied with, or that the arbitrators have refused or for a period of twenty-one days have neglected to make any award.
- (2) Where the rules of the society direct disputes to be referred to the court or to justices.

Determination to be final.

36. Every determination by arbitrators or by the court or by the registrar under this Act of a dispute shall be binding and conclusive on all parties, and shall be final to all intents and purposes, and shall not be subject to appeal, and shall not be removed or removable into any court of law, or restrained or restrainable by the injunction of any court of equity ; provided always, that the arbitrators, or the registrar, or the court, as the case may be, may, at the request of either party, state a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court of Judicature on any question of law, and shall have power to grant to either party to the dispute such discovery, as to documents and otherwise, as might now be granted by any court of law or equity, such discovery to be made on behalf of the society by such officer of the society as the arbitrators, registrar, or court may determine.

Members cannot, by giving notice to withdraw, sue in the ordinary courts (Walker v. General Building Society (C. A.), (1887) 36 Ch. D. 777; Huckle v. Wilson, (1877) 2 C. P. D. 410); if there is a "dispute" it must be disposed of according to the Act and rules. Where a member alleged that he was not bound by certain new rules and prayed the benefit of old ones, it was held that there was a dispute (Thompson v. Planet Building Society, (1873) L. R. 15 Eq. 333; 42 L. J. Ch. 364).

Section 36
Notes.

But every contention is not a "dispute" to which the Act applies, e.g., an action by a society against an officer to recover moneys received for and not paid over to the society (Municipal Building Society v. Richards (C. A.), (1888) 39 Ch. D. 372; 58 L. J. Ch. 8); or an action on a covenant in a mortgage deed (Western Building Society v. Martin (C. A.), (1886) 17 Q. B. D. 609; 55 L. J. Q. B. 382); or an action for redemption (Mulkern v. Lord, (1879) 4 App. Cas. 182; 48 L. J. Ch. 745. but this has been only since the passing of the Building Societies Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 41), s. 2, which defined the meaning of "dispute" in the Building Societies Acts, as follows:—

47 & 48 Vict. c. 41, s. 2.]—The word "disputes" in the Building Societies Acts or in the rules of any society thereunder, shall be deemed to refer only to disputes between the society and a member or any representative of a member, in his capacity of a member of the society, unless by the rules for the time being it shall be otherwise expressly provided; and in the absence of such express provision, shall not apply to any dispute between any such society and any member thereof, or other person whatever as to the construction or effect of any mortgage deed or any contract contained in any document, other than the rules of the society, and shall not prevent any society or any member thereof or any person claiming through or under him from obtaining in the ordinary course of law any remedy in respect of such mortgage or other contract to which he or the society would otherwise be by law entitled: Provided always that nothing in this Act shall apply to any dispute pending at any time before the passing of this Act between any such society or any member thereof or other person which before the passing of this Act shall have been actually referred or agreed to be referred to arbitration, or as to which the jurisdiction of any court of law shall have been adjudged to be excluded by any decision of any court of competent jurisdiction in any action or suit between the society and any member thereof or other person.

Practice on plaint for dispute.]—The dispute must be brought into court by plaint and summons (Order XLI. r. 1 (infra)). The aggrieved member or other person must be plaintiff and the society, either in its own name or in the name of such persons as are authorised by the Act to be sued on behalf of the society, defendants (Ib. r. 2), particulars must be filed with the required copies, which must state concisely the nature of the dispute referred and the relief or order claimed (Ib. r. 3).

The following section of the 1894 Act preserves the right of the arbitrators, or the court, or the registrar to refuse to state a special case.

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Arbitration Act, 1889, or in any other Act, the arbitrators, registrar, or court to whom a dispute is referred in pursuance of the Building Societies Act, 1874, shall not be compelled to state a special case on any question of law arising in the case, but may do so on the request of either party as provided in section thirty-six of the Building Societies Act, 1874.

[12 & 13 GEO. V. c. 35.]

Sect. 8 of this Act gives the county court power to modify agreements where any structural alterations are necessary to premises, to enable the occupier to comply with the Act, also to apportion the expenses of the same between the owner and occupier.

The section is as follows :—

Power of county court to modify agreements and to
expenses.

8.—(1) If any occupier of premises is prevented by any agreement from carrying out any structural alterations which are necessary to enable him to comply with the provisions of this Act, and is unable to obtain the consent to those alterations of the person whose consent is necessary under the agreement, he may apply, in accordance with rules of court, to the county court, and the court, after hearing the parties and any witnesses whom they may desire to call, may make such an order setting aside or modifying the terms of the agreement as the court considers just and equitable in the circumstances of the case.

(2) Where in any premises any structural or other alterations are required in order to comply with the provisions of this Act and the occupier alleges that the whole or part of the expense of the alterations ought to be borne by the owner, the occupier may apply, in accordance with rules of court, to the county court, and the court, after hearing the parties and any witnesses whom they may desire to call, may make such order concerning the expenses or their apportionment as the court considers just and equitable in the circumstances of the case, regard being had to the terms of any contract between the parties, or in the alternative the court may, at the request of the occupier, determine the lease.

 THE CHARITABLE TRUSTS AMENDMENT ACT, 1855 (18 & 19 VICT. c. 124). THE CHARITABLE TRUSTS ACT, 1860 (23 & 24 VICT. c. 136). THE CHARITABLE TRUSTS ACT, 1869 (32 & 33 VICT. c. 110). THE CHARITABLE TRUSTS (RECOVERY) ACT, 1891 (54 & 55 VICT. c. 17). THE CHARITABLE TRUSTS ACT, 1894 (57 & 58 VICT. c. 35).

Under the Act of 1853 four commissioners, a secretary, and two inspectors were appointed as Charity Commissioners for England and Wales, any two of whom might form a board to inquire into the condition and management of charities (sect. 9); and to require accounts and statements (sect. 10).

Jurisdiction.—Where any charity whose gross annual income does not exceed 50*l.* is established wholly or partially within the district of a county court, any relief, order, or direction which may be made by the Court of Chancery, the same relief, order, or direction may be made by the county court (sect. 32 of the 1853 Act as amended by sect. 11 of the 1860 Act). Where two or more county courts have concurrent jurisdiction with respect to the same charity, application shall be made to only one court, and the board may order (and such order will be conclusive as to the jurisdiction) to which court (sect. 34).

Title.—The county court has no power to determine the title to any real or personal property, or to determine the existence or extent of any charge or trust (sect. 41); but an action to recover arrears of rent-charge is not a proceeding within the section (Bassano v. Bradley, (1896) 1 Q. B. 645; 65 L. J. Q. B. 479).

Notice of legal proceedings by all persons, except the Attorney-General, to be given to the board, and no proceedings can be entertained except upon the certificate of the board (sect. 17).

The Official Trustees have an official seal, which must be officially and judicially noticed, and any company cannot refuse to enter the trustees on its books on the ground that they are a corporation.

Practice is set out in Order XLVIII., post, p. 1788, both as to proceedings by private persons and by the Attorney-General. By Rule 10 upon the requisition of the Charity Commissioners, and by Rule 11 on that of the Attorney-General, in proceedings instituted by him, the judge's note of the evidence shall be transmitted by the registrar. There is no rule requiring the judge to take a note, but it is expedient for him to do so. No court fees are payable in respect of proceedings under these Acts.

Appeal.—The board if dissatisfied with the order of the county court may remit the order for consideration or transfer the matter to the judge of a Chancery Court (sect. 37).

that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty's Attorney-General (acting ex officio), at any time within three calendar months after the making of any order by a county court under this Act, to lodge and commence and prosecute an appeal against such order, without giving any such notice or becoming bound as aforesaid, and every such last-mentioned appeal shall thereupon be allowed by the order of such county court, and shall have such other effect as any other appeal under this Act.

Section 39.

40. Where any order allowing an appeal has been made as aforesaid, the person thereby allowed to appeal shall within three calendar months present a petition to the Court of Chancery, setting forth the order appealed against and the order allowing such appeal, and praying such relief as the case may require; and upon the hearing of such petition the court may confirm, vary or reverse the order appealed against, or may remit such order to the county court by which the same was made, with or without any declaration or directions of the Court of Chancery in relation thereto, or may proceed in relation to the charity to which such order relates as in the case of an application under this Act to a judge of the Court of Chancery at chambers, and any judge of such court sitting at chambers or in open court may make or give any such orders or directions in relation to the matter of such order as he may see fit, or the court may make such other order in relation to the matter of any such appeal as to the court may seem just, and as might be made in the case of a suit regularly instituted, or a petition, as the case may require; and in case the party allowed to appeal do not within such three calendar months present such petition of appeal, the order against which such appeal was allowed shall be final; and in case any costs adjudged on any such appeal to be paid by the party allowed to appeal be not paid, such bond as aforesaid may be put in suit, and the money to be recovered on every such bond shall be applied to indemnify the charity estate or the person damnified, or otherwise in such manner as the justice of the case may require, and the court or judge by whom such appeal may have been heard shall think fit.

(Applied to county courts by Order in Council dated August 4th, 1879.)

[The above section, though repealed by the Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure Act, 1883, was preserved as to county courts by sect. 7 of that Act, and is now preserved by sect. 209 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925.]

NOTE.—Quære whether in county courts the proceedings should not now be taken under sects. 156 and 157 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and Order XXVII., r. 13. The case of Scarlett v. Hanson, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 213, decided under the above sect. 13, does not appear to be applicable to a seizure by a county court bailiff, having regard to the express provisions of sect. 156 of the County Courts Act, 1888, that the bailiff "shall sell," and to the general terms of Order XXVII., rr. 1 to 3.

COMMONS ACT, 1876.

[39 & 40 VICT. c. 56.]

By sect. 37 "a common" means any land subject to be inclosed under the Inclosure Acts, 1845 to 1868.

Jurisdiction, by sect. 30, in addition to any then existing remedy, was given to the county court within whose jurisdiction any common or part of a common is situate to grant an injunction against any illegal inclosure, encroachment or nuisance, or to make an order for the removal or abatement thereof.

Practice is provided for by Order L. r. 9, p. 1796.

An appeal to the High Court of Justice is given to any person aggrieved by the making or the refusal of an injunction or order. No rules of court have been made as to an appeal, which may be had in the same manner as in a case within the court's ordinary jurisdiction (see sect. 120 of the County Courts Act, ante, p. 144).

30. A county court within whose jurisdiction any common or part of a common is situate shall have jurisdiction to hear any case relating to any illegal inclosure or encroachment of or upon such common or part of a common respectively made after the passing of this Act, or to any nuisance impeding the exercise of any right of common arising after the passing of this Act, and to grant an injunction against such inclosure, encroachment, or nuisance, or to make an order for the removal or abatement of such inclosure, encroachment, or nuisance.

Any person aggrieved by any injunction granted or order made or refusal to grant an injunction or make an order by a county court in pursuance of this section may, on giving security for costs to the satisfaction of the county court, appeal to the High Court of Justice in a summary manner, or by special case or otherwise, as may be prescribed by rules of court to be made by the Supreme Court of Judicature in manner provided by the seventeenth section of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875.

The appellate court may on hearing the appeal reverse, modify, or confirm the injunction or order complained of, or remit the case to the county court from which the appeal lay, with instructions to deal with the case according to the directions given by the appellate court.

Where an appeal is lodged against the order of a county court directing the removal or abatement of any inclosure, encroachment, or nuisance, such order shall be suspended during such time as such appeal is pending.

Nothing in this Act contained shall abridge or interfere with any existing right of abating or otherwise preventing any illegal inclosure of or encroachment on any common, or any nuisance interfering with any right of common.

Until rules of court are made for the purposes of this section, an appeal may be had from the decision of any county court under this section in the same manner in which an appeal from the decision of a county court may be had in a case within its ordinary jurisdiction.

COUNTY COURT RULES. ORDER L. RULE 9.

Proceedings under section 30 of the Commons Act, 1876, shall be by action commenced by plaint and summons in the ordinary way. Particulars of demand must be filed in every such action, stating concisely the relief or order which the plaintiff claims.

under 39 & 40
Vict. c. 56.

THE COMPANIES (CONSOLIDATION) ACT, 1908.

[8 Edw. VII. c. 69.]

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Numerous important amendments to the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 are contained in the Companies Act, 1923 (18 & 19 Geo. V. c. 45). The new Act, with the exception of section 92, which places restrictions on offering of shares for subscription or sale, does not, however, come into operation until a day to be appointed by Order in Council and different days may be appointed for different purposes and for different provisions of the Act. At the time of going to press no Order in Council has been issued and the new Act cannot therefore be dealt with in this edition.

Jurisdiction.—Where the share capital of a company paid up, or credited as paid up, does not exceed 10,000*l.*, and the registered office of the company is situated within the jurisdiction of a county court having jurisdiction under this Act, i.e., a county court having bankruptcy jurisdiction, a petition to wind up the company shall be presented to that county court (sect. 131, sub-sect. 3).

"The Court."—By sect. 131, sub-sect. 5, the Lord Chancellor may by order exclude a county court from having jurisdiction under this Act, and has in fact by order dated May 19th, 1899 (post, p. 1975) excluded any county court not, for the time being, having bankruptcy jurisdiction from having jurisdiction under this Act, the district of such court so excluded from jurisdiction being attached to a county court having bankruptcy jurisdiction, hence "the court" (sect. 285) is the county court having bankruptcy jurisdiction within the district within which the registered office of the company is situated. The more important of the county courts have the bankruptcy jurisdiction within their respective districts.

Stannaries Court.—The county courts in Cornwall to which the jurisdiction of the Stannaries court has been transferred, are not, in the case of mining companies carrying on business solely in Cornwall, confined to companies whose capital does not exceed 10,000*l.*, but have exclusive jurisdiction whatever the amount of the capital (Dunbar v. Harvey, (1913) (C. A.) 2 Ch. 530; 82 L. J. Ch. 452; or wherever the registered office of the company is situate (sect. 131, sub-sect. 4), even when the company's powers were not confined to working mines in Cornwall (Radium Ore Mines, Ltd., (1914) 110 L. T. 57).

Powers of the Court.—The court has all the powers of the High Court (F. & E. Stanton, Ltd., (1928) 1 K. B. 464) and is not subject to prohibition when exercising such powers sect. 131, sub-sect. 6; In re The New Par Consols, Ltd. (No. 2), (1898) 1 Q. B. 669 (C. A.); 67 L. J. Q. B. 598; but has no jurisdiction to decide in the winding-up questions of title to property between a company and a stranger (Re Ilkeley Hotel Co., (1893) 1 Q. B. 248; 62 L. J. Q. B. 333); the court must enforce its judgment by means of its own officers (Re Bassett's Plaster Co., (1894) 2 Q. B. 96; 63 L. J. Q. B. 518).

Practice.—The Companies (Winding-up) Rules, 1909, govern the procedure in a winding-up by the court (see post, p. 1877); for the title of the proceedings and issue of summonses see Rules 11 et seq.; for service and execution of process see Rules 22 et seq.; for the form of a petition, the advertisement, service, and verification thereof see Rules 25 et seq.; for appointment of official receiver as provisional liquidator see Rule 31; for notice by persons who intend to appear, affidavits in opposition and reply, and for hearing of the petition see Rules 32—35; for the notice of the making of an order to the official receiver, for the drawing up and settling of the order, and for the transmission and advertisement of the order see Rules 37 et seq. In matters other than winding-up the practice is governed by Ord. XLIA., post, p. 1876

Transfer.]—The powers of transfer are very large, from the county court to the High Court, and from one county court to another county court having jurisdiction in the winding-up of a company (see Rules 42—47).

Appeal to High Court.]—It is provided by sect. 181 of the Act that subject to rules of court, an appeal lies upon a question of law from any order or decision in the winding-up of a company in the same manner and under the same conditions as in ordinary cases. The appeal is heard by a Divisional Court of the Chancery Division. Rules 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 16 and 17 of Order LIX. apply to such appeals, the words “office of the registrar companies winding up” being deemed to be substituted in Rule 11 for the words “Crown Office Department of the Central Office” (R.S.C. Order LVC.). If any question arises in any winding-up proceeding, which all the parties to the proceeding, or one of them and the judge, wish to have determined in the first instance in the High Court, the judge must state the facts in the form of a special case for the opinion of the High Court. The case and such proceedings as may be required, must then be transmitted to the High Court (sect. 133, sub-sect. 3).

The registrar’s taxation of costs may, at the instance of the Board of Trade, be reviewed by a taxing-officer of the High Court (Rule 185).

Appeal to County Court from Official Receiver.]—In various cases mentioned in the Act and rules, an appeal is allowed to the court against the act or decision of the official receiver. Where the official receiver is acting otherwise than as liquidator the appeal must be brought within twenty-one days from the time when the decision or act appealed against is done, pronounced or made (Rule 206).

No costs should be given against an official receiver personally, unless he has been guilty of misconduct; such an order is subject to an appeal to the divisional court (see In re Raynes Park Golf Club, Ex parte Official Receiver, (1899) 1 Q. B. 961; 68 L. J. Q. B. 529).

Matters to be heard in Court and Chambers.]—Rule 6 (1) provides what matters are to be heard in county courts in court, and Rule 6 (2) provides that any other matter or application may be heard and determined in chambers.

Public Examinations.]—An order for a public examination may be made ex parte (Re Trust, etc., Corporation of South Africa (C. A.), (1892) 3 Ch. 332; 62 L. J. Ch. 22); but not until the official receiver has made a report stating that in his opinion a fraud has been committed by some person in the promotion or formation of the company, or by some director or officer of the company in relation to the company since its formation, and the judge has, after consideration of the report, directed the attendance of such person (sect. 175).

The rules (see r. 62 and Form 31) provide that the examination shall be taken before the judge.

On any proceedings subsequently instituted under sect. 215, the verified notes of the examination are subject to all just exceptions admissible against those against whom the application is made, who, under sect. 175 and the judge’s order, could take part in the examination if fifteen days’ notice at least of the intention to use the notes be given before day of hearing. Every person against whom the application is made, shall be at liberty to cross-examine or re-examine the person whose examination is read (see Rule 70).

County Court Judges as Commissioners.]—County court judges who sit at places more than twenty miles from the General Post Office are commissioners for taking evidence in any winding-up (sect. 226).

Unregistered Companies.]—Part VIII., beginning at sect. 267, deals with the winding-up of unregistered companies.

Limited Partnerships established under the 7 Edw. VII. c. 24, are now treated as ordinary partnerships and fall under the Bankruptcy Act. The Limited Partnership (Winding-up) Rules, made under sect. 268 (1) (VII.) of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, are now obsolete.

Costs.]—In a winding-up by the county court, costs are allowed on the lower scale in Appendix N (see Annual Practice Supreme Court, Appendix N); taxation must be by the registrar in person (Rule 184).

Court Fees.]—See post, p. 1974.

PART I.

CONSTITUTION AND INCORPORATION.

9.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this section a company may, by special resolution, alter the provisions of its memorandum with respect to the objects of the company, so far as may be required to enable it—

- (a) to carry on its business more economically or more efficiently; or
- (b) to attain its main purpose by new or improved means; or
- (c) to enlarge or change the local area of its operations; or
- (d) to carry on some business which under existing circumstances may conveniently or advantageously be combined with the business of the company (a); or

- (e) to restrict or abandon any of the objects specified in the memorandum (b).

- (2) The alteration shall not take effect until and except in so far as it is confirmed on petition by the court.

- (3) Before confirming the alteration the court must be satisfied—

- (a) that sufficient notice has been given to every holder of debentures of the company, and to any persons or class of persons whose interests will, in the opinion of the court, be affected by the alteration; and

- (b) that, with respect to every creditor who in the opinion of the court is entitled to object, and who signifies his objection in manner directed by the court, either his consent to the alteration has been obtained or his debt or claim has been discharged or has determined, or has been secured to the satisfaction of the court:

Provided that the court may, in the case of any person or class,

Section 2. for special reasons, dispense with the notice required by this section.

See In re Hearts of Oak Life and General Assurance Co., Limited and Reduced, (1920) 1 Ch. 544.

(4) The court may make an order confirming the alteration either wholly or in part, and on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit, and may make such order as to costs as it thinks proper.

(5) The court shall, in exercising its discretion under this section, have regard to the rights and interests of the members of the company or of any class of them, as well as to the rights and interests of the creditors, and may, if it thinks fit, adjourn the proceedings in order that an arrangement may be made to the satisfaction of the court for the purchase of the interests of dissentient members; and may give such directions and make such orders as it may think expedient for facilitating or carrying into effect any such arrangement: Provided that no part of the capital of the company may be expended in any such purchase.

(6) An office copy of the order confirming the alteration together with a printed copy of the memorandum as altered, shall, within fifteen days from the date of the order, be delivered by the company to the registrar of companies, and he shall register the same, and shall certify the registration under his hand, and the certificate shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this Act with respect to the alteration and the confirmation thereof have been complied with, and thenceforth the memorandum so altered shall be the memorandum of the company.

The court may by order at any time extend the time for the delivery of documents to the registrar under this section for such period as the court may think proper.

(7) If a company makes default in delivering to the registrar of companies any document required by this section to be delivered to him, the company shall be liable to a fine not exceeding ten pounds for every day during which it is in default.

Section 30.

impose, so that not less than two hours in each day be allowed for inspection) be open to the inspection of any member gratis, and to the inspection of any other person on payment of one shilling, or such less sum as the company may prescribe, for each inspection.

(2) Any member or other person may require a copy of the register, or of any part thereof, or of the list and summary required by this Act, or any part thereof, on payment of sixpence, or such less sum as the company may prescribe, for every hundred words or fractional part thereof required to be copied.

(3) If any inspection or copy required under this section is refused, the company shall be liable for each refusal to a fine not exceeding two pounds, and to a further fine not exceeding two pounds for every day during which the refusal continues, and every director and manager of the company who knowingly authorises or permits the refusal shall be liable to the like penalty; and, as respects companies registered in England or Ireland, any judge of the High Court, or the judge of the court exercising the stannaries jurisdiction in the case of companies subject to that jurisdiction, may by order compel an immediate inspection of the register.

(3) On any application under this section the court may decide any question relating to the title of any person who is a party to the application to have his name entered in or omitted from the register, whether the question arises between members or alleged members, or between members or alleged members on the one hand and the company on the other hand; and generally may decide any question necessary or expedient to be decided for rectification of the register.

(4) In the case of a company required by this Act to send a list of its members to the registrar of companies, the court, when making an order for rectification of the register, shall by its order direct notice of the rectification to be given to the registrar.

Reorganisation of share
capital.

45.—(1) A company limited by shares may, by special resolution confirmed by an order of the court, modify the conditions contained in its memorandum so as to reorganise its share capital, whether by the consolidation of shares of different classes or by the division of its shares into shares of different classes:

Provided that no preference or special privilege attached to or belonging to any class of shares shall be interfered with except by a resolution passed by a majority in number of shareholders of that class holding three-fourths of the share capital of that class and confirmed at a meeting of shareholders of that class in the same manner as a special resolution of the company is required to be confirmed, and every resolution so passed shall bind all shareholders of the class.

(2) Where an order is made under this section an office copy thereof shall be filed with the registrar of companies within seven days after the making of the order, or within such further time as the court may allow, and the resolution shall not take effect until such a copy has been so filed.

See Nordberg, Ltd., In re, (1915) 84 L. J. Ch. 830.

Reduction of Share Capital.

Special resolution for reduction of share capital.

46.—(1) Subject to confirmation by the court, a company limited by shares, if so authorised by its articles, may by special resolution reduce its share capital in any way, and in particular (without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power) may—

- (a) Extinguish or reduce the liability on any of its shares in respect of share capital not paid up; or
- (b) Either with or without extinguishing or reducing liability on any of its shares, cancel any paid-up share capital which is lost or unrepresented by available assets; or

(c) Either with or without extinguishing or reducing liability on any of its shares, pay off any paid-up share capital which is in excess of the wants of the company, Section 46.

and may, if and so far as is necessary, alter its memorandum by reducing the amount of its share capital and of its shares accordingly.

(2) A special resolution under this section is in this Act called a resolution for reducing share capital.

See Meux Brewery Co., In re, (1919) 88 L. J. Ch. 14.

47. Where a company has passed and confirmed a resolution for reducing share capital it may apply by petition to the court for an order confirming the reduction. Application to court for confirming order.

48. On and from the confirmation by a company of a resolution for reducing share capital, or where the reduction does not involve either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid share capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up share capital, then on and from the presentation of the petition for confirming the reduction, the company shall add to its name, until such date as the court may fix, the words "and reduced," as the last words in its name, and those words shall, until that date, be deemed to be part of the name of the company : Addition to name of company of "and reduced."

Provided that, where the reduction does not involve either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid share capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up share capital, the court may, if it thinks expedient, dispense altogether with the addition of the words "and reduced."

49.—(1) Where the proposed reduction of share capital involves either diminution of liability in respect of unpaid share capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up share capital, and in any other case if the court so directs, every creditor of the company who at the date fixed by the court is entitled to any debt or claim which, if that date were the commencement of the winding-up of the company, would be admissible in proof against the company, shall be entitled to object to the reduction. Objections by creditors and settlement of list of objecting creditors.

(2) The court shall settle a list of creditors so entitled to object, and for that purpose shall ascertain, as far as possible without requiring an application from any creditor, the names of those creditors and the nature and amount of their debts or claims, and may publish notices fixing a day or days within which creditors not entered on the list are to claim to be so entered or are to be excluded from the right of objecting to the reduction.

(3) Where a creditor entered on the list whose debt or claim is not discharged or determined does not consent to the reduction, the court may, if it thinks fit, dispense with the consent of that

Section 49. creditor, on the company securing payment of his debt or claim by appropriating, as the court may direct, the following amount ; (that is to say,)—

- (i.) If the company admits the full amount of his debt or claim, or, though not admitting it, is willing to provide for it, then the full amount of the debt or claim ;
- (ii.) If the company does not admit or is not willing to provide for the full amount of the debt or claim, or if the amount is contingent or not ascertained, then an amount fixed by the court after the like inquiry and adjudication as if the company were being wound up by the court.

Order confirming deduction.

50. The court, if satisfied, with respect to every creditor of the company who under this Act is entitled to object to the reduction, that either his consent to the reduction has been obtained or his debt or claim has been discharged or has determined, or has been secured, may make an order confirming the reduction on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit.

As to what is sufficient evidence of consent by debenture holders, see Hydraulic Power and Smelting Co. Ltd., In re, (1914) 2 Ch. 187; 83 L. J. Ch. 753.

Registration of order and minute of reduction.

51.—(1) The registrar of companies on production to him of an order of the court confirming the reduction of the share capital of a company, and the delivery to him of a copy of the order and of a minute (approved by the court), showing with respect to the share capital of the company, as altered by the order, the amount of the share capital, the number of shares into which it is to be divided, and the amount of each share, and the amount (if any) at the date of the registration deemed to be paid up on each share, shall register the order and minute.

(2) On the registration, and not before, the resolution for reducing share capital as confirmed by the order so registered shall take effect.

(3) Notice of the registration shall be published in such manner as the court may direct.

(4) The registrar shall certify under his hand the registration of the order and minute, and his certificate shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this Act with respect to reduction of share capital have been complied with, and that the share capital of the company is such as is stated in the minute.

Minute to form part of memorandum.

52.—(1) The minute when registered shall be deemed to be substituted for the corresponding part of the memorandum of the company, and shall be valid and alterable as if it had been originally contained therein ; and must be embodied in every copy of the memorandum issued after its registration.

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one pound for each copy in respect of which default is made, and every director and manager of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to the like penalty. Section 52.

53. A member of the company, past or present, shall not be liable in respect of any share to any call or contribution exceeding in amount the difference (if any) between the amount paid, or (as the case may be) the reduced amount, if any, which is to be deemed to have been paid, on the share and the amount of the share as fixed by the minute: Liability of members in respect of reduced shares.

Provided that if any creditor, entitled in respect of any debt or claim to object to the reduction of share capital, is, by reason of his ignorance of the proceedings for reduction, or of their nature and effect with respect to his claim, not entered on the list of creditors, and, after the reduction, the company is unable, within the meaning of the provisions of this Act with respect to winding up by the court, to pay the amount of his debt or claim, then—

(i.) every person who was a member of the company at the date of the registration of the order for reduction and minute, shall be liable to contribute for the payment of that debt or claim an amount not exceeding the amount which he would have been liable to contribute if the company had commenced to be wound up on the day before that registration; and

(ii.) if the company is wound up, the court, on the application of any such creditor, and proof of his ignorance as aforesaid may, if it thinks fit, settle accordingly a list of persons so liable to contribute, and make and enforce calls and orders on the contributories settled on the list as if they were ordinary contributories in a winding up.

Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of the contributories among themselves.

54. If any director, manager, or officer of the company wilfully conceals the name of any creditor entitled to object to the reduction, or wilfully misrepresents the nature or amount of the debt or claim of any creditor, or if any director or manager of the company aids or abets in or is privy to any such concealment or misrepresentation as aforesaid, every such director, manager, or officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanour. Penalty on concealment of name of creditor.

55. In any case of reduction of share capital, the court may require the company to publish as the court directs the reasons for reduction, or such other information in regard thereto as the court may think expedient with a view to give proper information to the public, and, if the court thinks fit, the causes which led to the reduction. Publication of reasons for reduction.

Section 56.
 Increase and reduction of share capital in case of a company limited by guarantee having a share capital.

56. A company limited by guarantee and registered on or after the first day of January nineteen hundred and one, may, if it has a share capital, and is so authorised by its articles, increase or reduce its share capital in the same manner and subject to the same conditions in and subject to which a company limited by shares may increase or reduce its share capital under the provisions of this Act.

PART III.

MANAGEMENT AND ADMINISTRATION.

Definitions of extraordinary and special resolution.

69.—(1) A resolution shall be an extraordinary resolution when it has been passed by a majority of not less than three-fourths of such members entitled to vote as are present in person or by proxy (where proxies are allowed) at a general meeting of which notice specifying the intention to propose the resolution as an extraordinary resolution has been duly given (a).

NOTE (a).—See MacConnell v. E. Prill & Co., (1916) 2 Ch. 57; 85 L. J. Ch. 674.

(2) A resolution shall be a special resolution when it has been—

(a) passed in manner required for the passing of an extraordinary resolution; and

(3) At any meeting at which an extraordinary resolution is submitted to be passed or a special resolution is submitted to be passed or confirmed, a declaration of the chairman that the resolution is carried shall, unless a poll is demanded, be conclusive evidence of the fact without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of or against the resolution.

(4) At any meeting at which an extraordinary resolution is submitted to be passed or a special resolution is submitted to be passed or confirmed a poll may be demanded, if demanded by three persons for the time being entitled according to the articles to vote, unless the articles of the company require a demand by such number of such persons, not in any case exceeding five, as may be specified in the articles.

(5) When a poll is demanded in accordance with this section, in computing the majority on the poll reference shall be had to the number of votes to which each member is entitled by the articles of the company. Section 69.

(6) For the purposes of this section notice of a meeting shall be deemed to be duly given and the meeting to be duly held when the notice is given and the meeting held in manner provided by the articles.

Held, that this notice could be waived where there were only two shareholders who were both in fact present at the meeting (Oxley Motor Co., In re, (1921) 3 K. B. 22; 90 L. J. K. B. 1145).

70.—(1) A copy of every special and extraordinary resolution shall within fifteen days from the confirmation of the special resolution, or from the passing of the extraordinary resolution, as the case may be, be printed and forwarded to the registrar of companies, who shall record the same. LAW OF DISTRESS AMENDMENT ACTS,
1888, 1895, AND 1908.

[51 & 52 VICT. C. 21 ; 58 & 59 VICT. C. 24 ; 8 EDW. VII., C. 53.]

Jurisdiction.—By sect. 7 of the 1888 Act no person shall act as a bailiff to levy any distress for rent unless authorised so to act by either a general certificate, i.e., a certificate authorising the bailiff to levy at any place in England or Wales (Rules of 1920), or by a special certificate, i.e., a certificate specifying the particular distress or distresses to which it applies.

The applicant, whether for a general or special certificate must satisfy the County Court judge that he is a fit and proper person to hold a certificate.

Where the applicant is not a ratepayer rated on a rateable valuation of not less than 25*l.*, he may be required to give security in the case of a general certificate for 20*l.*, and in the case of a special certificate for 5*l.*, for the due performance of his duties.

Expiration and Renewal of certificates is provided for by the Rules of August 11, 1920, post, p. 1996.

Fees, Charges and Expenses which may be demanded by bailiffs are settled by Appendix II. to the Rules of 1920, post, p. 1999.

Fees to be taken by the Registrar are governed by the County Court Fees Order, 1925. Fee No. 87, post, p. 2000.

Power to Cancel the certificate is in the discretion of the judge (Act of 1895, s. 1), and he may forfeit the security, either in whole or in part, and direct the amount forfeited to be paid to the party aggrieved (Rules 16–20, p. 1997).

A general certificate can only be granted by a judge ; a special certificate may be granted either by a judge or by a registrar (Rules 3 and 4, post, p. 199).

The Act of 1908 (Law of Distress Amendment Act) (8 Edw. VII. c. 53) contains important general provisions exempting the goods of an under-tenant, a lodger, or any other person having no beneficial interest in the premises from liability to distraint at the instance of the superior landlord subject to complying with certain conditions (see Act, post, p. 1992).

As to rights of the Crown to distraint, see Macgregor v. Clamp, (1914) 83 L. J. K. B. 240 ; 1 K. B. 288.

51 & 52 VICT. C. 21.

7. No person shall act as a bailiff to levy any distress for rent unless he shall be authorised to act as a bailiff by a certificate in writing under the hand of a county court judge ; and such certificate may be general or apply to a particular distress or distresses, and may be granted at any time after the passing of this Act in such manner as may be prescribed by rules under this Act. (Residue of clause repealed, 58 & 59 Vict. c. 24.)

Section 7.

Distress to be levied by certified bailiffs.

A county court registrar may exercise the power of granting certificates hereby conferred upon a county court judge in cases in which he may be authorised to do so by rules made under this Act.

If any person not holding a certificate under this section shall levy a distress contrary to the provisions of this Act, the person so levying, and any person who has authorised him so to levy, shall be deemed to have committed a trespass.

Section 8.

Power to make rules.

8. The Lord Chancellor may from time to time make, alter, and revoke rules—

- (1) For regulating the security (if any) to be required from bailiffs;
- (2) For regulating the fees, charges, and expenses in and incidental to distresses; and
- (3) For carrying into effect the objects of this Act.

58 & 59 VICT. C. 24.

Power to cancel bailiffs' certificates.

1. A certificate granted to a bailiff by the judge of a county court under the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1888, may at any time be cancelled or declared void by a judge of that county court.

Penalty for acting without certificate.

2. If any person not holding a certificate for the time being in force under the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1888, levies a distress contrary to the provisions of that Act, he shall without prejudice to any civil liability be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding 10*l*.

Duration of certificates.

3. The power to make rules under the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1888, shall extend to making provision for fixing the duration of certificates granted, or to be hereafter granted, to bailiffs.

A distress made by the manager of a company on behalf of the company and without a certificate is illegal (Hogarth v. Jennings (C. A.), (1892) 1 Q. B. 907; 61 L. J. Q. B. 601).

The Acts apply to distresses under the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923; a general appointment will authorise a bailiff to act in any part of England and Wales (see Re Sanders, (1885) 54 L. J. Q. B. 331; and Rule 4).

If an uncertificated bailiff, in levying a distress, seizes the goods of a third party, the landlord who authorised the distress is liable in damages to the owner (Perring v. Emerson, (1906) 1 K. B. 1; 75 L. J. K. B. 12).

LAW OF DISTRESS AMENDMENT ACT, 1908.

[8 EDW. 7, c. 53.]

Section 1.

Under tenant, or lodger, if distress levied, to make declaration that immediate tenant has no property in goods
distrained.

1. If any superior landlord shall levy, or authorise to be levied, a distress on any furniture, goods, or chattels of—

- (a) any under tenant liable to pay by equal instalments not less often than every actual or customary quarter of a year a rent (a) which would return in any whole year the full annual value of the premises or of such part thereof as is comprised in the under tenancy, or
- (b) any lodger, or
- (c) any other person whatsoever not being a tenant of the premises or of any part thereof, and not having any beneficial interest in any tenancy of the premises or of any part thereof, for arrears of rent due to such superior landlord by his immediate tenant, such under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid may serve such superior landlord, or the bailiff or other agent employed by him to levy such distress, with a declaration in writing made by such under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid, setting forth that such immediate tenant has no right of property or beneficial interest in the furniture, goods, or chattels so distrained or threatened to be distrained upon, and that such furniture goods or chattels are the property or in the lawful possession of such under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid, and are not goods or live stock to which this Act is expressed not to apply; and also, in the case of an under tenant or lodger, setting forth the amount of rent (if any) then due to his immediate landlord, and the times at which future instalments of rent will become due, and the amount thereof, and containing an undertaking to pay to the superior landlord any rent so due or to become due to the immediate landlord, until the arrears of rent in respect of which the distress was levied or authorised to be levied have been paid off, and to such declaration shall be annexed a correct inventory, subscribed by the under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid, of the furniture, goods, and chattels referred to in the declaration.

Section 1.

Remainder of section repealed, see Perjury Act, 1911.

NOTE (a) —The word "rent" here means money, not another or contingent source of profit though it arises from the tenancy (Parsons v. Hambridge, (1916) 33 T. L. R. 117).

2. If any superior landlord, or any bailiff or other agent employed by him, shall, after being served with the before-mentioned declaration and inventory, and in the case of an under tenant or lodger after such undertaking as aforesaid has been given, and the amount of rent (if any) then due has been paid or tendered in accordance with that undertaking, levy or proceed with a distress on the furniture, goods, or chattels of the under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid, such superior landlord, bailiff, or other agent shall be deemed guilty of an illegal distress, and the under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid, may apply to a justice of the peace for an order for the restoration to him of such goods, and such application shall be heard before a stipendiary magistrate, or before two justices in places where there is no stipendiary magistrate, and such magistrate or justices shall inquire into the truth of such declaration and inventory, and shall make such order for the recovery of the goods or otherwise as to him or them may seem just, and the superior landlord shall also be liable to an action at law at the suit of the under tenant, lodger, or other person aforesaid, in which action the truth of the declaration and inventory may likewise be inquired into.

Penalty.

Section 3.

Payments by under tenant or lodger to superior
landlord.

3. For the purposes of the recovery of any sums payable by an under tenant or lodger to a superior landlord under such an undertaking as aforesaid, or under a notice served in accordance with section six of this Act, the under tenant or lodger shall be deemed to be the immediate tenant of the superior landlord, and the sums payable shall be deemed to be rent; but, where the under tenant or lodger has, in pursuance of any such undertaking or notice as aforesaid, paid any sums to the superior landlord, he may deduct the amount thereof from any rent due or which may become due from him to his immediate landlord, and any person (other than the tenant for whose rent the distress is levied or authorised to be levied) from whose rent a deduction has been made in respect of such a payment may make the like deductions from any rent due or which may become due from him to his immediate landlord.

4. This Act shall not apply—

Exclusion of certain goods.

8 Edw. 7,
c. 28.

- (1) to goods belonging to the husband or wife of the tenant whose rent is in arrear, nor to goods comprised in any bill of sale, hire purchase agreement, or settlement made by such tenant, nor to goods in the possession, order, or disposition of such tenant by the consent and permission of the true owner under such circumstances that such tenant is the reputed owner thereof, nor to any live stock to which section twenty-nine of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908, applies;
- (2) (a) to goods of a partner of the immediate tenant; (b) to goods (not being goods of a lodger) upon premises where any trade or business is carried on in which both the immediate tenant and the under tenant have an interest; (c) to goods (not being goods of a lodger) on premises used as offices or warehouses where the owner of the goods neglects for one calendar month after notice (which shall be given in like manner as a notice to quit) to remove the goods and vacate the premises; (d) to goods belonging to and in the offices of any company or corporation on premises the immediate tenant whereof is a director or officer, or in the employment of such company or corporation;

Provided that it shall be competent for a stipendiary magistrate, or where there is no stipendiary magistrate for two justices, upon application by the superior landlord or any under tenant or other such person as aforesaid, upon hearing the parties to determine whether any goods are in fact goods covered by sub-section (2) of this section. Section 4.

5. This Act shall not apply to any under tenant where the under tenancy has been created in breach of any covenant or agreement in writing between the landlord and his immediate tenant, or where the under tenancy has been created under a lease existing at the date of the passing of this Act contrary to the wish of the landlord in that behalf, expressed in writing and delivered at the premises within a reasonable time after the circumstances have come, or with due diligence would have come, to his knowledge. Exclusion of certain under tenants.

6. In cases where the rent of the immediate tenant of the superior landlord is in arrear it shall be lawful for such superior landlord to serve upon any under tenant or lodger a notice (by registered post addressed to such under tenant or lodger upon the premises) stating the amount of such arrears of rent, and requiring all future payments of rent, whether the same has already accrued due or not, by such under tenant or lodger to be made direct to the superior landlord giving such notice until such arrears shall have been duly paid, and such notice shall operate to transfer to the superior landlord the right to recover, receive, and give a discharge for such rent. To avoid distress.

7. Repealed by Statute Law Revision Act, 1927.

8. The Lodgers' Goods Protection Act, 1871, shall, wherever and so far as this Act applies, be repealed. Repeal of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 79.

9. In this Act the words "superior landlord" shall be deemed to include a landlord in cases where the goods seized are not those of an under tenant or lodger; and the words "tenant" and "under tenant" do not include a lodger. Definitions.

10. This Act shall not extend to Scotland and shall only apply in Ireland to a rent issuing out of lands or tenements situate wholly within the boundaries of a municipality or of a township having town commissioners. Act not to extend to Scotland.

11. This Act may be cited as the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908. Short title.

[FOR EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT, 1880, see PART IV., CHAPTER III.]

EMPLOYERS AND WORKMEN ACT, 1875.

[38 & 39 VICT. c. 90.]

Jurisdiction.]—In any proceeding before the county court in relation to any dispute between an employer and a workman (as defined by sect. 10) arising out of their relationship as such, the court may, in addition to any other jurisdiction, exercise all or any of the powers given by sect. 3 of the Act. But although the court may adjust and set off claims, there is no obligation on either party to bring them forward, and they may be dealt with in separate proceedings (Hindly v. Haslam, (1878) 3 Q. B. D. 481; see Stanton v. Styles, (1850) 5 Ex. 578; 19 L. J. Ex. 336; Jones v. Jones, (1874) 22 W. R. 577).

Practice will follow the ordinary procedure commenced by plaint and summons.

An employer whose workman absents himself from work may treat the contract of service as broken, or as subsisting and claim damages, but he cannot suspend the workman from work by way of penalty (Hanley v. Pease, (1915) 1 K. B. 698; 84 L. J. K. B. 532).

3. In any proceeding before a county court in relation to any dispute between an employer and a workman arising out of or incidental to their relation as such (which dispute is hereinafter referred to as a dispute under this Act) the court may, in addition to any jurisdiction it might have exercised if this Act had not passed, exercise all or any of the following powers; that is to say, Power of county court as to ordering of payment of money, set-off, and rescission of contract and taking security.

(1) It may adjust and set off the one against the other all such claims on the part either of the employer or of the workman arising out of or incidental to the relations between them, as the court may find to be subsisting, whether such claims are liquidated or unliquidated, and are for wages, damages, or otherwise; and,

(2) If, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, it thinks it just to do so, it may rescind any contract between the employer and the workman upon such terms as to the apportionment of wages or other sums due thereunder, and as to the payment of wages or damages, or other sums due, as it thinks just; and,

(3) Where the court might otherwise award damages for any breach of contract it may, if the defendant be willing to give security to the satisfaction of the court for the performance by him of so much of his contract as remains unperformed, with the consent of the plaintiff, accept such security, and order performance of the contract accordingly, in place either of the whole of the damages which would otherwise have been awarded, or some part of such damages.

The security shall be an undertaking by the defendant and one or more surety or sureties that the defendant will perform his contract, subject on non-performance to the payment of a sum to be specified in the undertaking.

Any sum paid by a surety on behalf of a defendant in respect of a security under this Act, together with all costs incurred by such surety in respect of such security, shall be deemed to be a debt due to him from the defendant; and where such security has been given in or under the direction of a court of summary jurisdiction, that court may order payment to the surety of the sum which has so become due to him from the defendant.

* * * * *

giving security.

8 A person may give security under this Act in a county court or court of summary jurisdiction by an oral or written acknowledgment in or under the direction of the court of the undertaking or condition by which and the sum for which he is bound, in such manner and form as may be prescribed by any rule for the time being in force, and in any case where security is so given, the court in or under the direction of which it is given may order payment of any sum which may become due in pursuance of such security.

The Lord Chancellor may at any time after the passing of this Act, and from time to time make, and when made, rescind, alter, and add to, rules with respect to giving security under this Act.

10. In this Act—

Definitions.

“Workman”

The expression “workman” does not include a domestic or menial servant, but, save as aforesaid, means any person who, being a labourer, servant in husbandry, journeyman, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, or otherwise engaged in manual labour, whether under the age of twenty-one years or above that age, has entered into or works under a contract with an employer, whether the contract be made before or after the passing of this Act, be express or implied, oral or in writing, and be a contract of service or a contract personally to execute any work or labour.

See Squire v. Midland Lace Co., (1905) 2 K. B. 448 ; 74 L. J. K. B. 614. See as to meaning of “workman” cases under Employers’ Liability Act, 1880, Part 4.

Set-off in
factory workers

11. In the case of a child, young person, or woman subject to the provisions of the Factory Acts, 1833 to 1874, any forfeiture on the ground of absence or leaving work shall not be deducted from or set off against a claim for wages or other sum due for work done before such absence or leaving work, except to the amount of the damage (if any) which the employer may have sustained by reason of such absence or leaving work.

EXPLOSIVES ACT, 1875.

(38 & 39 VICT. c. 17.)

PETROLEUM (CONSOLIDATION) ACT, 1928.

(18 & 19 GEO. 5, c. 32.)

By sect. 66 of the Explosives Act, 1875, the Secretary of State is empowered to appoint a county court judge, or such person as is named in the Act, to make, with the assistance of a government inspector or other assessor as a court, a formal investigation in cases of serious explosions.

Similar provisions are contained in sect. 14 of the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928, and apply to accidents involving loss of life or personal injury due to explosion or fire in or about premises licensed for the storage of petroleum spirit, or in or about the loading or unloading or conveyance of petroleum spirit (see Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928, sects. 13 and 14).

The inquiry under these Acts must be held in open court, and the court has all the powers of a court of summary jurisdiction when acting as a court in hearing informations for offences against the Acts as well as special powers in regard to the enforcing of the attendance of witnesses, production of documents and other matters; it has also power to enter and inspect any place or building.

THE FACTORY AND WORKSHOP ACT, 1901.

[1 EDW. VII. c. 22.]

Jurisdiction of the county court is founded on sect. 14, sub-s. 4, and is exclusive. This section, sect. 14, makes provision for factories being provided with adequate means of escape in case of fire. The jurisdiction of the county court is, as between the owner and occupier of the factory, to decide who should bear this expense, or the proportions in which it should be borne between them.

Section 14. Practice is governed by Order L., rule 34, post, p. 2011.

Appeal is by sect. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888 (see ante, p. 144).

Provision of means of escape in case of fire.

14.—(1) Every factory of which the construction was not commenced on or before the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and in which more than forty persons are employed, and every workshop of which the construction was not commenced before the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six, and in which more than forty persons are employed, must be furnished with a certificate from the district council of the district in which the factory or workshop is situate that the factory or workshop is provided with such means of escape in case of fire for the persons employed therein as can reasonably be required under the circumstances of each case, and if the factory or workshop is not so furnished it shall be deemed not to be kept in conformity with this Act; and it shall be the duty of the council to examine every such factory and workshop, and, on being satisfied that the factory or workshop is so provided, to give such a certificate as aforesaid. The certificate must specify in detail the means of escape so provided.

(2) With respect to all factories and workshops to which the foregoing provisions of this section do not apply, and in which more than forty persons are employed, it shall be the duty of the district council of every district from time to time to ascertain whether all such factories and workshops within their district are provided with such means of escape as aforesaid, and, in the case of any factory or workshop which is not so provided, to serve on the owner of the factory or workshop a notice in writing specifying the measures necessary for providing such means of escape as aforesaid, and requiring him to carry them out before a specified date, and thereupon the owner shall, notwithstanding any agreement with the occupier, have power to take such steps as are necessary for complying with the requirements, and unless the requirements are complied with, the owner shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one pound for every day that the non-compliance continues.

(3) In case of a difference of opinion between the owner of the factory or workshop and the council under the last foregoing subsection, the difference shall, on the application of either party, to be made within one month after the time when the difference arises, be referred to arbitration, and thereupon the provisions of the first schedule to this Act shall have effect, and the award on the arbitration shall be binding on the parties thereto, and the notice of the council shall be discharged, amended, or confirmed in accordance with the award.

(4) If the owner alleges that the occupier of the factory or workshop ought to bear or contribute to the expenses of complying with the requirement, he may apply to the county court having jurisdiction where the factory or workshop is situate, and thereupon the county court, after hearing the occupier, may make such order as appears to the court just and equitable under all the circumstances of the case.

[The residue of the section does not concern county court jurisdiction.]

The same words in sect. 7, sub-s. 2, of the 1891 Act have been held to give the county court jurisdiction, whatever may be the legal effect of the covenants, to apportion the expenses as between the owner and occupier as may seem just and equitable under all the circumstances of the case (Monk v. Arnold, (1902) 1 K. B. 761; 71 L. J. K. B. 441). Where the tenant covenants to pay "all parliamentary, parochial and other rates, assessments and impositions which may be imposed during the term," the landlord's remedy is restricted to a proceeding in the county court under this section, and he cannot sue in the High Court on the covenant (Horner v. Franklin (C. A.), (1905) 1 K. B. 479; 74 L. J. K. B. 291; impliedly overruling Shephard v. Barber, (1903) 67 J. P. 239).

Section 14.
Note.

The following rule of practice has been made:—

COUNTY COURT RULES. ORDER L., RULE 34.

An application to the court under sect. 14, sub-sect. 4, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, shall be made by action commenced by plaint and summons in the ordinary way. Particulars of demand shall be filed with every such application, stating concisely the relief or order which the plaintiff claims.

Application under 1 Edw. VII. c. 22, s. 14, sub-s. 4

FINANCE ACTS, 1894 AND 1896.

[57 & 58 VICT. c. 30; 59 & 60 VICT. c. 28.]

Jurisdiction.—By sect. 10 (5) of the 1894 Act, an appeal from the Commissioners is given to a person aggrieved as to the amount of estate duty claimed, to the county court for the county or place where the appellant resides, or the property is situate, in cases where the value of the property in respect of which the dispute arises, is alleged by the Commissioners not to exceed 10,000*l.*

The sole effect, so far as county courts are concerned, of the 1896 Act is by sect. 22 to add to sect. 10, sub-s. 5 of the 1894 Act a proviso giving, as of right, an appeal from the county court to the Court of Appeal under this section.

By sect. 14 of the same Act, any dispute as to the proportion of estate duty to be borne by any property or person may, where the amount is less than 50*l.*, be determined by the county court for the county or place where the person who is authorised or required to pay the estate duty under the circumstances mentioned in sect. 14, sub-s. 1 resides, or the property in respect of which the duty has been paid is situate.

Practice.—Any person who desires to appeal under sect. 10, sub-s. 5, must within one month from the date of the notification to him or his solicitor of the decision or claim of the Commissioners, deliver to them a written statement of the grounds of such appeal as provided by Order XLII. r. 2. By Rule 3 the Commissioners must deliver their reply within one month; if the Commissioners maintain their decision or claim in whole or in part, within one month from the date of the notification of such determination by the Commissioners, the appellant may proceed by filing a petition (see as to the proceedings, Order XLII., infra).

As to proceedings to determine a dispute under sect. 14, see Order XLII., r. 12, infra.

Appeal.—The appeal from the county court under sect. 10, sub s. 5. is direct to the Court of Appeal. but that does not seem to apply to sect. 14; the appeal as to matters under sect. 14 will be according to sect. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888. For Act of 1910, see post, p. 2013.

FINANCE (1909-10) ACT, 1910.

[10 EDW. VII. c. 8.]

As soon as might be after the passing of the said Act, the Commissioners must cause a valuation to be made of all land in the United Kingdom, showing separately the total value and the site value respectively of the land.

Jurisdiction.—By sect. 33, sub-s. 1, any person aggrieved may appeal against the determination by the Commissioners of the total or site value of any land, and also against the determination of such Commissioners as to other matters, to a referee appointed under the Act. Where the total or site value as alleged by the Commissioners does not exceed 500l., any person aggrieved by the decision of the referee may appeal to the county court for the county or place in which the appellant resides or the property is situate.

Practice.—The appellant must within one month from the date of the decision of the referee file a petition setting forth specifically the facts and contentions of law upon which he alleges the decision of the referee was erroneous, and giving an address at which documents may be served on him (Order XLII. r. 13, post, p. 2015). Rule 15 contains provisions as to the title of the petition and its service. By Rule 16, the respondent must, within ten days, state to what extent he admits the facts stated in the petition, and giving an address where documents may be served. By Rule 17, the respondent must, within twenty-eight days after service of the petition, serve upon the appellant a further notice stating the facts and the contentions of law upon which he intends to rely, and (if he thinks fit) requiring the appellant to admit those facts; when so required, the appellant must, within ten days, state to what extent he admits such facts; after ten days from the service of respondent's notice, all matters (except to the extent respectively admitted) shall be deemed to be at issue (Rule 18). The parties without leave of the judge cannot rely upon any facts or contentions of law other than those stated in such notice (Rule 20). Other rules provide for discovery and inspection of documents (Rule 21); for admission of certain material as prima facie evidence (Rule 22); for extension of time and for amendment of petition and notices (Rules 23, 24); and service of documents (Rule 26).

Security for Duty.—Where the Commissioners are respondents, and claim that duty is due from the appellant, they may apply (in accordance with rules as to interlocutory applications) for security for the duty claimed.

Appeal.—By sect. 33, sub-s. 4, any party has the right of appeal from the county court to the Court of Appeal.

Appeals to referees.

33.—(1) Except as expressly provided in this part of this Act any person aggrieved may appeal within such time and in such manner as may be provided by rules made under this section against the first or any subsequent determination by the Commissioners of the total value or site value of any land; or against the amount of any assessment of duty under this part of this Act; or against a refusal of the Commissioners to make any allowance or to make the allowance claimed, where the Commissioners have the power to make such allowance under this part of this Act; or against any apportionment of the value of land or of the duty or of any assessment or apportionment of the consideration on any transfer or lease made by the Commissioners under this part of this Act; or against the determination of any other matter which the Commissioners are to determine or may determine under this part of this Act:

Provided that:

- (a) An appeal shall not lie against a provisional valuation made by the Commissioners of the total or site value of any land except on the part of a person who has made an objection to the provisional valuation in accordance with this Act; and
 - (b) the original total value and the original site value and the site value as ascertained under any subsequent valuation shall be questioned only by means of an appeal against the determination by the Commissioners of that value where there is an appeal under this Act, and shall not be questioned in any case on an appeal against an assessment of duty.
- (2) An appeal under this section shall be referred to such one of the panel of referees appointed under this part of this Act as may be selected in manner provided by rules under this section, and the decision of the referee to whom the matter is so referred shall be given in the form provided by rules under this section and shall, subject to appeal to the court under this section, be final.

(3) The referee shall determine any matter referred to him in consultation with the Commissioners and the appellant, or any persons nominated by the Commissioners and the appellant respectively for this purpose, and may, if he thinks fit, order that any expenses incurred by the appellant be paid by the Commissioners, and that any such expenses incurred by the Commissioners be paid by the appellant.

Any order of the referee as to expenses may be made a rule of the High Court.

Whether the person assessed is the owner of the land in respect of which the assessment is made is a matter of appeal (Allen v. Commrs. of Inland Revenue, [1914] 2 K. B. 327; 83 L. J. K. B. 649). Section 33.

Costs.—To enable costs to be ascertained by taxation an order of the referee "that costs of appellant . . . be borne by the Commissioners" is good and can be made a rule of Court (Matthews v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue, [1914] 3 K. B. 192; 83 L. J. K. B. 1552).

(4) Any person aggrieved by the decision of the referee may appeal against the decision to the High Court within the time and in the manner and on the conditions directed by rules of court (including conditions enabling the court to require the payment of or the giving of security for any duty claimed), and sub-sections two, three, and four of section ten of the Finance Act, 1894, shall apply with reference to any such appeal: 57 & 58 Vict. c. 30.

Provided that where the total or site value as alleged by the Commissioners of the property in respect of which the dispute arises does not exceed five hundred pounds, the appeal under this section may be to the county court for the county or place in which the appellant resides or the property is situate, and this section shall for the purpose of the appeal apply as if such county court were the High Court, and in every such case any party shall have a right of appeal to the Court of Appeal.

(5) Provision shall be made by rules under this section with respect to the time within which and the manner in which an appeal may be made to a referee under this section, and with respect to the mode in which the referee to whom any reference is to be made is to be selected, and with respect to the form in which any decision of a referee is to be given, and with respect to any other matter for which it appears necessary or expedient to provide in order to carry this section into effect.

THE FRIENDLY SOCIETIES ACTS, 1896 AND 1908.

[59 & 60 VICT. c. 25; 8 EDW. VII. c. 32.]

All future copies of the Act of 1896 are directed to be printed with the corrections made by the 1908 Act. The necessary corrections have been made in the Act of 1896.

Jurisdiction is conferred in the following matters by the 1896 Act: (1) default of officers (sect. 55); (2) disputes (sect. 68); (3) amalgamation of registered societies (sect. 70); (4) dissolution of registered societies (sect. 78); (5) enforcing awards of dissolution (sect. 80, sub-s. 5); (6) recovery of moneys from members (sect. 31).

The Court in which to proceed is, as to a member claiming relief from an order of amalgamation, by sect. 70, sub-s. 7, the county court of the district within which the chief place of business of the society is situate, and this practice had better be followed in all cases where the society is sued; where the society sues, the safest course would be to sue in the court within the district of which the defendant dwells (Shea v. Society of St. Patrick, (1867) L. R. 3 C. P. 21; 37 L. J. C. P. 50).

Practice is determined by Order XLI. (see Building Societies Rules, ante, p. 1778), and by sect. 94, which provides for the description of both plaintiffs and defendants, and the service of the summons or other proceedings. The proceedings are to be by plaint and summons.

Trade Unions.—The provisions of The Friendly Societies Act, 1896, other than sects. 62 to 67, which replace sect. 28 of the 1875 Act, do not extend to any trade union; and the attempted registration of any trade union, either under that Act or The Industrial and Provident Societies Act, to be presently noticed, would be absolutely void (34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, s. 5). No application can be entertained, under the foregoing provisions, by the county court for the settlement of any dispute in any such society, nor can certain of their contracts be enforced in any court (Ib. sect. 4; Rigby v. Connol, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 482; 49 L. J. Ch. 328. (Provisions for the benefit of trade unions are made by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 22, and 46 & 47 Vict. c. 47)).

Where a society is registered as a trade union, and its main object is in restraint of trade, it would appear that no provisions of its rules for the benefit of members, similar to those of a friendly society, are enforceable in any courts (Old v. Robson, (1890) 59 L. J. M. C. 41; Burke v. Amalgamated Society of Dyers, (1906) 2 K. B. 583; 75 L. J. K. B. 533). Even the nomination provisions of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 22, do not enable the courts to enforce them (Crocker v. Knight, (1892) 1 Q. B. 702; 61 L. J. Q. B. 466). If the general objects of an unregistered society are for the relief of members, the mere fact that some of the rules are in restraint of trade will not make it illegal (Swaine v. Wilson (C. A.), (1889) 24 Q. B. D. 252; 59 L. J. Q. B. 76).

An action will not lie against a trade union, or any of its members or officials on behalf of themselves and all other members of the union, in respect of torts alleged to have been committed by or on behalf of the union (6 Edw. VII. c. 47, s. 4 (Trade Disputes Act, 1906)).

Appeal from County Court not provided for in the Act, but there is an appeal which is by motion (Wilkinson v. Jagger, (1887) 20 Q. B. D. 423; 57 L. J. Q. B. 254). A special case may be stated by the court (sect. 68, sub-s. 7).

59 & 60 VICT. C. 25.
